The will (dated Oct. 2, 1881) of Mr. Thomas Claridge Howland, late of Hardwick, near Aylesbury, Bucks, who died on March 18 last, was proved on the 6th inst., by Thomas Arthur Howland, the son, and Charles Claridge Howland and Robert Howland, the brothers, the executors, the value of the personal estate being over £49,000. The testator leaves to his wife, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Howland, £500, and the use of his household furniture and effects for life; a sum of £10,000 is to be invested, and the interest paid to her for life or widowhood; to each of his children by his late wife, and to each of his sons by his present wife, £4000; to each of his daughters by his present wife, and any after-born children, £3000; and legacies to his bailiff and his wife, and to a housemaid. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held upon trust for his wife for life, and then for all his children equally.

The will and codicil (both dated June 18, 1878) of Mr. William Bartram, late of Tonbridge, Kent, brewer, who died on March 17 last, were proved on the 4th inst. by the Rev. Harry Bartram, the nephew, and Samuel Harris, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to more than £33,000. The testator leaves to his wife, Mrs. Frances Sarah Bartram, £100 and his household furniture and effects, and £500 per annum while she remains his widow; and the residue of his estate, real and personal, upon trust for his children, Frank, Albert, William, Reginald, Lionel, Herbert, Walter, Marian, Gertrude, and Hortense. Provision is made so that his sons Reginald and Lionel may succeed to his business.

The will (dated Feb. 1, 1882) of Mrs. Charlotte Gunton Hughes, late of Saint Nicholas House, Upper Tooting, who died on Feb. 11 last, was proved on the 8th inst. by William Henry Bourke, the acting executor, the personal estate amounting to over £25,000. The testatrix bequeaths a complimentary legacy to her executor; and all her household furniture and effects to her late husband's nephew, Theodore William Hughes Hughes. As to the residue of her property, she leaves one-half to her said husband's nephew, and the other half upon trust for her three sisters, in thirds, and on their respective deaths for her nephews and nieces.

The will (dated Feb. 3, 1882) of Captain Hans Bask, J.P., D.L., LL.D., F.R.G.S., late of No. 21, Ashley-place, Westminster, who died on March 11 last, was proved on the 12th inst. by Wilfrid Hans Loder, the nephew, and Mrs. Annie Mary Moore, the daughter, the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £22,000. The testator leaves legacies, pecuniary and specific, to his sisters, nephews, and others; £5000, and his household furniture and effects, except such things as are specifically bequeathed, to his daughter, Mrs. Moore; and the residue of his real and personal estate upon trust for his said daughter for life, and then for his granddaughters, Lady Adela Meville Moore and Lady Rosalie Nina Moore.

The will (dated May 13, 1881) of Mr. Winchcombe Henry Howard Hartley, J.P., D.L., late of Lye Grove, Old Toddur, Gloucestershire, and of Bucklebury, Berks, who died on Oct. 31 last, has been proved at the Gloucester district registry by the Rev. Thomas William Watts and John Trenfield, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £3000. The testator leaves to his wife, Mrs. Emily Hartley, certain furniture and effects, all his wines, liquors, horses and carriages, and the residue of the personal estate; she is also to have the use of the mansion-house, Lye Grove, for life, in addition to the provision made for her by settlement; and legacies to relatives, executors, and servants, most of which are charged on his real estate. Subject to the legacies so charged, he devises his real estate to his four nieces, the daughters of his sister, the Countess de Palatino; but he provides that if either of his said nieces becomes a nun, or permanently attached to any Roman Catholic convent, she is to forfeit her share.

Letters of Administration of the personal estate of M. Auguste Rouzaud, late of 116, Belgrave road, Piccadilly, and of the Hôtel Continental, Paris, who died on Feb. 22 last, intestate, have been granted in London to Madame Christine Nilsson-Rouzaud, the widow, the personal estate in England being sworn under a nominal sum.

It has been resolved by the Leeds Town Council to combine with the Treasury for the purchase of the Coloured Cloth Hall as a site for a new post office and town improvements.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

Twelve months (including Christmas Number), £1 9s. 3d.
Six months, 11s.
Three months, 7s.

Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6d. for each Number, paid in advance.

ABROAD.

The yearly subscription abroad is 36s. 4d. (on thin paper, 32s.), with the following exceptions:—

To Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Mozambique, Penang, 11 Borneo Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, 41s. (thin paper, 31s.).
To Madagascar (except St. Mary), 45s. (on thin paper, 36s. 4d.).

Subscribers are specially advised to order the thick paper edition, the appearance of the engravings in the thin paper copies being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publisher, Office, 198, Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London, or by Post-Office Order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, George C. Lightfoot, of 198, Strand, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2248.—VOL. LXXX.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1882.

WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS (SIXPENCE. By Post, 6d.)

1. Lancer. 2. Guard of the Khedive.
7. Black Regiment of the Guard.

3. Officer in Campaign dress.
8. Officer of Infantry.

4. Circassian. 5. Zaptieh (Police Gendarme).
9. Cavalry of the Guard (Artillery).

6. Irregulars (Berber, Bedouin, Albanian, and Circassian).
10. Mounted Gendarme. 11. Infantry.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT: TYPES OF THE EGYPTIAN ARMY.—SEE PAGE 538.

BIRTHS.

On the 24th ult., at 21, Windsor-terrace, Newcastle, the wife of Mr. H. Atkinson, of a daughter.
On the 26th ult., at Castle Forbes, the Countess of Granard, of twins—sons.
On the 31st ult., at 18, Kensington-gate, the Lady Ada Scott, of a son.
On the 23rd ult., at 34, Charles-street, Berkeley-square, the Countess of Rocksavage, of a daughter.

DEATHS.

On the 24th ult., at 8, Via S. Sebastiano, Rome, Eliza, wife of John Gason, M.D., daughter of the late Sir John Greene, Recorder of Dublin, and sister of the late Baron Greave, of Dublin.
On the 25th ult., at 11, Albion-street, Hyde Park, after a long illness, Miss Power, sister of the late R. F. Power, Esq., M.D., aged 86. R.I.P.
On the 21st ult., at 4, Grosvenor-place, William Henry, Duke of Grafton, in the 63rd year of his age.
At Earl's Court, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge-Wells, the Lady Georgina Molyneux, wife of the Hon. Francis George Molyneux, and daughter of the Earl of Ashburnham, aged 77.
On the 23rd ult., at Granite Hall, Kingstown, the Hon. Mrs. More Ferrall.

* * The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.
Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF					THERMOM.		WIND.		General Direction.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. each morning.
	Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum, read at 10 P.M.	Minimum, read at 10 P.M.	Direction.	Force.
14	30.264	48.7	35.6	63	7	56.5	40.8	N.E. W.N.E.	340	0.000
15	30.230	45.7	34.3	72	7	51.9	39.3	N.N.E.	321	0.010
16	30.374	48.0	32.3	57	4	57.1	38.6	N.E. N.N.E.	317	0.000
17	30.419	48.2	37.3	69	2	58.7	38.8	N.N.E.	108	0.000
18	30.313	50.8	39.4	65	0	63.4	39.8	N.N.E. E.	176	0.000
19	30.071	53.1	38.5	60	4	61.7	41.2	E N.N.E.	487	0.000
20	29.929	51.1	36.2	60	2	60.5	46.0	N.E. N.N.E.	519	0.000
21	29.863	53.7	48.8	75	8	67.1	48.5	N.E. N.N.E. E.	284	0.010
22	29.747	58.7	47.7	69	7	71.8	46.8	E. S.E. E.	196	0.010
23	29.516	58.6	49.9	75	8	70.6	53.0	S.E. N.N.E. S.W.	318	0.045
24	29.458	56.2	48.3	71	8	64.2	51.8	S.W.	527	1.50
25	29.389	51.7	48.3	89	10	59.4	50.3	S.W. S.E. S.W.	346	1.89
26	29.818	57.7	48.6	74	7	61.5	52.7	S.W.	422	0.00
27	30.040	59.0	48.9	71	6	60.7	52.0	S.W.	395	0.000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m. :—

FROM MAY 14 TO MAY 20.
Barometer (in inches), corrected	30.38	30.23	30.32	30.42	30.36	30.150	29.948
Temperature of Air	51.4	49.1	51.5	50.7	52.8	56.3	57.9
Temperature of Evaporation	41.8	42.8	41.8	44.5	46.7	49.9	49.8
Direction of Wind	N.N.E.	N.E.	N.N.E.	N.N.E.	N.E.	E.	N.N.E.

FROM MAY 21 TO MAY 27.
Barometer (in inches), corrected	29.47	29.81	29.90	29.43	29.318	29.763	29.866
Temperature of Air	58.6	65.2	65.3	70.0	61.8	60.3	62.9
Temperature of Evaporation	44.9	48.2	48.9	53.0	52.0	53.9	56.9
Direction of Wind	N.N.E.	E.	S.E.	S.W.	S.E.	S.W.	S.W.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 10.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
17 13	40 4	23 4	43 5	10 5	33 6	0 8
27 16	56 7	29 10	49 8	27 6	56 7	23 9

BRIGHTON.—THE NEW PULLMAN LIMITED
EXPRESS, Lighted by Electricity, and fitted with the Westinghouse Automatic Brake, now runs between Victoria and Brighton.
From VICTORIA, WEEKDAYS, at 10.0 a.m. and 3.50 p.m.
From BRIGHTON, WEEKDAYS, at 1.20 p.m. and 5.45 p.m.
This new Train, specially constructed and elegantly fitted up by the Pullman Car Company, consists of four Cars, each over 36 ft. in length.
The Car "Beatrice" (Drawing-room) contains also a Ladies' Boudoir and Dressing-room.
The Car "Louise" (Parlour) contains also a separate compartment for a private party.
The Car "Victoria" contains a Buffet for Tea, Coffee, and other Light Refreshments, also a Newspaper Counter.
The Car "Maud" is appropriated for Smoking.
The whole Train is lighted by Electricity, the system being that of Edison's Incandescent Lamps in connection with Faure's system of Accumulators.
Lavatories are provided in each Car, and a separate compartment for servants is also provided in one of the Cars.
The Staff attached to this Train consists of a Chief Conductor, Assistant Conductor, a Page Boy, and Two Guards.
There is Electrical communication between the several Cars and the Conductors; a passenger travelling in any one of the Cars can therefore call the attention of the Conductor by pressing one of the small Electric discs.
There is a covered gangway communication between each Car, thereby enabling the Conductors to pass from Car to Car.

BRIGHTON.—EVERY SUNDAY.—A Cheap First-Class
Train from Victoria at 10.45 a.m., calling at Clapham Junction and Croydon. Day Return Tickets, 10s.
A Pullman Drawing-room Car is run on the 10.45 a.m. Train from Victoria to Brighton, returning from Brighton by the 3.50 p.m. Train. Special Cheap Fare from Victoria, including Pullman Car, 13s., available by these Trains only.
Tickets and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly, and 8, Grand Hotel-buildings, Trafalgar-square; City Office, Hays' Agency, Cornhill, also at the Victoria and London Bridge Station, City Office, (By order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.—SEASIDE.—TWO
MONTHS, FORTNIGHTLY, and FRIDAY or SATURDAY to MONDAY (First, Second, and Third Class) TICKETS are ISSUED by all Trains at REDUCED FARES to: YARMOUTH, LOWESTOFT, WALTON-ON-THAMES, WEELEY (for CLACTON-ON-SEA), HALWICH, DOVERCOURT, ALDEBURGH, FELIXSTOWE, SOUTHWOLD, HUNSTANTON, and CROMER.
For full particulars see Handbills and Time Tables.
London, April, 1882. WILLIAM BIRT, General Manager.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity")—The Times and "THE ASCENSION." "CHRIST LEAVING THE PREFTORIUM," "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

THE LION AT HOME. By ROSA BONHEUR.
This splendid chef-d'œuvre, the latest production of this celebrated Artist. Also the complete Engraved Works of Rosa Bonheur. Now on exhibition at J. H. LEFEVRE'S GALLERY, 12, King-street, St. James's, S.W. Admission, One Shilling. Ten to Six.

DE NEUVILLE'S SAVING THE QUEEN'S COLOURS
AT IRANDULA, THE LAST SLEEP OF THE BRAVE (these the property of the National Fine Art Association), and THE CEMETERY OF ST. PHILIP. NOW ON VIEW at Messrs. Dowdell's, 133, New Bond-street, two doors from the Grosvenor Gallery. Admission, One Shilling.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.
The FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN from Nine till Seven. Admission, One Shilling; Catalogue, 6d.—GALLERY, 63, Pall-Mall. H. F. PHILLIPS, Secretary.

THE EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of
PICTURES, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS M'LEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket.—Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
BRILLIANT SUCCESS OF THE
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS'
SUMMER ENTERTAINMENT.
Houses crowded to repletion at every performance.
THEIR EMILE VAUPEL,
the great Baritone, of the Imperial Opera, Berlin,
HAS ACHIEVED AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH ALMOST WITHOUT PRECEDENT.
His engagement can only be prolonged until September, when he has to return to Berlin.
The New Bill EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, SATURDAY, at Three and Eight.
Tickets and places at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall. No fee.

JUNE 15.—ST. JAMES'S HALL.—MR. GEORGE WATTS'
GRAND MORNING CONCERT.—Mesdames Christine Nilsson, Olga, Bergh, Sembrich, and Marie Røze; Mr. Edward Lloyd, Messart, Foll, and Le Reszke; Mr. Pianoforte, Madame Sophie Menter and Mr. Willem Coenen. Violoncello, Mons. Hollman. Conductors—Sir Julius Benedict, Signor Randegger, Mr. Parker, and Mr. Kingsbury. Tickets at Cramer's, 20, Regent-street; and the usual Agents.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT.
Managers, Messrs. Alfred Reed and Corney Grain.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place. Monday, one 5 first time of NODDY'S FALUT by Arthur Law; Music by H. Sullivan; and next time of SMALL and EARLY, and New Musical Sketch by Mr. Corney Grain. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight; Thursday and Saturday at Three. Admission, 1s. and 2s.; Stalls, 3s. and 5s. No fee. A New Entertainment will be produced on Monday, June 18.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.

Madame Adeline Patti.—SATURDAY, JUNE 3, IL BARBIERE DI SIVIGLIA (first time this season). Rosina, Madame Adeline Patti; Figaro, Signor Cologni; Basilio, Signor de Reszke; and Almaviva, Signor Nicolini. Conductor, Signor Belzoni.
Madame Sembrich.—Monday, June 5, IL SERAGLIO—Madame Sembrich, Madame Valeria, Mons. Gaidard, and Signor Frapoll.
Madame Pauline Lucas.—Tuesday, June 6, L'AFRICAIN. Madame Pauline Lucas, Madame Valeria, Signor Pambolini, and Mons. Sylva.
Doors open at Eight o'clock; the Opera commences at half-past.
The Box-Office, under the Portico of the Theatre, is open from Ten till Five. Orchestral Stalls, 15s.; Side Boxes on the first tier, 15s.; Upper Boxes, 12 12s. 6d.; Gallery Stalls, 10s.; Pit Tickets, 7s.; Amphitheatre Stalls, 10s. 6d. and 5s.; Amphitheatre, 2s. 6d.

LYCEUM.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.
Every Evening, at Eight, ROMEO AND JULIET. R. Mrs. Mr. Irving; Juliet, Miss Ellen Terry; Nurse, Mrs. Stirling; Messrs. Fernandez, Charles, Howe, &c. Morning Performances, Saturdays, June 3 and 10, at Two o'clock. Box-office (Mr. Harsh), Ten to Five. Benefit of Miss Ellen Terry's 41.0th Performance of "Romeo and Juliet," June 21.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1882.

The Eastern Question has assumed a phase which twelve-months ago would have been deemed incredible. Then the Great Powers were bringing all their pressure to bear upon the Sultan to oblige him to cede to the comparatively puny Kingdom of Greece the fertile province of Thessaly; and eventually, with much difficulty, they succeeded. Now—so changed is the complexion of events—the Western Powers are compelled, by dire necessity, to invite the Padishah to take upon himself the rôle of a deus ex machina, in order to save Egypt from anarchy. No such curious political complication has arisen in modern history, nor is it possible as yet to pierce its mysteries. Here is a country lately prospering under the equitable regime of a Khedive leaning on the support of France and England, whose representatives had assisted to restore the disordered finances of Egypt, abate corruption, and mitigate the lot of the down-trodden and patient Fellahs. Suddenly arises a military adventurer with a peculiar audacity and cunning such as Oriental races can alone produce, who has been able, step by step, and in the face of a wondering world, to establish, without let or hindrance, and out of the most contemptible materials, a military despotism, which threatens to depose the Khedive, and which defies, with impunity, the Western Powers and their ironclad fleet. The secret of Ourabi's success is an open one. Although in other respects a commonplace man, he has, to a consummate degree, the art of playing off rival influences against each other. By means of the watchword, "Egypt for the Egyptians," he has been able to raise up a so-called national party, consisting of notables and ex-officials, who are envious at seeing the chief posts in the civil service filled by foreigners. Promotion by wholesale of petty military officers, with tempting pay, has enabled him to bribe the army to further his purpose. Thus backed up, he has been able to set at naught the Protecting Governments, whose hands are paralysed by the jealousies of the other Powers of Europe. Their ultimatum he contemptuously disregards; their ships of war at Alexandria are to him an idle menace; and the Khedive is a prisoner in his palace at Cairo, his life and throne being absolutely at the mercy of Ourabi and his followers.

The further development of this truly Oriental drama will be watched with profound interest. Direct intervention on the part of France and England, either combined or separately, is out of the question, because their interests in Egypt diverge. Great as is the emergency, they neutralise each other; and even if they were to act together they would soon disagree, and a European war might be the result. Thus by an exhaustive process they are obliged, as the least menacing of many courses, to call in the Turk. This, however, does not greatly diminish the perplexities of the situation. The Sultan, who possibly has been at the bottom of all the complications that have arisen, is ready enough to intervene, but chiefly to serve his own objects. He has no idea of restoring Western ascendancy, but he has a feverish ambition to recover a lost province. The more urgent the need for his help, the less he is disposed to listen to guarantees, or to adopt the simple expedient of summoning Ourabi and the other military ringleaders to Constantinople. When a few Turkish regiments are encamped at Cairo, and have put down or made terms with the rebels, who is to order them back to Constantinople, and what is to prevent the Suzerain of Egypt from exchanging that barren title for one that carries with it the reality of Imperial sovereignty? As it is with Ourabi Pasha, so with Abdul Hamid. Both think they see their way to take advantage of the situation for their own aggrandisement. Jealous Italy rejoices in the difficulties of the Western Powers; Germany views with calm complacency the humiliation of France in the East, which makes her own Rhine frontier more secure; and Austria is not sorry to assist in lowering the prestige of England in the Mediterranean, and to pay off her grudges against the Gladstone Administration. Who can predict what will be the outcome of these conflicting interests? The European Concert is, for the present at least, broken up; and its immediate result, if not speedily restored, may be anarchy and bloodshed in Egypt, or even the spasmodic revival of that Mohammedan Power which a year or two ago seemed doomed to speedy extinction.

While this serious Egyptian crisis has been agitating the Cabinets of Europe, and sorely perplexing our Foreign Office, the British people have been enjoying a brilliant Whitsuntide holiday. Magnificent weather has favoured this season of popular recreation, and has enabled hundreds of thousands, who under more adverse circumstances would be restricted to the dullness and coarse enjoyments of urban life, to hold converse with Nature in the bloom of her loveliness. The orderly behaviour, the general sobriety, and the comfortable appearance of the multitudes who, on the most attractive of Bank holidays, poured out of London into the surrounding country for a day's recreation, has been the theme of general remark. In such phenomena we find the sure indications of national progress, and of the growing refinement of national tastes. We have reason to be thankful for railway and other facilities which enabled not less than 120,000 persons, mostly from the dingy region of the East-End, to hold a monster picnic amid the sylvan scenery of Epping Forest, now secure against all encroachment and consecrated to their use for all time. To the quiet enjoyment of this brief Whitsuntide vacation there have been, in a general sense, no drawbacks. Trade and commerce, if not advancing "by leaps and bounds," are active and healthy. No great interests are suffering depression. Our agriculturists are hopeful—almost sanguine. From the beginning of 1882 the weather has been exceptionally favourable to the cultivators of the soil. It is many years since the crops at this season looked so promising, or the skyey influences were so auspicious. A good hay harvest is almost assured; a bountiful grain crop should, according to present appearances, reward the toil of our husbandmen.

The Bank Holiday was a red-letter day in the local annals of the citizens of Leicester, one of the great manufacturing centres of the Midland Counties, which is not less famed for its rapid growth and advanced political creed than for its venerable traditions stretching back through the vista of centuries. With these historical incidents, and the great modern improvements, associated with Leicester, our diligent readers are familiar. On Monday the Prince and Princess of Wales visited the town in order to open the Abbey Park—a place of recreation of some sixty acres, constructed by the Corporation of Leicester at a cost of nearly £50,000, upon what was once little better than a swamp on the banks of the Soar, and now raised and laid out with exquisite taste, including an ornamental lake, for the benefit of the teeming population. Hard by the park are the ruins of the abbey where Cardinal Wolsey desired to "lay his bones," and died when wearied with the world and broken-hearted at the withdrawal of the favour of his exacting Sovereign. The reception of the Prince and Princess on Monday was (as his Royal Highness himself testified) "magnificent and enthusiastic," and was favoured by brilliant weather and the occurrence of a general holiday. Every section of the community, the operatives included, cordially combined—toiled, we may almost say—to make the festival successful, with the result that Whit Monday, 1882, will ever be associated in local memory with the opening of the Abbey Park and with the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales, under whose gracious auspices that place of recreation was so happily inaugurated. His Royal Highness rendered a similar service at Great Yarmouth on Wednesday, when he officiated at the opening of the new municipal buildings, and was received with as much popular enthusiasm as at Leicester.

It is to be hoped that the brief holiday enjoyed by our legislators will invigorate them for the remaining and probably the most arduous work of the Session. The prospect of realising the Ministerial programme of February has, week by week, diminished, and is now almost extinguished. Ireland has, thus far, absorbed the Session; and Ireland will claim a monopoly of public interest till the heat of summer relaxes Parliamentary activity. The twin Irish measures of the Government, to which recent events have given an imperative urgency, are the Prevention of Crime Bill and the Rent Arrears Bill. The former is now being discussed in Committee, with little prospect of emerging from that stage before the end of June. The latter has passed its second reading, and its progress depends upon the forbearance of the Opposition, but it will hardly be taken up again till the bill for repressing secret societies and outrages has been substantially accepted by the House of Commons. In the one case, obstruction may delay, but will not prevent a legislative decision. In the other, the Upper House will no doubt be critical without taking the responsibility of rejecting remedial legislation. Both Assemblies will probably be guided, to a great extent, by the course of events. There is undoubtedly a pause in the activity of the "Moonlight" conspiracy. Irish outrages are less frequent. This may be owing to the hopes raised by the popularity and tact of Earl Spencer and his Chief Secretary, or by the strenuous efforts of Mr. Parnell and his colleagues to repress criminal enterprises, or by the healthy revulsion of feeling caused by the recent terrible assassinations. Whatever the cause, it is a welcome relief—a breathing time, during which measures may be perfected under the auspices of Colonel Brackenbury and his colleagues for the more effectual detection and repression of crime, and evictions, for the most part, be stayed until legislation has provided adequate means for reconciling the conflicting interests of landlords and tenants.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

So on Friday, the Twenty-Sixth of May, I went to the Oaks on the top of a Coach. Is that a rhyme? Scarcely; yet there have been worse ones, ere now, in print. "Not for Joseph, If he knows it," for example. At all events, I proceeded to the "Ladies' Race" on the summit of a four-in-hand. Our noble "whip" "tooled the drag"—I believe that is the correct expression—with easy skill and facile dexterity; "feathering his oars"—stop, stop! "feathering his oars" belongs to the ballad of the "Jolly Young Waterman"—I mean that our whip (and genial host) "handled the ribbons" (that must be correct) in the most approved and "down the road" style. The "four spanking tits" with "streaming tails"—or should they be called "prads?"—did their work capably. We made the drive down in less than two hours, and returned to town without having been peppered with pea-shooters or mobbed as welchers. And when I tell you that Mr. John Lawrence Toole, Mr. Lionel Brough, and Mr. John Clayton were of the company, you may imagine that we were a Merry Family, and that we all laughed consumedly.

Some animal with a German name, I believe, won the Oaks; but of that I am not quite certain. I know that I put my money (it was very little) on a four-legged Something, and lost it. I mean my money. I always do. Nor think me insincere in saying that I know nothing about the race itself. I was looking at the lobster salad.

As for the technology of four-in-hand driving, one is apt to get "a little mixed" after reading, as I have been doing, a wonderful description, in the New York Herald, of a trip made by the New York Coaching Club—"a Lively Spin from the Brunswick to Mountain Side Farm, across the Hackensack Lowlands and through the Ramapo Valley." The drag started from the Hotel Brunswick, New York City; and the company seemed to be of the élite of the "horsey" aristocracy—comprising Francis R. Rives, J. R. Roosevelt, Colonel William Jay, Fairman Rogers, Augustus Schermerhorn, Colonel de Lancey Kane, Pierre Lorillard, and Hugo Fritsch.

"Sharp at half-past nine Colonel Jay, President of the Club, took the reins. Evans, the guard, sounded the horn; the hostlers (sic) sprang from the horses' heads, and off they went." At the bottom of Christopher-street the coach was shipped on board the ferry-boat, and in due time was landed on the shore of the State of New Jersey. It "spins" through Jersey City and Hoboken, and "rolls" through the Hackensack Valley.

This is a stopping place. The dozen coaching men have a few minutes to stretch their legs. There is a little pleasntry, a little gossip over road and rein, and a little preparation for the third stage. The animals for it excite admiration as they are led out. The pair of powerful wheelers, bay and chestnut, are fully sixteen hands high. Two well-bred Kentuckians, black and chestnut, of good form and fine bold action are to lead. Mr. Hugo Fritsch is now the whip, and the horses respond handsomely to his handling. Through Hackensack the big, strong team hoof the streets quite spryly. The coach is a stranger there, and the people swarm out to make a wonder of it. There are cries of surprise, a hearty cheer or two, a clapping of hands, and the Pioneer dashes through the town, leaves the straggling suburbs behind, and plunges into the mud of as mean a road for such work as even New Jersey can boast. That soft earth, the colour of copper, which is the terror of the wayfarer on this soil, abounds here in its slimiest and muddiest aspect. Ruts and sloughs are frequent, and the constant downpouring of rain for the last few days has made the road heavier even than ever.

"Hoofing the streets quite spryly" is good.

I am informed on unimpeachable authority that the game of "Dumb Crambo" is all the rage just now in Polite Society. The clever little vignettes in Punch by "Dumb Crambo, Junior," may have had some hand in the revival of D. C. I mention it here for the reason that I have asked at least twenty ladies and gentlemen in Society how Dumb Crambo is played, and no two of the number have been able to agree as to the exact manner of conducting it. But I have ferreted out the Rules for Crambo, as laid down in a book called "Games and Sports," published in 1837, and written by the indefatigable Mr. Donald Walker, the author of "Manly Exercises" and "Exercises for Ladies." The book is illustrated with delicate little outline engravings, and is dedicated to Miss Anna Maria Birkbeck—the daughter, I apprehend, of the philanthropic Dr. Birkbeck.

Dumb Crambo, according to Walker, is played thus. The players are seated in a circle: no table occupying the intermediate space so as to intercept the view of all the parties. The person who begins the game then pronounces aloud a word of a single syllable. The person on his right must find another monosyllable to rhyme with the first one; but if he pronounces the word he forfeits:—he must act it. "He accordingly rises, and by signs or actions must so clearly express the thing signified that all the other players understand it. He must not be articulate; but he may eke out his pantomime by inarticulate sounds. Thus, if the word to which he has to find a rhyme be 'dog' or 'pig,' he may either bark or grunt to signify that he is acting the part of a dog or of a pig." Each player in succession finding a new rhyme acts similarly, concluding with the person who first gave the word; and this lady or gentleman would do well to keep in reserve some uncommon word which is not likely to be discovered by some one else. When the party is numerous, the first player is nearly always forestalled in the rhyme which he is keeping in reserve, and in that case he has to pay forfeit; whereat is great sport.

The better the mimetic actor, the better the Dumb Crambo player. Mrs. Baucroft, I should say, would play consummately well. I had a brief Dumb Crambo siance the other evening, and much fun was made out of the rhymes with "meek." A gentleman who made the round of the company, staring impudently in everybody's face, and narrowly inspecting the rings on one of the ladies' fingers, scored an immediate success in "cheek;" another who furtively pocketed a spoon was saluted with an unanimous cry of "sneak;" but a too ambitious individual who tried to act the word "Greek" ignominiously failed, and was so condemned to pay forfeit. He turned down his shirt collar, and tried to look Byronic; but this only elicited a cry of "Oscar Wilde!" He "made believe" to throw dice, and to conceal one of the dice up his sleeve; but the company only said "gambler," and one young person was heard to murmur, "thimble-rigger." He told me afterwards, almost with tears in his eyes, that he should have succeeded admirably had there been any children in the house, as he could then have borrowed a short white petticoat, girt with which, in the guise of a sustanella, he would have been recognised as a "Greek" at once.

I read in the World :—

Our old heraldic friend, the "bar sinister," which appeared for the first time in the pages of "Ivanhoe," and has been made much of in later years by second-rate novelists, has turned up again for the latest and, it is to be hoped, for the last time, in the columns of the Daily News in a description of the armorial bearings of a deceased Duke, one of whose maternal ancestors was—well, no better than she ought to be. As a bar is a horizontal band across a shield, it is obvious that it cannot, without absurdity, be described as either "dexter" or "sinister;" the charge to which the writer meant to refer being of course a "bend," which crosses the shield diagonally, and denotes legitimacy or illegitimacy, by being drawn from the right or left upper corner to the opposite lower corner. Such "beggary elements" may be beneath the notice of the severely democratic D. N.; but why, then, can it not leave them alone? There is nothing dignified in inaccuracy.

But there is something more undignified, my "Atlas," while attempting to correct inaccuracy, in falling into another and even more comical blunder. The "bend" which "crosses the shield diagonally" does not by any means "denote legitimacy or illegitimacy by being drawn from the right or left upper corner to the opposite lower corner." The Bend Sinister is, equally with the Bend, the Chief, the Pale, the Fess, the Bar, the Chevron, the Cross, and the Saltier or Saltire, one of the "Honourable Ordinaries" of Heraldic Charges. Illegitimacy, on the other hand, is denoted by a "baton sinister," of which the dimensions are one half of a "scarp"—called by old armorists a "scrape"—which "scarp" is one half of a "bend." The peculiarity of the "baton sinister" is that it does not extend itself to the extremities of the field; but remains in diagonal isolation on the "Fess Point," blurring, defacing, or "debruising" by implication the entire achievement. It touches neither the base nor the chief point: ergo, my "Atlas," it cannot be a "bend."

Mem.: A "baton sinister" may not be borne of any of the metals, save by the sons of Princes.

The incidental mention in last week's "Echoes" of "The Whole Duty of Man" (who wrote it?) as a book which I could not find, but which I believed that I possessed, has brought me many letters. "W. S. H." (Walthamstow) says that he has a copy published in 1821 by W. Bent, which has a preface dated 1747; and my correspondent has a note to the effect that the "W. D. of M." was written by the Earl of Coventry; but he cannot now remember whence he obtained the information. "F. C." (Bishop's Waltham) kindly offers to lend me his copy of the "W. D. of M.," published in 1811, and the author of which was (so my correspondent innocently thinks) the Rev. H. Venn, A.M., Rector of Huddersfield.

"T. T. L." has a copy of this much reprinted book, published by C. and J. Rivington in 1828, and issued as "A Premium by the Association for Discountenancing Vice;" and "T. G. R." (Kilkenny) writes, on a post-card (this is a "cock-sure" gentleman), "If you really want to know the name of the author of 'The Whole Duty of Man,' I think I am correct in giving it as Venn. Yes; I really want to know; and I do not think the author's name was Venn."

My own copy I had only temporarily mislaid. I say temporarily, because next to Jeremy Taylor's "Holy Living and Dying" and Massillon's "Petit Carême," I know few more fascinating books than the "W. D. of M." The overpraised Thomas à Kempis' "Imitation" (who wrote it?) is in parts beautiful, but in its entirety wearisome. My copy of the "Whole Duty" is a very fine one, a "pot" folio (like the first edition of Mrs. Glasse's Cookery Book), and is embellished by a large number of elaborately executed line engravings. It bears the date of 1735. No author's name appears on the titlepage; but there is an "advertisement to the Bookseller," signed "John Hammond," and dated March 7, 1657. "J. H." speaks of having "read over the sheets before the publication of the work." I wonder whether its real author was the celebrated English divine Dr. Henry Hammond, who, according to Tom Hearne, was "the first man in England that had copy-money"—i.e., a price for the copyright of a literary work; and, says Hearne, "he was paid such a sum of money (I know not how much) by Mr. Royston, the King's printer, for his Annotations on the New Testament."

Mem.: It is, oddly enough, to a French source that I am indebted for the assurance that the "Whole Duty of Man" was not written by anyone by the name of Venn. In the "Dictionnaire Universel: Historique Critique et Bibliographique" (Paris, 1812), I find—

VENN (Henri), Théologien Anglais, né en 1725, à Barnes, au comté de Surrey, mort à Clapham en 1796; a publié Le Devoir Complet de l'Homme, ouvrage bien différent de celui intitulé Tout le Devoir de l'Homme.

A numerous band of correspondents—many, I am glad to say, hailing from the Fatherland, write me concerning "Napoleon's Midnight Review," and tell me that the original German poem, "Die Nachtliche Heerschau," was written by Josef (two correspondents say Johann) Freiherr von Zedlitz, born in 1798 at Johannesberg, in Austrian Siberia, who died in Vienna in 1862. He had served as an officer in the Austrian army. His poems were published by the historic house of Cotta, at Stuttgart, in 1832; and several of my correspondents "guess" that the "Nachtliche Heerschau" was written about 1822. Another correspondent tells me that the Freiherr von Zedlitz fought at Aspern and at Wagram; that the "Nachtliche Heerschau" is still a great favourite with German schoolboys, and that as a piece for declamation it is rivalled only by Heine's "Nach Frankreich Zogen Zwei Grenadier."

But there is no further need to inquire whether Zedlitz had read "Delta" (D. M. Moir), or whether "Delta" knew anything about the "Nachtliche Heerschau" before he wrote "The Cid's Spectral Host;" for a correspondent reminds me, half reproachfully, of a precursor of both the poems in question, which I should have remembered. I mean the ballad of "Admiral Hosier's Ghost"—

As near to Porto Bello lying
On the gently smiling flood.

On them gleam'd the moon's pale lustre
When the shade of Hosier brave,
His pale hands was seen to muster
Rising from their watery grave.
O'er the glimmering wave he bled him,
Where the Burford rear'd her sail,
With three thousand Ghosts behind him
And in groans did Vernon hail.

"The Circle" (my compliments to "The Circle;" they have written me a charming letter) write—"You have never put people right in a word for 'lighting' the Electric Light. One can hardly say 'light the light' nor 'strike up the Electric light.'" Well; I suppose we might say "kindle the Electric light." "Ignite the necessary apparatus for producing the Electric Light" would be too long, and, besides, would not be correct. This may seem a trivial matter; but in all probability within another five years we shall find that a new name has been added to the English language to express the wonderful agent as it is used for purposes of illumination. The word will be a simple instead of a compound one; and possibly we shall get rid of "light." In the early days of illumination by carburetted hydrogen it was always known as "the Gas-Light."

Here is (to me, at least) a very odd question indeed. A correspondent, writing all the way from Denver, Colorado, U.S.A., asks me if there be any recognised English equivalent for the German term "Eine brennende Frage" (a burning question) to express the crisis in a Government measure. But I always thought that the expression "a burning question" was an English one—new-fangled, it is true, but still as English as "reading between the lines," "dishing the Whigs," "Government whip," "red tape," "round men in square holes," the "Circumlocution Office," "the Way Not to Do it," and so forth. Perhaps some German correspondent will be able to enlighten me as to the parentage of "burning question." In Dr. Christopher Friedrich Grieb's exhaustive German-English English-German Dictionary—a "stout" volume of fourteen hundred pages—I find "burning scent," but no "burning question."

Another "stout" book which I have lately acquired I should like to mention in connection with an extremely slim one. The last-named is Lord Henry Gordon Lennox's pamphlet (Ridgway), "Forewarned Forearmed," which I am glad to hear is in a Second Edition. Within the brief compass of a pamphlet of only forty-seven pages, Lord Henry Lennox gives a vast amount of useful information respecting the strength of the British Navy as compared with the navies of Foreign Powers: the whole supporting his contention that "if in the present era of costly ironclad fleets our own cannot be made to equal any possible combination of Foreign Powers, it ought at least to be strong and formidable enough successfully to resist any probable combination of such Powers." Without being an Alarmist, Lord Henry Lennox does not conceal his conviction that it "is quite evident that England, compared with France, has, even at the present moment, but little to boast of as regards her available strength in ships."

So much for the slim book. The "Stout" one, which was published simultaneously in London (Longmans), Paris, Hamburg, and New York, thirty-four years ago, is an obese quarto of seven hundred pages, entitled "The Ship: its Origin and Progress; being a General History from its First Invention to the Latest Improvements; with an Appendix, containing a Concise Description of every kind of Vessel." The book is full of lithographed pictures of ships and boats of all countries and all ages, from "the rudder of Noah's Ark" to the Duke of Wellington hundred-and-twenty gun first-class line-of-battle ship. The author of this formidable compilation is Mr. Francis Steinitz.

The concluding lines of the "Ship" are edifying;—rather mournfully so. "Sir Walter Raleigh's maxim that whosoever commands the sea, commands the trade; whosoever commands the trade of the world commands the riches of the world; and consequently the world itself, is now applicable neither to England as a nation nor to society at large. . . . The Free Trade principles developed by England in advance of all other nations show that she has recognised a system and a power paramount to the warlike thunder of her wooden walls, and that the latter are not felt to possess a monopoly of the means for national defence. The iron network with which Great Britain is now more intersected than any other land will so facilitate the defence of her coasts by her hardy sons that her fleet will have but a secondary part to perform in the case of any hostile invasion." Alas and alack for the sweet optimism of the Herr Francis Steinitz. He wrote in 1848, just before Revolution broke out. He recked not of the ironclads, the monitors, the turret-ships, the torpedoes that were to come. The pages of "The Ship" have bravely broad margins. On the one in which it is inferred that the British Navy had in 1846 approached the stage of perfection I have written this extract from Lord Henry Lennox's pamphlet. "When the Devastation was first commissioned she carried the most powerful guns afloat. The recent improvement in the power of guns may be best shown by a comparison between those of the Devastation and the Chinese gun-boats, hereafter described. Both carry thirty-eight-ton guns, but the weight of the pieces is the only feature they have in common." Ah! Mr. F. Steinitz! Hope told you a flattering tale, indeed, about Peace and Universal Brotherhood in the year '48.

G. A. S.

SHOTOVER, THE WINNER OF THE DERBY.—SEE PAGE 538.

WITH THE SAILOR PRINCES: H.M.S. CLEOPATRA SHIFTING HER FORETOPMAST BY ELECTRIC LIGHT.—SEE PAGE 538.

1. The Bell within the South-west Tower Doorway. 2. Men working the "crabs" to raise the Bell. 3. Bell ascending through the Geometrical Staircase.

RAISING THE GREAT BELL IN THE TOWER OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE SOLAR ECLIPSE ON THE NILE.

The British scientific expedition lately sent to the banks of the Upper Nile was commissioned to make observations of the total eclipse of the sun there visible, during one minute and twelve seconds of time, on Wednesday, the 17th ult.; and these observations have been made with entire success. The expedition was organised at the suggestion of the Solar Physics Committee of the Science and Art Department of Government, but with the assistance of the Royal Society; the chief members of the expedition were Mr. Norman Lockyer and Dr. Arthur Schuster, assisted by Mr. Woods (who was deputed by Captain Abney), and also by Mr. Lawrence, and accompanied by Mr. W. Black, and others. They left England on the 19th ult., and on their arrival in Egypt were received by Esmat Effendi, an Egyptian astronomer, one of the household of the Khedive, and by Stone

Pasha, Chief of the Egyptian Staff, as well as by Sir Edward Malet, the British Consul-General. A suitable place for their temporary observatory had been chosen at Sohag, on the Nile, seventy miles above Thebes; and there was a steam-boat, placed by the Khedive's Government at the disposal of the English and French expeditions, which conveyed them to their destination without delay. The Governor of the district of Sohag also furnished a dahabiyeh, or river-boat, with an escort and guard of soldiers; and Colonel Moktar Bey was most active in assisting the expedition. We are indebted to Mr. W. Black for sending us, on the 11th ult., a photograph of the scene at Sohag, with the encampment and temporary establishment of the British astronomers and their party. At the right hand of the view is the tent used as a store-room; next this is an inclosure, protected by a cane fence, in which were placed Mr. Lockyer's two six-inch telescopes, and Dr. Schuster's photo-heliograph, which was to be used in the same manner as in his expedition to Siam, in 1875, but with the greatly improved apparatus devised by Captain Abney. The steamer and the dahabiyeh, above mentioned, are shown lying in the river; several members of the expedition, attendants, and Egyptian soldiers, are seen in the foreground; and there is one of the simple native machines for raising water from the Nile to irrigate the fields. The expedition has safely returned to Cairo, and on Monday last was received by the Khedive, amidst all his political and personal dangers, with unabated cordiality. The new comet is to be named Tewfik, after his Highness the Khedive.

Sir William and Lady Armstrong received on Thursday week more than 2000 guests at the South Kensington Museum at the conversazione of the Institution of Civil Engineers, of which Sir William is president.

STATION OF THE EXPEDITION FOR OBSERVING THE TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE SUN, AT SOHAG, ON THE NILE.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT.

The state of affairs in Egypt, since last Saturday and Sunday, has assumed a very alarming aspect. Arabi Pasha, the leader of the military party, whose rebellious attitude towards the Khedive, Tewfik Pasha, was described last week, though compelled on Saturday afternoon to resign the office of Minister of War, did so under protest, declaring that the Khedive was acting under the control of France and England, and without regard to the Sovereignty of the Sultan, which Arabi Pasha now affects to uphold. This declaration was immediately followed on Sunday by menacing demonstrations of the troops in garrison at Cairo and at Alexandria; and there was some panic among the European residents, who feared an insurrection of the populace, instigated by fanatical Mussulman clergy, to support Arabi Pasha's denunciation of foreign interference. Mr. Cookson, the British Consul at Alexandria, called a meeting of British subjects there, and showed them how to escape, in case of need, to the ships of her Majesty's naval squadron there lying in harbour, which were fully prepared to bombard the Egyptian forts and the native quarter of the city, if any attack were made upon the lives and property of Europeans. In the mean time, at Cairo, the leading officers of the army, by threats of instant death, as it is said, forced the chief members of the Chamber of Notables, and the Ulemas, or doctors of Mohammedan Law, to send a deputation to the Khedive, demanding the reinstatement of Arabi Pasha. The Khedive was obliged to give way, but a movement for his deposition, and for placing Hulin Pasha on the vice-regal throne, has already made considerable progress. The British Government is using its utmost efforts at Constantinople to induce the Sultan to interpose for the maintenance of Tewfik Pasha; and it is believed that a Turkish Commission will be sent to Egypt; but it is uncertain whether or not this will be accompanied by the employment of Turkish military force. Five British ships of war, under sealed orders, have left Suda Bay, the headquarters of the Mediterranean fleet, for Alexandria, where the French squadron will also be reinforced. As the turbulent behaviour of the Egyptian army is the principal element of danger, our Special Artist's Sketches, engraved on the front page, representing different types of native soldiery, will be considered appropriate to this emergency. Another Egyptian Sketch does not belong to the present season of the year, but to the time of the inundation of the Nile, which is at its height towards the end of September.

THE WINNER OF THE DERBY.

Shotover, by Hermit from Stray Shot, was bred by Mr. Chaplin, and purchased by the Duke of Westminster at the annual sale of the Blankney yearlings in 1880. She is a bright chestnut filly, standing, as near as we could judge, about 15 hands 3 in., and was one of the best-looking of the fourteen competitors for the great race of last week. Her two-year-old performances were not of a very promising character, as she did not gain a winning bracket in one of her three essays. She made her first appearance in the Middle Park Plate, where, virtually unbacked, she was unplaced to the flying Kermesse, Gerald, and St. Marguerite. Two days later she was made favourite for the Prendergast Stakes, and did rather better, as, though she was beaten a neck by Berwick, Barbe Bleue and four others finished behind her. At the Newmarket Houghton Meeting she was only asked to carry 7 st. 6 lb. in a Nursery Handicap, but could not get near Mugician (7 st. 12 lb.), who was in great form just then. Shotover's easy victory in the Two Thousand Guineas is of too recent date to need remark, and, with regard to her defeat in the One Thousand by St. Marguerite, it may be that, like many of the Hermits, she does not soon recover from the effects of a good gallop; whilst, judging through Geheimniss, it is quite possible that the form was correct, and that Mr. Crawford's beautiful filly would beat her again. Shotover now shares with Eleanor and Blink Bonny the honour of being the only fillies that have ever won a Derby. We have almost omitted to mention that she was trained by Porter, who has only had charge of the Duke's stud since the end of last season, and she has been ridden by Tom Cannon in all the three engagements she has fulfilled this year.

AN INCIDENT WITH THE FLYING SQUADRON.

The electric light was used for a remarkable purpose, on one occasion, among the ships of the Flying Squadron, with which our Sailor Princes, the two sons of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, have lately performed the circumnavigation of the globe. One ship of that squadron, H.M.S. Cleopatra, in the passage from the Fiji Islands to Yokohama, Japan, happened to find her foretopmast-head "sprung," and it became necessary to shift the foretopmast. As the weather was fair, on the night when this was discovered, the operation might well have been deferred till next day. But the commander of the squadron, Rear-Admiral the Earl of Clanwilliam, as he considered that naval practice and instruction had been the principal object for which it was sent out, and was further inclined to give the two young Princes, on board H.M.S. Bacchante, an opportunity of something novel in the way of sight-seeing, ordered the Cleopatra to shift her topmast by night, and the electric light apparatus, on board H.M.S. Inconstant, to be used for a substitute for daylight. The Sketch we have engraved, which was drawn by Lieutenant Percy M. Scott, of the Inconstant, shows this curious scene at sea; that ship lying near, with her own main topsail to the mast, and sending a brilliant light upon the masts and rigging of the Cleopatra. The latter hoisted, as will be observed in our Illustration, three red globular lanterns, placed vertically one above another, at the top of her main-mast, agreeably to the general regulations, with a view to prevent any collision when a ship ceases to be under command of her officers and crew. The remainder of the squadron, including the Bacchante, under reduced canvas, held their wind until the operation was completed; when they again made sail, and resumed their course as before. We observe that, on the 5th inst., the Flying Squadron, now without the Bacchante, lying in port at Simon's Bay, Cape of Good Hope, the Inconstant had a narrow escape of destruction by fire. Happily, the fire was put out in time, without any great amount of damage.

The annual show of the Bath and West of England Agricultural Society and Southern Counties Association was opened at Cardiff on Monday, when there was a large attendance. There were 717 exhibits of live stock, including 232 cattle, 172 sheep, and 157 horses. The poultry comprised 539 exhibits, and there is a large display of implements. At noon on Tuesday the annual meeting of the Council took place, under the presidency of Lord Tredegar. It was resolved that the next show shall be held in Bridgewater, and that Lord Brooke, M.P., shall be the president for the ensuing year. Lord H. Thynne, M.P., was elected vice-president.

THE GREAT BELL FOR ST. PAUL'S.

The raising of "Great Paul" in the south-west tower, was commenced on Tuesday morning at half-past eight, and the work was carried on with very satisfactory results. At six o'clock in the evening one half the lift had been attained—namely, about sixty feet from the timbers on which the bell had previously rested; but the motion of the bell upwards was so slow that it required watching to perceive it. The appliances were two of the Royal Engineers' "crabs," each provided with double drums, over which the winding-rope was rove in several turns, in the form of a figure of eight. There was a handle at each side of each winch, but, from the limited space in the clock-bell chamber, in which they were fixed, there was room only for the men to work the handles on one side. Four men had to work at each winch, and two men were to haul upon each pull of rope. There was also a reserved gang of four men for each of the "crabs," so that there were twenty men in all employed for the operation of lifting, of whom sixteen were actually kept at work. There were two sets of lifting ropes, two inches in diameter, each set working in two blocks with three sheaves; the hooks of the blocks held on partly by the central steel pin nutted on to the bell through the clapper hole, and partly by a strong iron bar passed through the cannons and set firm by wooden wedges. The hoisting ropes were not central in the eye of the stone vaulting of the tower, and when the cannons had passed through this lofty orifice, the bell would have to be hauled aside to permit the bow coming through. To effect this side-movement a winch and rope-tackle had been provided, and it would take about a three-ton pull to get the bell sufficiently out of the perpendicular. No hitch of any importance occurred; but two hours were lost on Tuesday morning through the lifting ropes twisting together. The securing of guide ropes and the untwisting of the lifting ropes was, however, only a matter of time and not of difficulty. The bell was duly secured for the night, and the raising was continued on Wednesday. At noon of that day, this operation was successfully completed; and timbers were then placed below the bell, across the opening in the vaulting of the tower, to support the bell when the ropes should be removed. The bell was gently lowered upon them at half-past one, taking its seat firmly with a slight creaking noise as the beams felt the heavy burden settling itself upon them. It only remained now to attach the head-stock and to seat the gudgeons on the bell-cage; and by Saturday the solemn voice of "Great Paul" was expected to be heard.

"THE RABBIT-HUTCH."

This pleasing composition, by Mrs. Kate Perugini, in the Exhibition at the Grosvenor Gallery, will remind many persons of girlish or boyish pride in the care of pet animals, forming part of the home establishment when they were too young for the graver business of life. Rabbits have their endearing ways, not less than birds, and children are generally disposed to be fond of them, and like to see them munching the succulent greens. We have seen a whole litter turned out on the drawing-room carpet, and scuttling beneath every piece of furniture, to amuse an urchin whom his mother and her friends delighted to indulge. The gentle little girl in the picture is content to wait upon her furry darlings at the bars of their own hutch, and takes delight in giving them food.

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Gounod's "Romeo e Giulietta" was given yesterday (Friday) week, with Madame Patti's charming impersonation of the heroine. Signor Nicolini was the Romeo, and Signor Cotogni the Mercutio, as heretofore; M. Dufrieche was well received on his appearance as Capulet, and the cast included Signor de Reszke as Friar Laurence.

On Saturday Bizet's "Carmen" was produced, with the special feature of the reappearance of Madame Pauline Lucien, after an absence of several years. Her performance was, throughout, one of high vocal and dramatic excellence; her acting in the final scene of her death at the hands of her discarded lover, Don José, having been especially fine. Her reception was enthusiastic. In the character last named, Signor Lestellier, although suffering from indisposition, improved on the impression made by his previous appearances, and acted with much power, particularly in the scene just specified. Madame Valleria—as in past performances of opera at Her Majesty's Theatre—was an excellent Micaela: M. Bonhy as Escamillo, the Torador, was more successful dramatically than vocally; and subordinate characters were mostly efficiently filled.

On Tuesday "La Sonnambula" was given, with the brilliant singing of Madame Sembrich as Amina, and the first appearance as Elvino of M. Massart, who was favourably received. Of his merits, however, we must await another opportunity to speak.

Signor Bervignani conducted on the Friday and Tuesday, and M. Dupont on Saturday.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE.

The German Opera Company are continuing their excellent performances, a welcome variety having been given to the succession of Wagner's works by the production last week of Beethoven's "Fidelio," the music of which is the highest example extant of purity, beauty, and grandeur in stage music. Fraulein Maltén sustained the character of Leonora—who, disguised as Fidelio, seeks and effects her husband's deliverance from imprisonment and assassination—with signal success. She gave the great scene in the first act, the "Invocation to Hope," with fine expression; her performance in the dungeon scene having been especially good, particularly in the magnificent quartet in which Leonora interposes between her captive husband and the dagger of his would-be assassin, Don Pizarro. In these and other instances the performance of Fraulein Maltén was of rare excellence, both vocally and dramatically. The cast was otherwise generally efficient, having included Fraulein Wiedermann as Marzelline, and Herren Wolff, Kraus, Ehrke, Landau, and Gura, respectively, as Florestan, Pizarro, Rocco, Jacquinio, and the King's Minister. The chorus-singing and the orchestral performances were alike excellent. Before the opera the "Leonora" overture No. 1 was given—the third and grandest of those associated with the opera having been performed between the first and second acts in so magnificent a style as to elicit a positive torrent of applause.

On Tuesday "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg" was produced, this having been its first stage hearing in this country. It is the only one of Wagner's operas into which the element of humour enters. All his other works are in the heroic or tragic style; but in this there is an antique quaintness, occasionally somewhat grotesque, that is strongly marked in its individuality, and suggestively reflective of the rough simplicity of the old-fashioned burgher life of Nuremberg some 300 years ago. The work was originally produced at Munich, in 1868; and here we may again remind readers that in this and all his other so-called opera-dramas the text, as well as the music, is by Wagner. It is the sixth in the list of his important stage productions, having followed "Tristan und Isolde," and been succeeded by the series of four "opera-dramas" based on the "Nibelungen lied," brought out at Bayreuth in 1876, and four times given at Her Majesty's Theatre, as recently noticed by us.

The most famous member of the guild of "Master-singers" in Germany during the fourteenth century was Hans Sachs, the cobbler-poet, who forms a prominent character in Wagner's work. The scene is laid during the Feast of St. John. Eva (the daughter of Pogner, one of the Master-singers) has been promised in marriage to him who shall be the victor in the approaching bardic contest. Her love has been won by Walther von Stolzing, a young stranger who determines to contend for the prize, although he has not yet been made a member of the guild. He is, nevertheless, allowed a hearing, the appointed umpire being Beckmesser, a member of the Guild, who himself hopes to gain the hand of Eva. Walther charms and surprises his audience by his performance, which, however, is condemned by all the Master-singers, except Hans Sachs. The two lovers, disappointed at the result, determine to elope together. Their plan becoming known to Hans Sachs, he determines to prevent it, from the persuasion that Walther must ultimately gain the artistic triumph due to his merits. The lovers, from their concealment, hear the cobbler singing what is intended to be a dissuasive warning. Beckmesser appears and sings a serenade to Eva under her window, called by Sachs in a comic duet; the cobbler all the time demonstratively hammering at his work, and the serenade flying into a rage; a quarrel and a noisy assemblage of the neighbours ensue; the lovers, attempting to escape from their concealment, are intercepted by Sachs, who sends Eva back to her father's house and forces Walther to his own (the cobbler's) residence. In the third act Walther's genius is triumphant over all obstacles. He has dreamed a song, the words of which have been surreptitiously appropriated by his rival, Beckmesser, who fails dismally in his vocal recitation of them. Walther then sings his "Preislied"—one of the favourite extracts from the opera—his triumph is complete; he is recognised as victor, gains the hand of Eva, and all ends triumphantly.

There is much characteristic writing in the music of "Die Meistersinger," beginning with the overture, which is full of formal quaintness, the opera itself containing several instances of a rough kind of realistic humour suitable to the subject and the period of the drama. The overture and several extracts from the opera have been given in concert performances—at the Wagner Festival at the Royal Albert Hall and elsewhere—and commented on at the time.

On Tuesday the overture was admirably played, as were the orchestral details generally, throughout the opera. The music of Eva was very finely rendered by Madame Sucher, especially in the scenes with Walther and those with Hans Sachs; the acting of the lady having been also excellent. Fraulein Schefsky was a thoroughly efficient Magdalene. The character of Sachs was admirably sustained, both vocally and dramatically, by Herr Gura, who gave the address to the Mastersingers and the monologue, and indeed all the music of the part, with great effect. Herr Winkelmann declaimed and acted very finely as Walther, whose master-song and prize song, and various passages in the concerted scenes, were admirable displays of dramatic vocalisation. Herr Ehrke gave a very humorous rendering of the pedantic Beckmesser; Herr Koegel, as Pogner, was impressive, and the characters of David and Kothner were, respectively, efficiently filled by Herr Landau and Herr Kraus. Among the most effective pieces was the quintet, "Selig, wie die Sonne," for Eva, Magdalene, Walther, David, and Sachs. The chorusing was excellent, especially in the final scene of the procession of the different guilds; and the performance, conducted by Herr Richter, was altogether of a very high order. The work was received with much applause by a crowded audience.

Since our last notice of these performances, "Lohengrin" has been repeated, with the character of Elsa transferred to that excellent artist, Fraulein Maltén, who sang and acted with great effect; another change having been the transference of the part of Ortrud to Fraulein Schefsky, who proved an efficient representative thereof.

The third repetition of Wagner's four Nibelungen opera-dramas at Her Majesty's Theatre took place on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday last week, and Monday evening "Die Walküre" and "Götterdämmerung" were announced again for Tuesday and Wednesday at reduced prices of admission.

The first Floral Hall concert of the season took place last Saturday, when the admirable singing of Mesdames Albani and Sembrich, and effective performances of other members of the Royal Italian Opera Company, were special features.

Mr. F. H. Cowen's sacred cantata, "St. Ursula," was, for the first time in London, performed at his concert at St. James's Hall last week with a success similar to that which attended its production at last year's Norwich Festival. The solo singers were: Madame Valleria, Miss Orridge, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. King. Mr. Cowen's "Scandinavian" symphony was also a feature of the concert, which was conducted by him.

Miss Maggie Okey (pianist) gave an afternoon concert at St. James's Hall on Wednesday with a substantial programme of vocal and instrumental music.

"The Messiah" was announced for performance at St. James's Hall on Thursday afternoon, conducted by Mr. W. Carter—the principal soprano solos rendered by Madame Christine Nilsson, in association with Madame Patey, Miss P. Winter, Mr. Maas, and Signor Foli—Mr. Carter's excellent choir co-operating.

Madame Sophie Menter gave her third Recital at St. James's Hall on Friday afternoon, when her programme comprised a varied selection of pianoforte pieces in the classical and brilliant styles.

Dr. George Johnson will give the Harveian Oration at the Royal College of Physicians on the 24th inst.

Whit Monday was very generally observed as a holiday in London. The weather was bright, sunny, and warm, and nobody who could get into the country cared to stay in town. Railways, steamers, and other modes of transit were consequently extensively patronised. There were upwards of 11,000 visitors to the Royal Horticultural Society's Gardens, South Kensington; and the total number of visitors to the state apartments of Windsor Castle was 9374, the admissions exceeding those of any single day since the Great Exhibition of 1851. Many of the metropolitan volunteer corps devoted Whit Monday to rifle practice, the ranges within reach of London being fully employed. At Sheerness the 3rd Middlesex Artillery resumed their work at Garrison Point Fort, and made good practice with guns. The 1st London Artillery also arrived, and practised well with the 40-pounder Armstrong, returning to town in the evening.

THE RABBIT-HUTCH.

BY MRS. KATE PERUGINI.—FROM THE PICTURE IN THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.

THE PARIS SALON.

CONCLUDING NOTICE.

From our former articles it will be observed that we deprecate entirely the views of those habitual pessimists who see nothing but signs of decadence on the walls of the present Salon. On the contrary, our belief is that at no period did there exist in France a school of young men more loyal to nature and more earnestly impressed with the lofty character of their calling.

With the view of assisting our readers to form their own estimate we have transferred to our pages a few examples, not necessarily exhaustive as to kind, or of the highest class as to quality—although in this latter respect they fairly hold their own, and, so far, are honestly representative of the exhibition—but belonging rather to that category which admits of ready translation into black and white.

The picture of the seated nymph, whose eyes are being blindfolded by a flying Cupid, is by Camille Bellanger, who was a pupil of Cabanel, and has caught up much of the refinement of his master. He calls the subject "Cou! cou!" a cry which a French child gives forth when in hiding and anxious to be discovered. But coucou—or cuckoo, as we spell it—primarily means the bird which poets make the harbinger of spring, and therefore we may call this a personification of that most hopeful and joyous of seasons. The work is, of course, purely decorative in character.

So also is our next picture; only the artist, Lecomte Du Noy, who studied under Gleyre, Gérôme, and Signol, and who, like the preceding, is a born Parisian, has tried, and not unsuccessfully, to catch the spirit of the antique world and give classic form to his conception. This graceful personification of the Odyssey—Odyssée, as here imprinted—whom we see so magnificently draped, holding in her hand the portrait of Ulysses, and whom, from the worsted whorls at her feet, as well as from the faithful dog whose memory was so long and loyal, we may take for Penelope herself—is one compartment of a large Homeric triptych, in the centre of which we see the blind old Bard of Chios, with appropriate environment; and on the other side, in the panel corresponding to the one before us, a Fury occupies the chief space, suggestive of Orestes and the Iliad. This work is mural in size, luminous in colour, and full both of artistic and of classic knowledge.

Jules Didier's "Field Labour"—the woman kneeling at her work in front of the two horses attached to the laden wain, is a fragment of a long decorative frieze, modern in spirit and realistic in treatment, intended for the school situated in the Rue Châteauneuf-Landon, Paris. Building, carpentry, metal-working, pottery manufacture, horticulture, arboriculture, and, as in the case before us, agriculture, have each a separate compartment, and each is handled with the same breadth and vigour as we see in the woodcut. Didier is also a native of Paris, and his masters were L. Cogniet and J. P. Laurens.

Of the masters named it is but proper that we indicate here the works of such of them as are represented in the Salon. Cabanel has two fine portraits, which fully maintain his high reputation. The one, that of a seated lady in green velvet, the other a three-quarter length of a "Venetian Lady" in the red dress and hat of the sixteenth century. Light auburn hair falls loosely on her beautifully formed shoulders, and the flesh painting in both is at once true and delicate. Jean Paul Laurens has a portrait of "M. Auguste Rochin," and one of the most powerful, and at the same time one of the most unpleasant, subject-pictures in the exhibition, representing the Emperor Maximilian taking affectionate farewell of his kneeling followers and a priest before leaving his prison for execution. A Mexican officer, with a broad sombrero on his head, stands in the strong sunlight of the door holding in his hand the order for his execution.

Our next example is by Jean Benner, who was a disciple of Pils. It represents "Young Capri girls going to the Spring." They stand out between us and the bright Italian sky with a statuesque stateliness which is most striking, and we would remind our lady readers that this dignity of carriage arises solely from the habit of carrying their water-pitchers on their head. The nearest figure in physique and bearing reminds us somewhat of Jules Breton, who, by-the-way, has one of the most charming pictures of combined landscape and figures in the exhibition. A group of peasant women chatting in the summer gloamin' is the simple subject, but the sentiment and poetry of it are worthy of our own lamented Mason, whose "Harvest Moon" is one of the choicest pictures in the rare collection of Mr. Eustace Smith. The name of Jules Breton reminds us that his daughter, Madame Demont-Breton, has in the exhibition a very happy and vigorously-painted group of a primeval couple fondling their baby. The composition has all that gravity of treatment pertaining to the higher ranges of art, and she maintains thereby the reputation of a family of distinguished painters.

Our illustrations hitherto have been of a merely pictorial or decorative kind; but our last one speaks to the heart from the world of human suffering and wrong which it suggests. Millet himself never delineated more touchingly the sorrows of the forsaken. The author of this work, Albert Maignan, has a soul steeped in poetry. His other contribution, "The Sleep of Fra Angelico," during which a radiant angel comes and works on his picture, is a very beautiful rendering of a very beautiful legend; but it fails to move us as this does. Readers of history will remember that the wicked Frédégonde caused Chilpéric, King of Neustria in the sixth century, first to repudiate and then to kill his wife, Audovère; and the artist calls his picture "La Repudice." The lines which have inspired him are by E. Ducros, and may be rendered thus—

Where then goest thou, exiled queen,
With thy faithful nurse,
Audovère with thy child?
Thou advancest as the day closes
Through a miry road in a weary land,
Where then goest thou, exiled queen?

Though the Madonna-like figure before us be not a queen, the artist evidently means her to have all a queen's capacity of soul for sorrow, and it is because the spectator sees and feels this that the picture has such a hold on the emotional and sympathetic in his nature.

There are several other things of a like tender kind in the Salon, but let the one described suffice as their representative.

J. F. R.

The Speaker and several members of Parliament visited the Electrical Exhibition at the Crystal Palace last Saturday, and were entertained at dinner by the directors. Dr. Siemens stated that the exhibition showed considerable progress since the exhibition in Paris.

The Queen has approved the appointment of Mr. Justice J. D. Fitzgerald, of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice in Ireland, to be a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary. Her Majesty has also approved the appointment of Mr. Justice Bowen to be a Lord Justice in the Court of Appeal, in the room of Lord Justice Holker, who resigned his office a few days before his death. Mr. A. Lewis Smith, it is stated, has accepted the Puisne Judgeship vacated by Mr. Justice Bowen's elevation.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The third day at Epsom was very wet, though it cleared up just prior to the first race, and the hill presented a desolate and deserted appearance. There were only a couple of events of any importance, and, curiously enough, both these went to Lord Bradford by the aid of the own brothers, Limestone and Quicklime. A field of eleven came to the post for the Royal Stakes, but there was nothing of much character engaged except Limestone (8 st. 6 lb.), Passaic (8 st. 6 lb.), and Red Spectre (6 st. 7 lb.). The last-named does not care to travel more than six furlongs; and, though Limestone won by a couple of lengths, he had to be ridden right out to beat Silver Bell (6 st. 4 lb.), who was nearly caught by Passaic in the last few strides. After his capital performances in the Two Thousand and Derby, the Epsom Grand Prize appeared completely at the mercy of Quicklime, who was entitled to a 7 lb. allowance, and thus received a stone from Executor, and 10 lb. from Gerald. As he had defeated this pair at level weights on the previous day, we need hardly say that they were never dangerous, and Quicklime disposed of the luckless Marden and Leonora very cleverly indeed. The last day of the meeting was favoured with beautiful weather, as, though there were two or three brief showers, the sun shone brightly during the greater part of the afternoon, and the heavy rain of the previous day had completely laid the dust. Lord Rosebery's colours are generally pretty successful at Epsom, and Bonny Jean, a daughter of Macaroni and Bonny Bell, proved good enough to win the Epsom Two-Year-Old Plate in a canter, in spite of starting at an outside price. It was scarcely expected that the field for the Oaks would dwindle down to five, the smallest number that has taken part in the race since 1799, when Bellina had only three to beat. Of these five only Geheimniss and St. Marguerite were backed in earnest, as something was amiss with Nellie, who travelled badly in the betting for a day or two before the race, and did not canter with the others; whilst 100 to 1 could be had about either Incognita or Lady May. The former of this pair, indeed, was only started to make running for Geheimniss; and, though a nice-looking filly, she has scarcely fulfilled the promise of her two-year-old days. St. Marguerite, who is one of the most beautiful fillies we ever saw, fairly put Geheimniss in the shade in point of looks, for the favourite has a plain head and rather slack loins. One could not, however, fail to be struck with her wonderful length and grand muscular quarters; and, as she was known to be something like 10 lb. in front of Shotover, it was surprising that the bookmakers were content to take 6 to 4 about her right up to the last. There was no delay at the post, a capital start being effected at the first attempt. Lady May at once went to the front, and held a clear lead of Incognita, Nellie, and Geheimniss, St. Marguerite bringing up the rear. In this order they ran to Sherwood's, where Lady May increased her lead to four or five lengths, Nellie lying at Incognita's quarters until approaching the furzes, when the leader was joined by Incognita, and at the mile post the latter assumed a slight lead, Nellie following third at a clear interval, and the favourite being next at her girths, with St. Marguerite at her heels. Before reaching the top of the hill Lady May had dropped clean away, and Incognita went on with a clear lead of Nellie and Geheimniss, of whom the favourite raced past soon afterwards, and half way down the hill she showed with a slight lead of her stable-companion, Nellie now being third, close up, with St. Marguerite fourth. As they came into the line for home Incognita lost her position, Nellie took her place on the top ground at the quarters of Geheimniss, and St. Marguerite drew up on the rails. Over the road, Nellie held out signals of distress, and though St. Marguerite was allowed to draw up to the neck of Geheimniss at the distance, the favourite shot out with a clear advantage the moment her head was loosed, and won in a common canter by a couple of lengths; Nellie was a bad third, and the others were beaten off. The victory of Geheimniss was so decisive, and her reported superiority to Shotover was so thoroughly confirmed, that her success in the St. Leger appears only a question of health. She was ridden by Cannon, who has thus performed the almost unparalleled feat of winning the Two Thousand, Derby, and Oaks, in one season. Some smart two-year-olds took part in the Acorn Stakes—Camilla, Hauteur, Lovely, and Songless being all decidedly above the average. Camilla did not perform nearly so well as at Chester; and Lovely, who was coughing, could only run third to Hauteur and Lilac, the latter making a close fight with M. Lefèvre's representative. The same colours were successful in the Gold Cup, as Tristan disposed of Isabel with great ease.

The Middle Park yearlings that were disposed of on Saturday last were not a very brilliant sample, and the twenty-eight only averaged 140 gs. The highest priced lot was a very handsome bay colt by Scottish Chief—Hilda (640 gs.).

During the present long spell of dry weather bowlers, as usual, have no chance against batsmen, and long scores have become so common that it is almost impossible to notice anything under a "century." The Australians v. Surrey was a very peculiar match, and, had not the too-familiar "Surrey rot" set in in their second innings, the representatives of the county had a really grand chance of victory. No large scores were made on either side, and the feature of the match was the really splendid bowling of Jones, who took five wickets for 31 runs in the first innings of the colonials, the Surrey men finishing up the first half of the match no less than 70 runs to the good. Then they went all to pieces, being disposed of at their second attempt for the wretched total of 48; and the Australians were thus enabled to win by six wickets. The University of Cambridge, for which Mr. C. T. Studd (not out, 126) played a splendid innings, looked like beating England easily; but Messrs. A. G. Steel (41 and 171) and G. F. Vernon (69) came to the rescue, and made the game a draw. The Oxonians defeated a weak team of the M.C.C. and Ground in a single innings, with nineteen runs to spare. Messrs. J. G. Walker (87) and C. Peake (53) did most for the University; whilst Flowers (54) was the only notable scorer on the opposite side. Lancashire beat Derbyshire very easily by ten wickets; and the M.C.C. and Ground disposed of Kent by nine wickets. Nothing remarkable was done in either of these matches. Some heavy scoring has again taken place during the present week, but, at the time of writing, only one important match is finished. This is the one between Over Thirty and Under Thirty, which took place at Lord's. For the seniors, Messrs. Hornby (91) and Ulyett (138) contributed fine scores; but the side completely collapsed at the second attempt, and, mainly owing to Mr. W. H. Patterson (57), Midwinter (62), and Bates (not out, 144), the juniors won by ten wickets, one more proof of the undoubted fact that "youth will be served."

The first match of the new Thames Yacht Club for the season was sailed last Saturday by cutters of the second and third class. The Marquis of Ailsa's Sleuthhound took the first prize in the second class; Mr. J. D. Hedderwick's Annasona taking second. The first prize, third class, was won by Mr. F. Taylor's Freda, and the second by Mr. R. Hewitt's Buttercup.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, May 30.

This is the grand week of the grand fortnight that begins with the Sunday of the Chantilly Derby and ends with the Sunday of the Grand Prix de Paris, the greatest fête-day of the Parisian year, although it does not figure in the calendar. During this week there are races every day, either at Auteuil or Long-champs. The whole population of Paris is talking of nothing but horses. At Auteuil last Sunday the English won the Grand Steeplechase with Whisper-low. Who will win the Grand Prix next Sunday? What emotions between these two events! What an interest the French take in the improvement of the equine race, which is the ostensible purpose of these trials of swiftness and endurance! How pleasing it is for the Anglo-Saxon to think that he has enriched the French language with the words "sport," "turf," "betting," "performance," "leader," "four-in-hand," "outsider"! How gratifying it is to hear the French bloods discussing "le formidable rush de Whisper-low"!

In truth, the noble animal whom Buffon has celebrated is more than ever a hero. His name is in every mouth; he is the joy and glory of a nation of gentlemen; he has all Paris at his heels when he runs; beauty, rank, and wealth salute, pet, applaud, or curse him, according as he wins or loses. Nevertheless he remains famous; his name, his image, his performances, are handed down to posterity. He takes his place in history along with the horses of Phœbus, Apollo, with Pegasus, with Bucephalus, with Mahomet's mare Al Borach, with Don Quixote's Rosinante. Suppose for a moment that the horse never existed; you cancel at once half the history of humanity. Without the horse you have neither Centaurs nor Amazons, nor the passage of the Rhine, nor the ballad of "Lenora," nor the poem of "Mazepa," nor the "Bronze Horse," nor the "Postillon de Lonjumeau." The Parisians, then, are right when they cry "Vive le cheval!" To which the bookmakers reply, with deafening clamour, "Voyez la cote! la cote! voyez la cote!"

Is it possible for any one man, or any one man and his wife, to know three thousand persons? This was the figure of the guests invited by the Baron Gustave de Rothschild last Sunday, on the occasion of the signing of the marriage contract between his daughter, Mdlle. Lucy de Rothschild, and M. Léon Lambert, of Brussels. This young lady really begins her married life in exceptional conditions. Her marriage contract is signed by princes, amongst others by all the princes of the Orleans family; and her wedding presents are so precious that they have to be guarded by detectives! Imagine a necklace of pearls valued at £12,000, rivers of diamonds, ounces of sapphires, an enormous horseshoe paved with diamonds, rubies and emeralds as big as nuts! The marriage is to be celebrated to-morrow, Wednesday. The témoins of the bride will be her two uncles, the Barons Adolphe and Alphonse de Rothschild; and of the bridegroom, M. Devaux, chief of the household of the King of the Belgians, and the Baron de Beyens, the Belgian Minister at Paris. And to think that when the couple arrive at Brussels, accompanied by the detectives charged with guarding the wedding presents, they will have to go and live in an immense palace in the Rue de la Loi, with a staircase in white marble, where the detectives will be installed in permanence to guard the wedding presents, the necklaces of pearls, and the emeralds and rubies as big as cob-nuts!

Now that Sarah Bernhardt is once more the lion of the day in London, it may interest the reader to know that her appearance in the "Dame aux Camélias" before a Parisian audience at the Gaité last Thursday was not generally considered satisfactory. The piece, as a whole, was badly played, and the acting of Sarah in particular was found to be full of exaggeration and vulgar effects, good enough for exportation, but not acceptable at Paris. I heard Dumas express great contempt for the whole affair. In the famous death scene he only admitted that Sarah had one fine movement, when she throws up her arms; the rest he said was mere choreography. As for M. Damalas, Dumas denied that he had any talent; he did not know how to walk even; all the time he seemed to be looking for a louis that Sarah had dropped on the stage.

An important reaction is being prepared against the new law on obligatory and lay primary instruction. In the departments of the west of France, Maine, Anjou, Vendée, Brittany, the reactionaries are triumphing, and the curés have been elected almost everywhere to act on the school-boards charged with the execution of the anti-clerical law. M. Gambetta's journal, La République Française, blames the Government for having been wanting in energy in dealing with these "refractory provinces." Meanwhile the Figaro has opened a subscription for forming a budget for the foundation of free Christian schools. In less than a week the subscription-list of the Figaro amounted to upwards of 400,000 fr., and now the movement has been taken up by the entire Conservative press, both Parisian and departmental, and approved by the Church with a promptitude and unanimity that may well alarm the radicals. From the point of view of the Conservatives, the combat engaged in is that of the Christians against the Atheists, and, some would add, of the honest folk against the rascals.

On Friday and Saturday nights there were serious disturbances in the Latin Quarter. The students, animated doubtless by reminiscences of Villon and of the brawls of the old Basoches, determined to take justice into their own hands, and clear their quarter of the ruffians and parasites of vice with which it is infested, like so many other districts of the town. Unfortunately, the affair ended in a combat with the police, who appear to have acted with extreme brutality, using sabres and knuckle-dusters, and arresting and maltreating the students right and left. Some twenty students were arrested, and six were seriously wounded. The affair has caused great indignation both amongst the students and in the press.

Last Sunday was the anniversary of the entrance of the Versailles troops into Paris in May, 1871. The police made every preparation in view of a Communist manifestation, but nothing serious took place. This year the Socialists were calm. In the course of the afternoon some two thousand persons assembled at Père Lachaise around the graves of the "martyrs." Louise Michel and other orators delivered the usual incendiary and violent speeches, and then all returned peacefully to their homes.

Prince Napoleon's newspaper, Le Napoléon, has ceased to appear. Après of the ever-increasing isolation of Prince Jérôme, a wit has suggested that he should take advantage of the settlement now being made by the Chamber of Deputies, and demand an indemnity as being a victim of the Coup d'Etat.

T. C.

A procession of over 5000 horses took place at Sunderland on Monday. The Mayor and other officials, with the secretaries, Messrs. Wilson and Roger Errington, headed the procession. Over £100 was awarded in prize.

OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN EGYPT: THE PYRAMIDS DURING AN INUNDATION OF THE NILE.—SEE PAGE 538.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES AT LEICESTER: CHILDREN SINGING THE NATIONAL ANTHEM IN THE MARKET PLACE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

FIGMY HOGS FROM INDIA AT THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S GARDENS.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE SILENT MEMBER.

The Egyptian Question is the topic of the hour in Europe. It was the last matter of moment that engaged the attention of the House of Lords prior to the adjournment for the Whitsuntide Recess, when Earl Granville and the Marquis of Salisbury were found to be substantially in agreement as to the Anglo-French concert at Alexandria. It was, naturally, the subject uppermost in every mind when their Lordships reassembled on Thursday.

The situation was held to be serious in the Lower House the evening the Commons separated for a brief holiday. In the morning papers of Friday, May 26, had been published the joint note presented by the diplomatic agents of England and France to Egypt, and approving and supporting the conditions recommended by Sultan Pasha, President of the Chamber of Notables. These conditions suggested the removal from Egypt of Arabi Pasha and his two chief colleagues, and the resignation of the Ministry, as the best means of restoring order. Sir Charles Dilke, reticence itself "in the interests of the public service," admitted to Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett, the advocate of the Porte, that the telegram was substantially correct; and the guarded Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs assured Sir Henry Drummond Wolff that measures had been adopted to protect British subjects in Egypt. But Sir Wilfrid Lawson was not satisfied. The hon. Baronet, in his liveliest vein, said it would be better to secure the pacification of Ireland before attempting the regeneration of Egypt; and begged the Prime Minister to relieve his mind, at least, by undertaking that no force should be employed during the Whitsuntide Recess. Mr. Gladstone could not tie himself down to this promise; but expressed a belief that it would not be necessary to have recourse to force; and it was to be noted that Sir Stafford Northcote and Mr. Joseph Cowen accorded their support to the position taken up by the Premier. Since then "many things have happened." The Khedive dismissed his Ministry, only to be compelled to reinstate Arabi Pasha as Minister of War on Sunday; and now the power of Tewfik Pasha appears to be wholly grasped by Arabi. A question hereupon arises. Seeing that a serious rebuff has been administered to England and France, and that the European inhabitants of Cairo and Alexandria are taking flight in consequence of threatening manifestations, may it not be asked whether the Foreign Office authorities exercise due judgment in the choice of the aforesaid "diplomatic agents" who act as their mouthpiece in the East?

With Egypt and Ireland the rest of the Session bids fair to be entirely taken up. When will England's turn come?

THE ROYAL VISIT TO LEICESTER.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, according to previous arrangements, which were mentioned last week in connection with the Illustrations we then gave of Leicester and the Abbey Park, visited that town on Monday last. Their Royal Highnesses arrived from London by special train at one o'clock, attended by Lord Colville of Culross, General Sir Dighton Probyn, Colonel Teesdale, and the Countess of Moreton. They were received by the Mayor, Alderman Chambers, and the Reception Committee of the Corporation. The Leicestershire Yeomanry Cavalry formed an escort to attend the procession of thirty carriages through the town; while the Leicester Volunteers, in their scarlet uniform, furnished the guard of honour, and kept the streets.

From the Midland Railway station to the Market-place, the procession passed through four triumphal arches; the first, one of evergreens, at the station; the second, of an architectural character, in Campbell-street; the third, of more fantastic design, with a band of music stationed on the top; and the fourth, entering the Market-place, an imitation of a quaint old English timbered and red-tiled house, said to be copied from the ancient Market Gatehouse of Leicester. Our present illustration is that of the scene in the gaily decorated Market-place, where six thousand school children, assembled in extemporised galleries in front of the Corn Exchange, sang, to the delight of the Prince and Princess, "God Bless the Prince of Wales" and "The National Anthem." Here, too, the Freemasons had assembled, and they presented, through Earl Ferrers, an address to the Prince, the short reply to which was lost amid enthusiastic cheering. Quitting this gay scene through a fifth triumphal arch, the Prince and Princess came in sight of the Gothic clock-tower memorial of Leicester's ancient cross. The tower bears statues of four of Leicester's benefactors—Sir Simon de Montfort, Sir T. White, William Wyggeston, and Alderman Newton. These worthies were now under a canopy of imitation roses, strung on every hand from the pinnacle of the tower across the street. Through a sixth arch, a castellated edifice, the effect of which was heightened by the appearance of red-coated Volunteers in the battlements, the procession wended its way through Belgrave-gate, Belgrave-road, and Sidney-street to the new park, passing through four more arches, including one of Japanese design and a pretty structure of rustic work and flowers. It was everywhere saluted with the cheers of enthusiastic but orderly people.

In the park, which was noticed last week, the Prince and Princess descended from their carriage, and, ascending the mound which is its central feature and commands a good view of the designer's work, were introduced to the park committee, of which Mr. Councillor Underwood is chairman and Mr. Councillor Gimson vice-chairman. The Princess afterwards planted an oak-tree, loud cheers greeting her as, with the silver spade received from the Mayoress, she threw some mould round the roots of the sapling. The Prince, to have his share in the transaction, took a gardener's spade and assisted in the work.

Preceded by the historical mace of Leicester, the Mayor and the Corporation led the way to the platform from which the opening of the park was to be declared, and in front of which already the Mayor's guests were seated. The Mayor eloquently thanked the Prince and Princess for coming, briefly told the story of the Corporation's enterprise in connection with it, and paid due honour to his predecessors and coadjutors, including the present Town Clerk, for their share in the work. Then he presented to the Prince a gold key. With its acceptance the ceremony was completed, and the Prince said, amid cheers, "I declare the park now open."

The Prince and Princess then retired for a while to the pavilion near the lake. This building, which is of Old English style, will in future be the refreshment-room of the park. For the visit of the Prince and Princess it had been divided into two apartments, each luxuriously "appointed" by local art furniture providers, Messrs. James Spencer and Son, of Leicester. The Prince's apartment was hung with old tapestry and furnished as a smoking-room, with settees and easy-chairs upholstered in blue velvet. On the walls, besides shields and trophies, were hung paintings from the Corporation treasures of men famous in the ancient history of Leicester—Henry V., Earl of Huntingdon, and Robert Heyrick, Mayor of Leicester, and a member of Parliament for Leicester towards the end of the sixteenth century. The Princess's apartment was hung with tapestry, lace curtains, festoon work of silk plush, shields and banners and some valuable pictures belonging to the Corporations.

The day's proceedings were wound up with the Mayor's luncheon in a marquee on an archery ground, which is one of the features of the park. Among the guests were the Lord Chancellor, Lady Selborne, and Miss Palmer, the Bishop of Peterborough, Sir A. Hazelrigg, Mr. Merewether, Q.C., Recorder of Leicester, General Cameron, Mr. William Winterton (the High Sheriff), Mr. A. M'Arthur, M.P., and Mrs. M'Arthur, Mr. T. Paget, M.P., and General Burnaby, M.P. The toast of "The Prince and Princess," proposed by the Mayor, was received with great enthusiasm. Their Royal Highnesses quitted Leicester at five o'clock, on their return to London, arriving in time for dinner.

THE PIGMY HOG OF NEPAUL.

For our first knowledge of the existence of a diminutive form of the pig-family in the Sub-Himalayan forests we are indebted to the researches of Mr. Bryan H. Hodgson, formerly Resident at the Court of Nepaul, who described the pigmy hog so long ago as 1847, in an article published in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal. He named it Porcula Salvania, from the forests of Saul trees (Shorea robusta) in which it is chiefly found. While the wild boar, or a species closely resembling it, abounds all over India, the pigmy hog is exclusively confined, as Mr. Hodgson tells us, to the deep recesses of the primeval forests, where it roams about in herds. It is very rarely seen, even by the natives. A well-known hunter informed Mr. Hodgson that during fifty years' abode in the Saul-forests he had obtained but three or four of these animals to eat, partly owing to their scarcity, and partly to the speed with which the females and young disperse, and to the extraordinary vigour and activity with which the males defend themselves while their families are retreating. Dr. Jerdan, in his volume on the Mammals of India, tells us that the full-grown males live constantly with the herd, which consists of from five to twenty individuals, and are its habitual and resolute defenders against harm. These animals feed principally on roots and bulbs, but also devour birds' nests, eggs, insects, and reptiles. The female has a litter of three to four young ones. Dr. Jerdan adds, that whilst at Darjeeling he in vain endeavoured to procure a specimen from the Sikkim Terai, and Sir Joseph Fayrer, who hunted many years in the Terai, was also unsuccessful in meeting with the Pigmy Hog.

Under these circumstances, it will be readily understood that the authorities of the Zoological Society of London have been much pleased at the recent acquisition of a small herd of these animals, consisting of a male and three females, of which we give an illustration. They were obtained in the Western Doora of Bhootan by vast trouble and expense, and were brought to England by Mr. B. H. Carew, who has parted with them to the society. They were caught by Mr. Carew's hunters in snares, which were set for them in hundreds, over a range of country twenty miles in extent. Though, on their first arrival, they were very wild, they are already becoming tame and confidential. In its general appearance, the Pigmy Hog is not unlike a small variety of the common boar; but measures only about two feet in length, and has a very small tail. The colour is a nearly uniform brown, slightly shaded with dirty amber. The coat of hair is thin, except upon the back. The Pigmy Hogs will be found by visitors to the Zoological Society's Gardens in what is usually called the "Ostrich-House," just beyond the Zebra-House, where a compartment has been specially fitted up for their accommodation.

In consequence of information received from the Essex police, indicating that an attempt either had been or would be made to destroy the Government magazines at Purfleet, extra troops have been sent there from Woolwich, and every precaution has been taken to guard against surprise.

A large quantity of Roman coins has been discovered near the Ham Hill Quarries, Yeovil, by a labourer who was excavating. The coins are in a good state of preservation, and date from A.D. 81 to 182. The spot where the discovery was made was at one time a Roman camp of observation, and overlooks Sedgemoor.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 10, 1882.

SUNDAY, JUNE 4.
Trinity Sunday.	Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m.
Morning Lessons: Isaiah vi. 1-11.	St. James's, noon, probably Rev.
Rev. i. 1-9. Evening Lessons:	Francis Garden, the Sub-Dean.
Gen. xviii. or i. and ii. 1-4; Eph.	Whitehall, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., Rev.
iv. 1-17, or Matt. iii.	V. H. Stanton.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev.	Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Henry White,
James Fleming, Bishop of London's	the Chaplain; 7 p.m., Hon. and
Ordination; 8.15 p.m., Rev.	Rev. A. Anson, Rector of Wool-
Archdeacon Hessay; 7 p.m., Rev.	wich.
Berdmere Compton.
MONDAY, JUNE 5.
Accession of George I., King of	British Architects' Institute, 8 p.m.,
Greece, 1803.	distribution of medals and prizes.
Royal Institution, general monthly	Royal Harwich Yacht Club, two meeting, 5 p.m.	days.
Surveyors' Institution, 8 p.m.; annual	Musical Association, 5 p.m., Mr. H.
dinner, 6 p.m.	Hiles "From Rhythmic Pulsation
Society of Engineers, Mr. T. Rymer-	to Classical Outline."
Jones on Railway-Tunnelling in	Mansion House, dinner to Royal
Japan.	Academicians.
Zoological Society, 8.30 p.m.
TUESDAY, JUNE 6.
Trinity Law Sittings begin.	Biblical Archaeology Society, 8 p.m.,
Christian Knowledge Society, 2 p.m.	Mr. E. Lunel on the Epoch of
Royal Institution, 3 p.m., Professor	Joseph, &c.
A. Gamgee on Digestion.	Ascot Races begin.
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7.
Geological Society, 8 p.m.	St. John's Foundation School, din-
Entomological Society, 7 p.m.	ner, 7 p.m.
United Service Institution, 3 p.m.,	Yachting: Royal Yorkshire Yacht
Discussion on Providing Officers	Club Regatta, Hull (four days).
and Men for the Navy.
THURSDAY, JUNE 8.
Moon's last quarter, 5.9 p.m.	Mathematical Society, 8 p.m.
Corpus Christi.	Inventors' Institute, 8 p.m.
Royal Institution, 3 p.m., Professor	Symphony Concert (for Royal College
Dewar on the Metals.	of Music), St. James's Hall, 8 p.m.
Royal Society, elections, 4 p.m.	Ascot Races: Cup Day.
Society of Antiquaries, elections, 8.30.
FRIDAY, JUNE 9.
Royal Institution, 8 p.m., Professor	New Shakespeare Society, 8 p.m., (Dr. B.
Burdon Sanderson on the Excita-	Nicholson "Was Hamlet Mad?")
bility of Plants, 9 p.m.	Astronomical Society, 8 p.m.
Architectural Association, 6.30 p.m.,	Quakett Microscopical Club, 8 p.m.
Mr. E. J. Tarver on Italian Renais-	United Service Institution, 3 p.m., sance.	General Sir O. Cavenagh on the Philharmonic Society, 8 p.m., Ru-	Indian Army. binstein's "Paradise Lost."
SATURDAY, JUNE 10.
Royal Institution, 3 p.m., Professor	Physical Society, 3 p.m.
D. Masson on Poetry.	East of England annual Horse Show,
Albert Hall Operatic Concert, 8 p.m.	Pontefract (three days).
Botanic Society, 3.45 p.m.

THE COURT.

On her Majesty's birthday the Crathie Musical Association went to Balmoral in the morning and sang a long programme of music, chiefly Scottish airs. The official celebration of the auspicious event takes place to-day (Saturday) in the metropolis, the usual trooping of the colours being gone through in the morning at the Horse Guards, in the presence of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the members of the Royal family in town; the Ministerial banquets and the illumination of the West-End taking place in the evening. Various military promotions have been made in honour of the occasion.

Lord Carlingford arrived at Balmoral last Saturday as Minister in attendance upon the Queen, and, with the Very Rev. Principal Caird, joined the Royal dinner party.

Her Majesty, Princess Beatrice, and Princesses Elizabeth and Irene of Hesse attended Divine service on Whit Sunday at Crathie church; Principal Caird officiating. The Rev. Principal and Lord Carlingford again dined with her Majesty.

The Queen is enjoying her retirement in the Highlands, and every day finds her in some favourite locality of this picturesque district, she oftentimes passing hours in sketching. Her Majesty has visited Mrs. Campbell at the Manse, as well as various other friends on the Royal domain.

Sheriffs Hanson and Ogg have been knighted, in commemoration of her Majesty's recent visit to Epping Forest.

STATE CONCERT.

By command of the Queen, a state concert was given yesterday week at Buckingham Palace. The Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the Crown Prince of Denmark, Prince Frederick William of Hesse, and the members of the Royal family, conducted by the Earl of Kemmare, K.P., and attended by the great officers of state, the Mistress of the Robes, and the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Household in Waiting, entered the saloon at eleven o'clock, when the concert immediately commenced.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales wore a dress of turquoise blue and silver brocade, trimmed with Honiton lace, braided with broad bands of silver. Corsage to correspond. Head-dress: A tiara of diamond stars, and diamond ornaments. Orders: Victoria and Albert, the Crown of India, St. Catherine of Russia, the Danish Family Order, and the order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Her Royal Highness Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein wore a dress of brown and viege d'or satin, handsomely draped with flounces of Brussels lace. Head-dress: A tiara of turquoise and diamonds. Ornaments: Turquoise and diamonds. Orders: The Victoria and Albert, the Crown of India, St. Catherine of Russia, the Saxe-Coburg and Gotha Family Order, the Prussian Order for Care of the Sick and Wounded, the Order of Louise of Prussia, and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

The artists were Mesdames Albani, Christine Nilsson, Patey, and Rose Hersee, Herr Gura and Signor Mierzwinsky. Conductor, Mr. W. G. Cousins. The band and chorus, consisting of upwards of 170 performers, were selected from the Philharmonic and Sacred Harmonic Societies, and the Royal Italian Opera, together with her Majesty's band.

The last of her Majesty's Lévees for the season will be held by the Prince of Wales on the 17th inst.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince's life is a busy one, and the past week has been no exception. His Royal Highness and the Princess, with the Crown Prince of Denmark, accompanied Princess Louise of Lorne to Euston Station, on Thursday week, to take leave on her departure for Canada. The Prince presided the same evening at the annual dinner of the 10th (Prince of Wales's Own Royal) Hussars at the Marlborough Rooms, Regent-street, and the next day he dined at the annual dinner of the Rifle Brigade (the Prince Consort's Own), given at the same place. The Crown Prince of Denmark brought his visit to a close last Saturday, the Prince and Princess accompanying him to Victoria Station on his return to Copenhagen. Their Royal Highnesses, with their daughters, attended Divine service on Sunday, at the Chapel Royal, St. James's. On Monday, the Prince and Princess went to Leicester to open the new People's Park, named the Abbey Park. The Prince on his return presided at the annual dinner of the 2nd Life Guards, at the residence of the Marquis of Abergavenny in Dover-street. His Royal Highness and the Princess, with Princesses Victoria and Maud, visited the Horse Show at the Agricultural Hall on Tuesday. The Prince left town afterwards for Great Yarmouth, returning for the celebration of her Majesty's birthday. The Princess, who remained at Marlborough House, went to the performance of "Adrienne Lecouvreur" at the Gaiety Theatre.

Prince and Princess Christian went on a short visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Salisbury last Saturday.

The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh lunched with the Duke and Duchess of Albany at Claremont on Whit Monday.

The Duke of Albany, president of the Royal Society of Literature, has accepted the invitation of the council to dine with the Fellows of that body. Next Monday his Royal Highness will visit Eton College and inaugurate the memorial of the Etonian officers slain during the Afghan and South African campaigns; the remainder of the week will be passed by their Royal Highnesses at Coworth Park, Summingdale, for Ascot Races. On the 26th the Prince and Princess go to Hastings and St. Leonards-on-Sea on their charitable mission; and on July 8 they will visit the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage at Strawberry Hill. His Royal Highness was represented at the funeral of the Duke of Grafton by Lord Colville of Culross.

Mr. Francis Darwin is collecting his late father's letters as material for a biography, and will be much obliged to those possessing letters written by the late Mr. Darwin who may be willing to lend them for this purpose. Mr. Darwin's address is Down, Beckenham.

Albert Young, charged with writing a letter containing a threat to kill the Queen and other members of the Royal family, was found guilty yesterday week at the Central Criminal Court and sentenced to ten years' penal servitude. The jury recommended the prisoner to mercy on account of his youth.

A concert was given at the Royal Victoria Coffee Hall, on Thursday evening, by the Hon. Mrs. Newdegate, the songs and glee being selected solely from Shakespeare's plays; and Locke's music to "Macbeth" was sung, accompanied by full orchestral band. Scenes from the third and fifth acts of "Othello" were given in character.

The Emperor of Germany has forwarded a gold chronometer to the German Consul at Hull as a reward to Captain William Simpson, of that port, for saving the lives of seven of his Majesty's subjects at sea; and also £20 to the crews of two Hull fishing-smacks for rescuing two crews of German ships in the recent gales.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

ITALY.

On Tuesday the Senate approved the bill for the prolongation of the commercial treaties, as well as the resolutions prescribing the course to be adopted in future as regarded such treaties. The Chamber of Deputies has approved a bill for organising rifle competitions; and a bill has been presented to provide for 2,000,000 lire (£80,000) annually for eight years, to be expended in works at the arsenals of Spezia, Venice, and Tarento.

SPAIN.

At a Cabinet Council held in Madrid yesterday week it was decided to reduce the tariffs immediately to a certain extent; to effect a further reduction in five years, subject to the reciprocity of other nations, and the opinion of the Spanish industrial classes; and a further reduction, making 15 per cent in all, in ten years. The Minister of Finance stated that the bondholders of London, Paris, and Amsterdam were disposed to accept the conversion of the debt.

The Madrid Official Gazette of Tuesday has published the law relating to the conversion of the consolidated debt. It gives to the holders of the exterior debt six months to accept the scheme, allowing a small percentage to those who present their bonds for conversion within two months.

On Tuesday the Chamber of Deputies adopted the bill regulating the commercial relations of Spain with her colonies.

In opening a Congress of School Teachers at Madrid on Sunday, the King declared his determination to assist in raising the standard of Spanish professors to that of European nations generally.

Small bands of Carlist rebels have appeared in Catalonia, and symptoms of a rising are reported in the Basque provinces; but these movements are not deemed important.

PORTUGAL.

On Monday the Chamber of Deputies adopted the commercial convention conceding to England the most favoured nation treatment, and abolishing the exemption of British subjects residing in Portugal from taxation.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

The Emperor of Austria, in an autograph letter to Count Beust, has granted his request to be relieved from his post of Ambassador in Paris and placed upon the retired list. The Emperor at the same time expresses the most grateful appreciation of the Count's services.

At the annual meeting of the Vienna Imperial Academy of Sciences, last week, Sir Henry Rawlinson was elected a foreign honorary member, in place of the late Mr. Darwin.

Johann Richter, shoemaker, and editor of a Social Democratic paper, has been convicted at Vienna of high treason, and sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment, with hard labour.

GERMANY.

Prince Alexander, who is believed to be the bearer of an autograph letter from the Czar to the German Emperor, arrived in Berlin on Thursday week, and went with his Majesty to a review at Potsdam. Prince Bismarck is improving in health.

RUSSIA.

The Emperor on Sunday paid a visit to St. Petersburg, in order to be present at the fête of the Ismailoff Regiment of the Guards.

Reports come from St. Petersburg, by way of Berlin, that the Czar has decided on a policy of conciliation and reform. One commission has been appointed to inquire as to the expediency of developing local institutions, and various others are in process of formation. General Loris Melikoff apparently takes the lead in this "new departure."

AMERICA.

A banquet was given on the 24th ult. at the British Legation at Washington in honour of the birthday of Queen Victoria.

The Senate has passed the bill for the distribution of the balance of the Geneva Award Fund among the sufferers from the Confederate cruisers and claimants who paid war premiums, thus reviving the Alabama Court. The Court is to make the distribution. The bill passed in the form already settled by the House, and it now goes to the President. The Senate rejected an amendment admitting underwriters to share in the amount awarded. This disposes of a controversy which had been before Congress ever since England paid the award.

The Foreign Committee of the House of Representatives have agreed to recommend an appropriation of 50,000 dollars to defray the cost of sending American exhibits to the coming Fish Exhibition in London.

The Central Council of the Irish National Land League has issued an address stating that since the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke there has been a great decrease in the subscriptions in America, and appealing urgently for renewed efforts in order to raise its funds.

CANADA.

Queen Victoria's birthday was appropriately celebrated throughout the Dominion.

Mr. Carling has been sworn in as Postmaster-General, and Mr. Costigan as Minister of Inland Revenue, in succession to Mr. Aikins, who is expected to be appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba. It is stated that Sir Alexander Galt will enter the Cabinet as Finance Minister; Sir S. L. Tilley, who at present holds that post, replacing him as High Commissioner for the Dominion in London.

A violent earthquake took place on the island of Fayal, one of the Azores, on the 3rd ult. Churches, public buildings, and several houses were destroyed.

The Government of South Australia mean to have a railway constructed at once from Port Darwin to Pine Creek, a distance of 120 miles.

A new palace has been erected, at a cost of over a million dollars, for the King of Siam, and 400 tons of furniture, valued at half a million dollars, have arrived to be placed in it.

A collision between two passenger-trains occurred on Tuesday morning near Heidelberg, by which eight passengers were killed and many others injured.

The Cape Government Emigration Agent has sent out to the colony during the month of May 620 emigrants. In the corresponding month of last year 225 were sent out. The total number sent since Jan. 1 is 1967, against 1236 in the corresponding period of last year.

An extraordinary tricycle journey has been accomplished by the vice-president of the Lyons Bicycle Club, accompanied by his wife, on a two-seated "machine." The travellers went from Lyons, through Nice, Genoa, and Rome, to Naples, returning via Florence and Turin, the whole journey representing a distance of some 2300 miles.

The Daily News correspondent at Maritzburg telegraphs that John Dunn having summoned his chiefs to assemble they refused, but named a day when they were going to meet the British Resident, and told him to be present if he had anything to say to them. The situation, the Correspondent adds, is highly critical, and serious bloodshed might occur at any moment, though he believes the Zulus will be slow to begin.

FINE ARTS.

The concluding notice of the Royal Academy Exhibition is unavoidably held over till next week.

A loan exhibition of Scandinavian Industrial Art has been organised in the "Lord President's Court" of the South Kensington Museum. The examples date from the earliest period to the present time, and many have been liberally contributed from public and private collections in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark. The exhibition affords ample illustrations of the various phases of a little-known national art that is masculine, spirited, and quaint, rich and elaborate, and that seems, curiously enough, to reveal Oriental influence. Its earliest characteristics were probably derived from the Byzantine through the Romanesque, by way of the great northward channel of the Rhine.

The two fine pictures by Mdlle. Rosa Bonheur, "On the Alert" and "A Foraging Party," which we reviewed on their exhibition last season at Mr. Lefevre's gallery, in King-street, St. James's, have been etched by Mr. A. Gilbert, and are now published by Mr. Lefevre. Mr. Gilbert accomplished his difficult task admirably; the textures of the animals, in particular, are rendered with rare spirit and decision; in short, the etchings are worthy at once of the painter, the engraver, and the house from which they are issued. Mr. Lefevre has also published a capital etching by Victor Lhuillier from "Brothers of the Brush," the quaint picture by Eyre Crowe, exhibited at the Academy in 1873, representing house painters at work on a tall ladder.

Messrs. Dowdeswell have added in their gallery in Bond-street, to De Neuville's "Cemetery of St. Privat," the exhibition of which we have already announced, two recently painted pictures by the same distinguished French battle-painter, and equally worthy of him, representing "Saving the Queen's Colours at Isandula," and "The Last Sleep of the Brave" (Messrs. Coghill and Melville). These new works are reproduced in "facsimile colour" by the National Fine-Art Association.

Messrs. Mansell and Co., of Oxford-street, are publishing a series of photographic reproductions of the greater portion of the "Liber Studiorum" drawings, taken from the original, and also of the "England and Wales." The announcement will be welcome to lovers of Turner, and we need not add that photography is never so successfully employed as in reproducing works in monochrome.

Mr. Dunthorne, of Vigo-street, Regent-street, has issued a very charming addition to the collection of modern etchings. It is by John Park, after Hamilton Macallum's picture, entitled "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," exhibited in the Royal Academy in 1880. The etcher has been very successful in reproducing the luminous effect of the picture.

Sir P. Cunliffe Owen distributed the prizes to the successful students in the Female School of Art last week at Freemasons' Hall. During the past year the students won twelve national awards in competition with all the schools of art. The students who had received instruction in the various branches of art education numbered 203. Among the numerous prizes were the following:—The Queen's Gold Medal to Miss Mary E. Harding; the Queen's Scholarship to Constance Wood; the Clothworkers' Scholarship of 20 guineas, Mary E. Harding; the Gilchrist Scholarship of £50, Ottillie A. Bodé; Ditto medal, Lilian Abraham; and the Baroness Burdett-Coutts Scholarship, Dora Crittenden. The National Silver medals were awarded to Florence Reason, Ethel Chapman, and Mary E. Carter.

The Report of the Liverpool Autumn Exhibition, 1881, has been issued. The admissions were considerably fewer than in the preceding year, but the sales amounted to £12,210 11s., as against £11,753 7s. 6d., in 1880, and were only exceeded in 1875. Out of the sum of £2000 voted for Art Expenditure by the City Council was purchased Mr. D. G. Rossetti's "Dante's Dream," and, owing to the large price of this work, only two other pictures were purchased by the Corporation—viz., "Market Place, Verona," in tempera, by J. O'Connor, and "Landscape," in water-colours, by J. McDougal.

A literary and scientific institute, museum, and school of art was inaugurated at Berwick-on-Tweed last Tuesday by Colonel Milne-Holme, M.P., and Mr. Jerningham, M.P., assisted by the Mayor and Corporation.

On Wednesday morning the Mayor of Cardiff, accompanied by Sir E. J. Reed, M.P., declared the new Free Library building open. The cost of erection has been £9000. Among the contributors to the art gallery was the late Mr. Menelaus, whose gifts represent a monetary value of £10,000, while Sir E. J. Reed, M.P., has given a picture worth £1000.

An exhibition of works of modern artists, consisting of drawings in black-and-white and water-colour, and oil paintings, executed, with one or two exceptions, only for Messrs. Cassell, Petter, and Galpin's numerous illustrated publications, will be opened on June 1 on the premises of that house, in Belle Sauvage-yard. A spacious and well-lighted room has been devoted to the display of this selection, numbering altogether 537 works, the majority of which are original productions.

The Horners' Company of London, with a view of encouraging technical education, have, with the permission of the Lord Mayor, decided to hold an Exhibition of Articles Ancient and Modern, whether British or foreign, made of horn, or of which horn is a component part, but excluding works in ivory, bone, or tortoiseshell, at the Mansion House, on Oct. 18, 19, and 20 next. Prizes will be given to exhibitors being members of the trade.

The new libraries buildings at Birmingham were opened on Thursday.

The annual Caledonian fancy-dress ball is fixed to take place at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Monday, the 19th inst.

The members of the 2nd Life Guards Club held their annual regimental dinner at 34, Dover-street (the Marquis of Abergavenny's), on Monday evening. The Prince of Wales, Colonel in Chief of the regiment, dined with the company.

About seventy Jewish emigrants from Russia arrived in London last Saturday to proceed to America by the aid of the Jewish relief committees. Among them are whole families who had lost everything they possessed.

In our recent notice of the lamented deaths of Mr. W. S. Dugdale, of Merevale Hall, Warwickshire, and Mr. Pogmore and his son, from injuries suffered by them in attempting to rescue the men underground at the Baxterley Colliery, near Atherstone, the total number of lives sacrificed to that brave and generous effort was considerably underrated. We are informed that thirty-nine volunteers went down the shaft, of whom thirty-three were more or less severely burnt, and twenty-three have died. Eight men and a boy were already entombed in the colliery, and these have also perished. A fund is being subscribed for the relief of their destitute families; and the Rev. T. J. C. Gardner, of Baddeley Vicarage, Atherstone, will receive contributions to this fund.

THE ST. GOTHARD RAILWAY.

The grand international festivities of Switzerland, Germany, and Italy, upon the occasion of the opening of the St. Gothard Railway from Lucerne to Milan, terminated on Wednesday last week, having commenced on Sunday, as was stated in our last publication. Those English readers who desire a concise and authentic report upon the great engineering works of this line may be recommended to procure from Messrs. E. and F. N. Spon, of Charing-cross, a pamphlet written last year by Mr. C. G. Ethelston, civil engineer, who had carefully inspected the works and obtained correct official information upon all points of detail. Two plans in outline, showing respectively the north and the south approach to the great Alpine tunnel, form part of Mr. Ethelston's pamphlet; showing the spiral tunnels of Pfaffensprung, Wittingen, and Leggistein, with the extraordinary windings and turnings of the line near Wasen; and those of Freggio, Pizzo, Piano Rotondo, and Travi, on the Italian side. These ascending spirals, cut in the heart of the mountain masses, are even more wonderful than the main tunnel from Goeschenen to Airolo, which is nine miles and a quarter in length. We should advise every traveller who means this year to go by the St. Gothard to furnish himself with Mr. Ethelston's brief description, and also with one of the new German maps of the railway. Our illustration this week shows the scenery of the Maderan Valley, between Amsteg and Wasen, going up the Reuss from Altdorf towards the Alpine passes.

HORSE-RACING IN SIBERIA.

Our Special Artist lately travelling in Siberia, Mr. A. Larsen, whose Sketches of a more recent journey in search of the survivors of the Jeannette Arctic expedition have appeared in this Journal, had before then supplied us with a variety of other illustrations of the scenery and the people of Asiatic Russia. Irkutsk, the capital of Siberia, situated on the banks of the rivers Angara and Irkut, sixty versts from the shore of Lake Baikal, reminded him of London in one particular—namely, that it was a city enveloped in fog; but this is only in autumn and in winter, as soon as the lake is frozen the air becomes delightfully clear. Winter at Irkutsk, as in Canada, is the season of sport and pleasure, in spite of the cold, which is less disagreeably felt than in our English climate. The Irkutsk horse-races, of which Mr. Larsen furnishes an illustration, are conducted in a manner different from that to which we are accustomed in this country. Instead of the horses being ridden, they are driven in a sledge; but though a pair of horses are seen attached to this vehicle, only one of them is pulling; the other is urged to gallop merely for the example and encouragement of the horse which draws the sledge. If the sineure galloper should become idle or troublesome, or his example seem to be needless, the driver can easily cast him loose and go on with a single horse. The training for a race is very severe, and takes at least three weeks; it would kill most English horses. The animal is frequently ridden till it is covered with sweat, and is then left, tied up in the open field, under the sharp night frost, probably to harden its muscles. Not a drop of water is given during forty-eight hours before the race. The horse which has run before knows that the race is coming on, by a particular sign that accompanies this singular treatment; the hair of the head, between the ears, as well as the tail, being tied up in a leather strap. It is believed that the horse will feel incited by pride and ambition to do his very best against all competitors to win the race. The Governor-General of Siberia usually presides, with a brilliant staff of attendant officers, at the Irkutsk races, and will sometimes act as judge or umpire.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT YARMOUTH.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, on Wednesday last, opened the New Municipal Buildings at Great Yarmouth, of which an illustration appears, with many other views of the town and neighbourhood, in this number of our Journal. The Prince, accompanied by Colonel Teesdale and Admiral the Hon. Sir Henry Keppel, arrived from London about seven o'clock on Tuesday evening. He was met at the Southtown Station by Lord Suffield, the Hon. H. C. Denison, Colonel Miller, and Lieutenant Wilson; and drove at once to the residence of Mr. S. Nightingale, Shadingfold Lodge, South Beach, where he stayed the night. The town of Yarmouth had prepared a festive welcome for his Royal Highness; triumphal arches were erected outside the railway station, and along the route to South Beach there was a prouise display of bunting. The streets were thronged with persons anxious to obtain a glimpse of the Prince, and the cheering was loud and hearty. The Prince dined with the officers of the Norfolk Artillery Militia, and subsequently visited the local aquarium, where the London Gaiety Company appeared in one of their popular burlesques.

The New Municipal Buildings, which were inaugurated next day, are shown in one of our illustrations. They have been erected at a cost of about £30,000, the contractors being Messrs. J. W. Lacey and Sons, of Norwich, and the architect Mr. J. B. Pearce, also of Norwich. The new buildings will be used for the transaction of local public business of various descriptions. The entrance-hall is 80 ft. by 24 ft., and is exceedingly handsome. The court-room, for the holding of the quarter sessions, is 49 ft. by 32 ft., and every care has been taken in the construction of this compartment, the ventilation being excellent and the acoustic properties good. The assembly-room is, of course, the main attraction of the hall. It is lofty, and is 100 ft. long by 45 ft. wide, accommodation being provided for about 500 persons. The police court is 37 ft. by 32 ft. A platform at the east will be for the magistrates, the public sitting at the north; whilst the arrangements for the solicitors, witnesses, and others are satisfactory. All the courts are fitted up with pitch pine.

The opening ceremony was performed by the Prince of Wales at noon on Wednesday. Among those present with his Royal Highness were Lord Suffield, Count Herbert Bismarck, the Lord Mayor of London and the Lady Mayoress, the Mayors of Scarborough and of other provincial towns. The Prince was met at the main entrance by the Mayor of Yarmouth and the building committee, and was presented with a silver key. Having unlocked the door, the Prince, with the other distinguished guests, proceeded to the sessions court, where his Royal Highness was presented with an illuminated address bound in red morocco. The Prince made a suitable reply. Luncheon was afterwards served in the large hall.

Lord Derby, at the half-yearly audit of his Cheshire estates, returned to his tenants 20 per cent of their rent; and Sir Charles Legard has returned 15 per cent of the half-year's rents to his tenants on the Ganton and other estates.

Next Monday Messrs. Alfred Reed and Corney Grain will produce at St. George's Hall, Langham-place, a new piece by Arthur Law and Hamilton Clark, entitled "Nobody's Fault;" and Mr. Corney Grain will give, for the first time, his new musical sketch for the season, entitled "Small and Early."

OPENING OF THE ST. GOTHARD RAILWAY: VIADUCT ON THE MADERAN VALLEY.—SEE PAGE 543.

OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN SIBERIA: HORSE-RACING AT IRKUTSK.—SEE PAGE 543.

YOUNG GIRLS OF CAPRI GOING TO THE SPRING. BY J. BENNER.

COU! COU! OR BLIND MAN'S BUFF. BY C. BELLANGER.

AUDOVERE REPUDIATED. BY A. MAIGNAN.

FIELD LABOUR (PART OF A DECORATIVE FRIEZE). BY J. DIDIER.

HOMER. A FRAGMENT, BY LECOMTE DU NOUY.

IRELAND.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, replying on Thursday week to an address from Cork, expressed the earnest hope that the improvement already to be observed in the state of the country would increase, and that it would not be needful to employ the severer powers which the Government had found it their duty to ask for. But it would be his duty, if crime and illegal combination continued, to enforce the law vigorously, though calmly and impartially. It would be his first duty to try to restore confidence, but he could only succeed in this if those who desired the prosperity of Ireland would assert their independence and aid the Government to establish order.

Earl Spencer received deputations last Saturday from the Royal Horticultural Society and the Royal Irish Academy; and in reply to their addresses said that the injury done to Ireland by the terrible deed perpetrated on the day of his return had been very great. The knowledge he had of Irishmen led him to the belief that the mass of people in the country shared in the hatred of the crimes recently committed. He said the objects the Government had at heart were to free all classes from the bane of illegal combinations, and to give honest men the privilege of living peaceably with their neighbours.

In the course of his reply to a deputation from the Limerick Corporation at Dublin Castle, on Tuesday, Lord Spencer said he hoped soon to be able to release the last suspect from jail. His Lordship added an appeal to the Irish people to assist in checking and punishing outrages as well as intimidation.

A field-day was held in Dublin on Tuesday, preparatory to the Queen's Birthday Review, which is to take place to-day (Saturday), and all the troops in garrison marched to Phoenix Park, where the Lord Lieutenant and the Chief Secretary inspected them. The force included five infantry regiments with the Coldstream Guards, two cavalry regiments, and three batteries of artillery. Earl Spencer had an escort of mounted dragoons, while the Chief Secretary was protected by a number of police in plain clothes. Countess Spencer was present.

Replying to an address presented to him in Dublin yesterday week, Cardinal McCabe denounced in the strongest possible terms the Phoenix Park murders. He believed, he said, they had been planned abroad, and carried out by imported assassins; but the fact was that they were still at large, and it might be were still in Dublin. Archbishop McCabe was on Monday enthroned as Cardinal in the Roman Catholic Cathedral in Dublin, and in replying to addresses subsequently presented to him he expressed his belief that, in spite of the ominous shadows which now loomed over Ireland, there was yet a bright future in store for it.

Government have offered a reward of £2000 for information leading to the arrest of the murderers of Mrs. H. Smythe, in the county of Westmeath, on April 2.

The Gazette announces that the Queen has granted unto William Lehman Ashmead Burdett-Coutts-Bartlett-Coutts her Royal license and authority to be called and known by the names of William Lehman Ashmead Burdett-Coutts-Bartlett-Coutts.

The exhibition of rhododendrons by John Waterer and Sons will again be held in the gardens of Cadogan-place, Sloane-street. The exhibition will open on Monday next.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST AND WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office, Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 20s. Build Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 40s. engraved, 3s. 6d. — F. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX OF STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 50 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order. — F. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISING CARDS by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 6d. post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate Wedding Cards, 50 each, 20 Envelopes, 40s. engraved, 3s. 6d. — F. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's Inn) Heraldic Office send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on seals, Dies, Illuminated Addresses, Silk Banners, &c. — F. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1875.

VITREMANIE, superseding Diaphanie. A new and inexpensive method of decorating windows in churches, public buildings, and private houses, by which may be produced the rich colouring and beautiful designs equal in appearance to real stained glass. Hand-book of Designs and full instructions, 1s. 6d. Boxes, containing designs, &c., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d. Particulars post-free. Sole inventors, J. BARNARD and SON, 23, Abchurch-lane, London, W.

CHROMOPHOTOGRAPHY. (KRAUS' PROCESS). The New Art (embracing any person without previous knowledge of either Painting or Drawing) to Colour Photographs on convex glasses, in imitation of China and Enamel Painting. Boxes containing every requisite, 2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d. Particulars post-free. Spectacles on application at the Sole Agents, J. BARNARD and SON, 23, Abchurch-lane, London, W.

OSLER'S SHOW-ROOMS, 100, OXFORD-STREET, W.

CHINA DINNER, DESSERT, TEA, and BREAKFAST SERVICES. Glass Dinner and Dessert Services, Chandeliers and Wall Lights, LAMPS, LUSTRES, VASES, FLOWER STANDS, TABLE DECORATIONS.

CHINA, GLASS, and FAHIAN ORNAMENTS OF ALL KINDS. Sole Agents for the Venice and Murano Glass Company.

OSLER MANUFACTORY, BIRMINGHAM. Show-rooms: 100, OXFORD-STREET, W.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

CHATTO and WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS. Full Lists free by post.

NEW WORK BY MARK TWAIN.
THE STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT, &c. By MARK TWAIN. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. (uniform in size and binding with "A Tramp Abroad"). (June 10.)

OUIDA'S NEW STORIES.
BIMBI: Stories for Children. By OUIDA. Small 4to, cloth extra, cinnamon edges, 7s. 6d.

MRS. RIDDELL'S NEW STORIES.
THE PRINCE OF WALES'S GARDEN PARTY, and other Stories. By Mrs. J. H. RIDDELL. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE'S NEW NOVEL.
PRINCE SARONI'S WIFE, and other Stories. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE. 2 vols., crown 8vo. At every Library.

ROBERT BUCHANAN'S NEW NOVEL.
THE MARTYRDOM OF MADELINE. By ROBERT BUCHANAN, Author of "God and Man," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo. At every Library.

CHRISTIE MURRAY'S NEW STORIES.
COALS OF FIRE, and other STORIES. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo. At every Library.

CHARLES READE'S NOVELS. Now ready. New and cheaper Editions, crown 8vo, cloth extra, illustrated, 3s. 6d. each:—
A TERRIBLE TEMPTATION. By CHARLES READE.
THE WANDERING HEIR. By CHARLES READE.
THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH. By CHARLES READE.
THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A THIEF. By CHARLES READE.
TRADES AND JAMES LAMBERT. By CHARLES READE.
IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND. By CHARLES READE.
Also, New and Uniform Editions of all Charles Reade's other Novels.

Second Edition. 3 vols., crown 8vo, cloth extra, 24s.
THE LIFE OF GEORGE CRUIKSHANK. By BLANCHARD JERBOLE. With numerous illustrations. "The personal anecdotes are plentiful and to the point, and the illustrations are numerous and good. The volumes form an entertaining biography, not the less readable for not being strictly consecutive."—Standard.

Two vols., crown 8vo, cloth extra, 21s.
RECREATIONS OF A LITERARY MAN; or, Does Writing Pay? With Recollections of some Literary Men, and a View of a Literary Man's Working Life. By PERCY FITZGERALD. "A book which is interesting from beginning to end."—St. James's Gazette.

ONLY 25 COPIES FOR SALE. ALL NUMBERED. Large 4to, cloth boards, the illustrations carefully printed on India paper, price 42s. (Specimens may be seen at all Booksellers.)

RAMBLES ROUND ETON AND HARROW. By ALFRED KIMMER. With 50 fine illustrations by the Author. Also, an Edition in square 8vo, cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d. London: CHATTO and WINDUS, Piccadilly, W.

"WHICH WINS." BY AUTHOR OF "WHITEFRIARS." Entirely New Edition, price 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.; postage, 6d.
WHICH WINS, LOVE OR MONEY? A Novel. By the Author of "Whitefriars," &c. London: J. and R. MAXWELL, Milton House, Shoe-lane.

Now ready (One Shilling), No. 270.
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for JUNE. With illustrations by George Du Maurier and W. Small.

CONTENTS.
No New Thing. (With an Illustration.) Chap. VI.—The Wanderer's Return. VII.—Colonel Kenyon Looks On. A French Axiom. The Merry Men. Chap. I.—Ellen Aros. II.—What the Wreck had Brought to Aros. III.—Lad and Leo in Sanding Bay. Morgante Maggiore. Names of Flowers. Recollections of a Tour in Brittany. Dances. By the Author of "For Percival." (With an Illustration.) Chap. VIII.—Goodbye. IX.—Alone. London: SMITH, ELDER, and CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE. No. 272. For JUNE. Price 1s.

CONTENTS OF THE NUMBER.
Fortune's Fool. By Julian Hawthorne. Chapters XXV.—XXVIII. The Roman Consul of the Svalbard. By T. Hodgkin. Three Months' Holiday in Norway. By E. A. Arnold. Poem. By May Probyn. County Government. By J. Taylor Kay. A Hungarian Report on English Education. By A. J. Patterson. Scotch Famine. By William McQueen. Egypt.—1. Cairo in April, 1882. By Sahib-el-Hag. 2. An Egyptian Prison. By Percy A. Barnett. MACMILLAN and CO., London.

TIME for JUNE now Publishing.
THE SPA OF THE PEAK: A Paper on Buxton and its Waters. Fortia, by By Lassons Lockwood. New Novel. By the Author of "Phyllis," "Mrs. Geoffrey," &c.
Concerning Certain Literary "Tanks" and "Fountains." A Lay of the Lowther Arcade. By Henry S. Leigh.
The Age of Electricity. Part III.—Telegraphy. By William Henry Preece, F.R.S.
Allerton Towers. A Novel. By Annie Thomas (Mrs. Pender Clapp).
By the Waters of Babylon. By John H. Baker Hopkins, Author of "Nihilism," or "The Terror Unleashed."
Ninety-eight and Eighty-two: The Lesson of the Tragedy. Lui-et-Elle.
The Old Inns of London, with Four Illustrations. By the Subjunctive.
Bummer. By B. Montgomerie Rankin, with an Illustration. London: KELLY and CO., 51, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn-fields.

THE ART JOURNAL for JUNE, 2s. 6d.
ILLUSTRATED PAPERIES: Mr. Seymour Haden's Etchings, by Frederick Wedmore. The City of Tours, by Mrs. Alfred Hunt. Examples of Artistic Metal Work. Childhood and Art, by J. H. Pollen.

THE ART JOURNAL for JUNE, 2s. 6d.
PLATES: "Isabella," by J. E. Millais, R.A., engraved by H. Burne. "A Bientôt," by Val Prinsep, A.R.A., etched by Leopold Flaming. Lord Beaconsfield, from a Statue by Lord Ronald Gower.

THE ART JOURNAL for JUNE, 2s. 6d.
ESSAYS: Drawing and Engraving on Wood, by Hubert Herkomer, A.R.A. Sir J. S. and A. Museum, by Alan S. Cook. The Exhibition of the Royal Academy. The Water-Colour Exhibitions, Art Notes, Reviews, &c. 2s. 6d. London, and of all Booksellers.

MESSER'S BRITISH WILD FLOWERS. A New and Rapid Method of Studying Wild Flowers by Analytical Illustrations. "We cordially recommend it."—Journal of Horticulture. Cloth, 1s. 6d.
D. Rogers, St. Martin's-place, Trafalgar-square, W.C.

"The more Mr. Morgan's Guide is known, the wider we feel sure, will its popularity become."—Daily Chronicle.
Newly bound in cloth, price 2s.; or, with gilt edges, price 2s. 6d.

WHIST PLAYER'S GUIDE. By H. F. MORGAN, late Captain 25th Regiment. To be obtained at all Booksellers and Stationers.
MARCUS WARD and CO., Publishers, London and Belfast.

SUMMER CATARRH, or HAY FEVER: Its Causes, Symptoms, and Treatment. By GEORGE MOORE, M.D. 1s. 6d. or 12 stamps by post.
JAMES EYRE and CO., 170, Piccadilly; and 48, Threadneedle-street.

DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A small pamphlet on these distressing complaints and their complete cures. Published by the Author, RICHARD KIDGLEY, 51, St. Paul's Churchyard, N.E., 25, Warwick-st., Rugby.

By Dr. BARR MEADOWS, Physician to the National Institution for Diseases of the Skin. Ninth Edition, post-free, 3s. 6d. stamps.
ERUPTIONS; their Rational Treatment. London: G. HILL, 151, Westminster Bridge-road.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

Now ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.,
A FAITHFUL LOVER. By Mrs. MACQUOID. Author of "Patty," &c.
DUNOVAN. By EDNA LYALL, Author of "Won by Waiting."
IRIS. By Mrs. RANDOLPH. Author of "Gentiana."
A BROKEN LILY. By Mrs. MORTIMER COLLINS.
THE RAKERS OF REGENT'S PARK. By JOHN COUDY JEFFRESON. Second Edition.
REDEEMED. By SHIRLEY SMITH, Author of "His Last Stake," &c.
Hunt and Blackett, Publishers, 15, Great Marlborough-street.

RHODODENDRONS.—JOHN WATERER and SONS, of Bagshot, Surrey, beg to announce their EXHIBITION of the above is NOW ON VIEW Daily at the Gardens of Cadogan-place, Sloane-street.

BREIDENBACH'S
ALBANY BOUQUET.

Distilled in honour of the marriage of H.R.H. the Duke of Albany. Price 2s. 6d. to 21s. per Bottle.
BREIDENBACH and CO., Perfumers to Her Majesty the Queen, 157a, New Bond-street, W.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR.
If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers every where, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath.
Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalcules," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke; being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants, it is perfectly delicious to the taste, and as harmless as slerry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORAL BELL LIQUID DENTIFRICE.
Superiority and excellence over all. Unequaled for Cleansing, Preserving, and Beautifying the Teeth and Gums. It removes tartar, hinders the enamel, arrests decay, and imparts to the breath, under all circumstances, a most delightful fragrance. A few drops on the brush night and morning is all sufficient. Use only Floral Bell Liquid Dentifrice. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers. Price 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

LIFE, GROWTH, and BEAUTY for the HAIR. MELROSE FAVORITE HAIR RESTORER.—Supplies everything to keep and restore a beautiful head of hair. Nature's Luscious Crown Melrose is not a dye. Use Melrose if your hair is grey or white. Use Melrose if your hair is falling out and to remove dandruff. Use Melrose to give luxuriant growth and to prevent baldness. Sold in two sizes, at 2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d., by Chemists and Perfumers.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific: after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unparalleled as a dressing: it causes growth, arrests falling, and it is a delicate detacher. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free.—Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

ROBARE'S AUROLINE, or GOLDEN HAIR WASH. For producing the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 3s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.—Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

PRATT'S WATER PAD TRUSSES are the MOST EFFECTUAL CURE FOR RUPTURES. PRATT'S ELASTIC STOCKINGS, for VARICOSE VEINS, &c.
Surgical Mechanician to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, 43 (late 42), OXFORD-STREET, LONDON.

THE CELEBRATED LOUIS VELVETEEN.
The wear of every yard guaranteed.
E. CON, SONS, and STAFFORD, 163 to 166, Western-road, Brighton.
Patterns post-free.
Every yard of the genuine bears the name "LOUIS."

MADAME ELLIOT makes up DRESSES stylishly and elegantly. Stylish Costumes ready for wear, from 3s. to 12 guineas.
8, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street.

MADAME ELLIOT'S CORSETS. Splendid Shape. French and English make, 3s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 15s. 6d., 21s. 6d., 28s. 6d. To avoid delay, send size of waist and Foot-office for the amount. Corsets exchanged if not approved. Corsets made to order; also, Corsets made for every figure (embonpoint, deformities, curvatures, spinal complaints, &c.). Also Specialties in Ladies' Tournures, Tournure-Jupons, Grindinettes, &c.—8, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street.

LOUIS VELVETEEN. F. CATER and CO., 133 to 136, Finsbury-pavement, supply all quantities of this CELEBRATED VELVETEEN, in Black and all Spring Colours. Patterns post-free. The wear of every yard guaranteed.

CLEAN YOUR GLOVES, CLEAN YOUR DRESSES, CLEAN EVERYTHING WITH BENZINE COLLAS, which is the best article for removing Grease, Oil, Tar, Paint, and all fatty substances from Silks, Satins, Ribbons, Cloths, Furniture, &c. See the word "Collas" on the label and cap—none other are genuine. To be had of all Chemists. Price 6d., 1s., and 1s. 6d. per Bottle, from the Sole Wholesale Proprietors.

FLIES.
MYOCOM FLY GUM KEEPS ROOMS ENTIRELY CLEAR OF FLIES. Sold in 1s. Boxes by all Chemists and Grocers, or a Sample post-free 1s. 2d. from the Sole Wholesale Proprietors.
T. CHRISTY and CO., 155, Fenchurch-street, London.

"KEATING'S POWDER" kills BUGS, Moths, Fleas, Beetles, and all insects (perfectly unvalued). Harmless to everything but insects. Thus, 6d. and 1s.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS, THE GREAT REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM. Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 6d. per Box.

THROW PHYSIO TO THE DOGS. A correspondent writes to ask me which I consider the best medicine for a "confirmed dyspeptic subject." To induce me to "induce" a "confirmed dyspeptic subject" (I don't know which it is, for only initials have been used as a signature), I am not a doctor, neither do I profess to know anything at all about the British Pharmacopoeia. When advised to take this or that nostrum for any little ailment, I always quote Shakespeare, "Throw physic to the dogs: I'll none of it." And I would say the same to my present interlocutor. ENO'S FRUIT SALT is the only thing in the way of medicine I indulge in; and though it may sound something like a puff, yet I find that it is all I require to keep me in health, provided I also remember St. Paul's advice to be temperate in all things.—Pictorial World, Feb. 25, 1882, "Notes on Men and Things."

CAUTION.—Legal rights are protected in every civilized country. Examine each bottle, and see the capsule is marked "ENO'S Fruit Salt." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists. Price 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. Directions in sixteen languages how to prevent disease. Protection in every country. Prepared and Bottled by J. C. ENO, Fruit Salt Works, Hatfield, London, S.E.; by J. C. ENO'S Patent.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.

SUBSTANTIAL ARTISTIC FURNITURE (Regd.)

OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD,
NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.—OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, and 79, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, near Tottenham-court-road, London. CARPETS, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishings, Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, Photos, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout. Lowest prices consistent with guaranteed quality. OETZMANN and CO.

OETZMANN and CO.'S BED-ROOM SUITES.—One of the largest and best assortments in the Kingdom to select from, displayed in Show-rooms 22ft. long, with beds and bedding fitted up for inspection. Bed-room Suite, consisting of Wardrobe, Chest of Drawers, Washstand, Toilet Table and Glass, Towel Alirer, Three Chairs, and Pedestal Cupboard, from 54 guineas, complete. Some new and elegant designs at 15, 18, and 21 guineas. Large and handsomely decorated bed-room Suits in ash, pitch pine, and other woods, at 28, 33, 50, and 75 guineas; also in black and gold, and walnut and gold, 50 guineas upwards.—OETZMANN and CO.

THE "CANTERBURY" EARLY ENGLISH DINING-ROOM SUITE. 20 Guineas, in solid American Walnut or Oak, consisting of a Sideboard with two drawers and cupboards, with bevelled plate-glass back; an extending Dining-Table, Six Chairs, and Two Arm-chairs, stuffed, all hair, and covered in leather or Tapestry. Illustrations of this Suite post-free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

LUXURY, ELEGANCE, and ECONOMY IN CARPETS.—OETZMANN and CO. are NOW SHOWING a Large Stock of Best WILTON PILE CARPETS of the newest and best designs, with or without borders, purchased for Cash under the recent depression. The designs are very artistic; and the rich worsted pile, soft and velvety, imparts an air of luxury and elegance, whilst the price at which O. and CO. are selling is little more than that of good Brussels. These Carpets are unequalled by any others for durability. OETZMANN and CO.

LINOLEUM.—OETZMANN and CO. LINOLEUM. Warm, soft, carpet-like in appearance, and very durable. Only the best make sold. Granite patterns (imbedded and infeasible) and all the New Designs for the Season are now in stock. A visit of inspection solicited. Prices below those usually charged for this favourite floor covering. Patterns sent into the Country free on application. The Trade supplied.—OETZMANN and CO.

CHINA and GLASS DEPARTMENT. Beatrice Pattern Toilet Services (ever, basin, &c., complete), 5s. 6d.; Cleopatra ditto, 8s. 6d.; Richly-cut Decanters, 10s. 6d. per pair; Cut Wines, from 8s. 6d. per dozen; and ditto, richly cut, reduced to 5s. 6d. per dozen; Handsome Drawing-Room and Dining-Room Clocks, from 10s. 6d. upwards; Cottage Clocks, from 4s. 6d. each; Elegant Vases, Figures, &c.—OETZMANN and CO.

POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT. OETZMANN and CO.—Orders sent post, whether large or small, receive prompt and careful attention. Those residing at a distance, or any to whom a personal visit would be inconvenient, desiring to have the selection to the firm, may rely upon a faithful attention to their wishes and interests in the selection. This department is personally supervised by a member of the firm, and O. and CO. continually receive numerous letters expressing the greatest satisfaction with the execution of orders so entrusted. Persons residing in Foreign Countries and the Colonies will find great advantages by entrusting their orders to O. and CO. For further particulars, please see page 35 in Catalogue, sent free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.
OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

35, NEW BOND-STREET.
J. and J. HOPKINSON beg to announce that they have opened the above extensive premises with an entirely new stock of their celebrated Grand and Cottage Pianofortes.

For Sale, Hire, or on the Three-Years' System. Illustrated Lists, with original designs in the Chippendale, Queen Anne, Early English, and other styles on application to 35, New Bond-street, London, W.

JOHN BROGDEN, ART GOLDSMITH and JEWELLER, 6, GRAND HOTEL-BUILDINGS, CHANCERY-CROSS.

The attention of the public is respectfully directed to the great advantage of purchasing from the bona fide manufacturer at really wholesale prices for ready money, thereby securing co-operative stores. The is-carat Gold Artistic Jewellery is made in the basement, where some of the most skilled goldsmiths can be seen at work. The Paris Gold Medal in 1875 was awarded for "Goldsmiths' Work and Jewellery in exquisite taste," also the Chevalier Cross of the Legion of Honour, the Grand Diplôme d'Honneur, and Gold Medal of L'Académie Nationale, Paris. Established A.D. 1798. No agents are authorized to call on customers.

ELKINGTON and CO. ELECTRO PLATE. SILVER PLATE. CLOCKS and BRONZES.

ELKINGTON and CO. TESTIMONIAL PLATE. CUTLERY, &c. Illustrated Catalogues post-free. ELKINGTON and CO., 22, Regent-st. or 12, Moorgate-st., City.

NOTICE.—GARDNERS', consequent on the extension of their Metal Trades, are RELINQUISHING their ELECTRO-PLATE, CUTLERY, and CLOCK DEPARTMENTS. THE STOCK of the first quality only is NOW OFFERED to the public at a DISCOUNT of 50 PER CENT from the market prices. Descriptive Lists post-free on application.—Nos. 43 and 45, West Strand, Charing-cross.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS. 1878. PARIS. GOLD MEDAL.

THE SEWELL'S KEYLESS WATCHES. Prize Medals, London, Paris, and Philadelphia. Damp and Dust-proof, 18-carat cases, adjusted and compensated for all climates, £10 10s., £12 10s., and £15; Ladies', £7 10s., £10 10s., and £12 10s. in Silver Case, for Ladies or Gentlemen, £5 5s., £6 5s., and £8 5s. Forwarded on receipt of remittance.—J. Sewell, 39, Cornhill, London; and 61, South Castle-street, Liverpool. Illustrated Catalogue free.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1872; Paris, 1875. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-List sent free.—77, Cornhill; and 29, Regent-street.

STERLING HITHERTO CHARGED THE TRADE. SAVING PURCHASERS from 25 to 50 per cent.

SILVER. THE MANUFACTURING GOLD SMITHS' and SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY, 112, REGENT-STREET, London, W.

ELECTRO-PLATE. CATALOGUES FREE.

THE PUBLIC SUPPLIED AT PRICES HITHERTO CHARGED THE TRADE. SAVING PURCHASERS from 25 to 50 per cent.

SILVER. THE MANUFACTURING GOLD SMITHS' and SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY, 112, REGENT-STREET, London, W.

ELECTRO-PLATE. CATALOGUES FREE.

THE PUBLIC SUPPLIED AT PRICES HITHERTO CHARGED THE TRADE. SAVING PURCHASERS from 25 to 50 per cent.

SILVER. THE MANUFACTURING GOLD SMITHS' and SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY, 112, REGENT-STREET, London, W.

ELECTRO-PLATE. CATALOGUES FREE.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS
have gained the HIGHEST AWARDS at all the recent INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITIONS, including the Two Gold Medals for Uprights and Grand, Melbourne, 1881; the First Prize, Queensland, 1880; the Two First Special Prizes, Sydney, 1880; the Legion of Honour, Paris, 1878, &c.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS' PIANOS
for SALE, HIRE, and on the THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
The principal of the previous honours gained by the BRINSMEAD PIANOS are:—
THE DIPLOMA OF HONOUR AND GOLD MEDAL, South Africa, 1877.
THE GRAND MEDAL OF HONOUR AND DIPLOMA OF MERIT, Philadelphia, 1876.
THE DIPLOMA OF HONOUR, Paris, 1874, and the HONORARY MEMBERSHIP OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF FRANCE.
THE GOLD MEDAL, Paris, 1870.
THE DIPLOMA OF EXTRAORDINARY MERIT, Netherlands International Exhibition, 1880.
THE MEDAL OF HONOUR, Paris, 1867.
THE PRIZE MEDAL, London, 1862, &c.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
SOSTENENTE PIANOS,
for Extreme Climates,
With the Perfect Check Repeater Action,
Patented 1872, 1876, 1877, 1879, and 1881,
throughout Europe and America.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Paris, Nov. 4, 1878.
"I have attentively examined the beautiful pianos of Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons that are exhibited at the Paris International Exhibition of 1878. I consider them to be exceptional in the case with which gradations of sound can be produced, from the softest to the most powerful tones. These excellent pianos merit the approbation of all artists, as the tone is full as well as sustained, and the touch is of perfect evenness throughout its entire range, answering to very requirement of the pianist."
"Ch. Gounod."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Paris, Sept. 8, 1878.
"We, the undersigned, certify that, after having seen and most conscientiously examined the English pianos at the Universal Exhibition of 1878, we find that the piano belongs to the Grand Piano of the house of Brinsmead.
"NICOLAS RUBINSTEIN,
"D. MAGNUS,
"Chevalier Antoine DE KONTZKI, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Germany."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"I have pleasure in expressing my opinion that the Paris Exhibition Model Grand Pianos of Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons are unsurpassed. The tone is distinctly sweet, sustained, and extraordinarily powerful; the touch responds to the faintest and to the most trying strains on it, and the workmanship is simply perfect."
W. Kuntz.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Illustrated London News."
"The principle of the Brinsmead firm is to give the best piano of the best of materials, the best of care, the best of taste, and the best of finish, and this is why the manufacture in Kentish Town sends down to Wigmore-street pianos perfect in scale, sustained in tone, elastic in bulk, with equal and responsive touch, and, in fact, as near as possible to that ideal that all musicians must require. A thing of beauty that is a joy for ever."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Daily Chronicle."
"In tone the instrument is exceedingly rich and sweet, and in touch the very perfection of lightness. Messrs. Brinsmead may certainly be congratulated upon their success."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Morning Advertiser."
"The Legion of Honour. In addition to the other distinctions awarded to Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons at the Paris Exhibition of 1878, the founder of the firm has been created Chevalier of the Legion of Honour."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Daily News."
"A new Pianoforte, recently manufactured by Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons, claims notice, not only on account of its beauty and richness of tone, but especially for some ingenious mechanical novelties, the most important being the addition of a third pedal, by means of which the sound of any note or notes may be almost indefinitely prolonged at the will of the player. Thus bass notes may be sustained after being struck by the left hand, which may then be taken away, and, with the right hand, may execute the most brilliant staccato passages, thus giving almost the effect of four hands. The patent 'check-repeater' action, a speciality of Messrs. Brinsmead, enables the performer to command with ease the most rapid repetition of the same note; the facility of the key movement in general being such that glissando passages can be executed with such perfect ease as to render them practicable with the lightest touch. The volume of tone is intensified by a peculiar construction of the sounding-board, another improvement being the system of bridging, by which the vibrations are increased and rendered sympathetic. The Pianoforte is capable of all degrees of delicacy and power, its massive structure rendering it less liable to set out of tune than usual; and the instrument is altogether calculated to extend the reputation of its makers."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PIANOS
may be obtained of all the principal Musicellers.
Prices from 40 guineas to 350 guineas.
18, 20, 22, WIGMORE-STREET, London, W.,
and
THE "BRINSMEAD WORKS,"
GRAFTON-ROAD, KENTISH TOWN, N.W.
ILLUSTRATED LISTS FREE.
EVERY PIANO GUARANTEED FOR FIVE YEARS.

PETER ROBINSON'S
COURT AND GENERAL MOURNING
WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET.

ON RECEIPT OF LETTER or TELEGRAM.
MOURNING GOODS will be forwarded to all parts of England, on application (no matter the distance), with an excellent fitting dressmaker (if required), without extra charge.
PETER ROBINSON, 256, 258, 260, 262, Regent-street, London.

INEXPENSIVE MOURNING, as well as the Richest Qualities, can be supplied by the most advantageous terms to Families.
THE COURT AND FAMILY MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 256, 258, 260, 262, Regent-street, London.

850 PIECES of Rich Quality PLAIN
BLACK SILK at 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 11s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 13s. 6d., 14s. 6d., 15s. 6d., 16s. 6d., 17s. 6d., 18s. 6d., 19s. 6d., 20s. 6d., 21s. 6d., 22s. 6d., 23s. 6d., 24s. 6d., 25s. 6d., 26s. 6d., 27s. 6d., 28s. 6d., 29s. 6d., 30s. 6d., 31s. 6d., 32s. 6d., 33s. 6d., 34s. 6d., 35s. 6d., 36s. 6d., 37s. 6d., 38s. 6d., 39s. 6d., 40s. 6d., 41s. 6d., 42s. 6d., 43s. 6d., 44s. 6d., 45s. 6d., 46s. 6d., 47s. 6d., 48s. 6d., 49s. 6d., 50s. 6d., 51s. 6d., 52s. 6d., 53s. 6d., 54s. 6d., 55s. 6d., 56s. 6d., 57s. 6d., 58s. 6d., 59s. 6d., 60s. 6d., 61s. 6d., 62s. 6d., 63s. 6d., 64s. 6d., 65s. 6d., 66s. 6d., 67s. 6d., 68s. 6d., 69s. 6d., 70s. 6d., 71s. 6d., 72s. 6d., 73s. 6d., 74s. 6d., 75s. 6d., 76s. 6d., 77s. 6d., 78s. 6d., 79s. 6d., 80s. 6d., 81s. 6d., 82s. 6d., 83s. 6d., 84s. 6d., 85s. 6d., 86s. 6d., 87s. 6d., 88s. 6d., 89s. 6d., 90s. 6d., 91s. 6d., 92s. 6d., 93s. 6d., 94s. 6d., 95s. 6d., 96s. 6d., 97s. 6d., 98s. 6d., 99s. 6d., 100s. 6d., 101s. 6d., 102s. 6d., 103s. 6d., 104s. 6d., 105s. 6d., 106s. 6d., 107s. 6d., 108s. 6d., 109s. 6d., 110s. 6d., 111s. 6d., 112s. 6d., 113s. 6d., 114s. 6d., 115s. 6d., 116s. 6d., 117s. 6d., 118s. 6d., 119s. 6d., 120s. 6d., 121s. 6d., 122s. 6d., 123s. 6d., 124s. 6d., 125s. 6d., 126s. 6d., 127s. 6d., 128s. 6d., 129s. 6d., 130s. 6d., 131s. 6d., 132s. 6d., 133s. 6d., 134s. 6d., 135s. 6d., 136s. 6d., 137s. 6d., 138s. 6d., 139s. 6d., 140s. 6d., 141s. 6d., 142s. 6d., 143s. 6d., 144s. 6d., 145s. 6d., 146s. 6d., 147s. 6d., 148s. 6d., 149s. 6d., 150s. 6d., 151s. 6d., 152s. 6d., 153s. 6d., 154s. 6d., 155s. 6d., 156s. 6d., 157s. 6d., 158s. 6d., 159s. 6d., 160s. 6d., 161s. 6d., 162s. 6d., 163s. 6d., 164s. 6d., 165s. 6d., 166s. 6d., 167s. 6d., 168s. 6d., 169s. 6d., 170s. 6d., 171s. 6d., 172s. 6d., 173s. 6d., 174s. 6d., 175s. 6d., 176s. 6d., 177s. 6d., 178s. 6d., 179s. 6d., 180s. 6d., 181s. 6d., 182s. 6d., 183s. 6d., 184s. 6d., 185s. 6d., 186s. 6d., 187s. 6d., 188s. 6d., 189s. 6d., 190s. 6d., 191s. 6d., 192s. 6d., 193s. 6d., 194s. 6d., 195s. 6d., 196s. 6d., 197s. 6d., 198s. 6d., 199s. 6d., 200s. 6d., 201s. 6d., 202s. 6d., 203s. 6d., 204s. 6d., 205s. 6d., 206s. 6d., 207s. 6d., 208s. 6d., 209s. 6d., 210s. 6d., 211s. 6d., 212s. 6d., 213s. 6d., 214s. 6d., 215s. 6d., 216s. 6d., 217s. 6d., 218s. 6d., 219s. 6d., 220s. 6d., 221s. 6d., 222s. 6d., 223s. 6d., 224s. 6d., 225s. 6d., 226s. 6d., 227s. 6d., 228s. 6d., 229s. 6d., 230s. 6d., 231s. 6d., 232s. 6d., 233s. 6d., 234s. 6d., 235s. 6d., 236s. 6d., 237s. 6d., 238s. 6d., 239s. 6d., 240s. 6d., 241s. 6d., 242s. 6d., 243s. 6d., 244s. 6d., 245s. 6d., 246s. 6d., 247s. 6d., 248s. 6d., 249s. 6d., 250s. 6d., 251s. 6d., 252s. 6d., 253s. 6d., 254s. 6d., 255s. 6d., 256s. 6d., 257s. 6d., 258s. 6d., 259s. 6d., 260s. 6d., 261s. 6d., 262s. 6d., 263s. 6d., 264s. 6d., 265s. 6d., 266s. 6d., 267s. 6d., 268s. 6d., 269s. 6d., 270s. 6d., 271s. 6d., 272s. 6d., 273s. 6d., 274s. 6d., 275s. 6d., 276s. 6d., 277s. 6d., 278s. 6d., 279s. 6d., 280s. 6d., 281s. 6d., 282s. 6d., 283s. 6d., 284s. 6d., 285s. 6d., 286s. 6d., 287s. 6d., 288s. 6d., 289s. 6d., 290s. 6d., 291s. 6d., 292s. 6d., 293s. 6d., 294s. 6d., 295s. 6d., 296s. 6d., 297s. 6d., 298s. 6d., 299s. 6d., 300s. 6d., 301s. 6d., 302s. 6d., 303s. 6d., 304s. 6d., 305s. 6d., 306s. 6d., 307s. 6d., 308s. 6d., 309s. 6d., 310s. 6d., 311s. 6d., 312s. 6d., 313s. 6d., 314s. 6d., 315s. 6d., 316s. 6d., 317s. 6d., 318s. 6d., 319s. 6d., 320s. 6d., 321s. 6d., 322s. 6d., 323s. 6d., 324s. 6d., 325s. 6d., 326s. 6d., 327s. 6d., 328s. 6d., 329s. 6d., 330s. 6d., 331s. 6d., 332s. 6d., 333s. 6d., 334s. 6d., 335s. 6d., 336s. 6d., 337s. 6d., 338s. 6d., 339s. 6d., 340s. 6d., 341s. 6d., 342s. 6d., 343s. 6d., 344s. 6d., 345s. 6d., 346s. 6d., 347s. 6d., 348s. 6d., 349s. 6d., 350s. 6d., 351s. 6d., 352s. 6d., 353s. 6d., 354s. 6d., 355s. 6d., 356s. 6d., 357s. 6d., 358s. 6d., 359s. 6d., 360s. 6d., 361s. 6d., 362s. 6d., 363s. 6d., 364s. 6d., 365s. 6d., 366s. 6d., 367s. 6d., 368s. 6d., 369s. 6d., 370s. 6d., 371s. 6d., 372s. 6d., 373s. 6d., 374s. 6d., 375s. 6d., 376s. 6d., 377s. 6d., 378s. 6d., 379s. 6d., 380s. 6d., 381s. 6d., 382s. 6d., 383s. 6d., 384s. 6d., 385s. 6d., 386s. 6d., 387s. 6d., 388s. 6d., 389s. 6d., 390s. 6d., 391s. 6d., 392s. 6d., 393s. 6d., 394s. 6d., 395s. 6d., 396s. 6d., 397s. 6d., 398s. 6d., 399s. 6d., 400s. 6d., 401s. 6d., 402s. 6d., 403s. 6d., 404s. 6d., 405s. 6d., 406s. 6d., 407s. 6d., 408s. 6d., 409s. 6d., 410s. 6d., 411s. 6d., 412s. 6d., 413s. 6d., 414s. 6d., 415s. 6d., 416s. 6d., 417s. 6d., 418s. 6d., 419s. 6d., 420s. 6d., 421s. 6d., 422s. 6d., 423s. 6d., 424s. 6d., 425s. 6d., 426s. 6d., 427s. 6d., 428s. 6d., 429s. 6d., 430s. 6d., 431s. 6d., 432s. 6d., 433s. 6d., 434s. 6d., 435s. 6d., 436s. 6d., 437s. 6d., 438s. 6d., 439s. 6d., 440s. 6d., 441s. 6d., 442s. 6d., 443s. 6d., 444s. 6d., 445s. 6d., 446s. 6d., 447s. 6d., 448s. 6d., 449s. 6d., 450s. 6d., 451s. 6d., 452s. 6d., 453s. 6d., 454s. 6d., 455s. 6d., 456s. 6d., 457s. 6d., 458s. 6d., 459s. 6d., 460s. 6d., 461s. 6d., 462s. 6d., 463s. 6d., 464s. 6d., 465s. 6d., 466s. 6d., 467s. 6d., 468s. 6d., 469s. 6d., 470s. 6d., 471s. 6d., 472s. 6d., 473s. 6d., 474s. 6d., 475s. 6d., 476s. 6d., 477s. 6d., 478s. 6d., 479s. 6d., 480s. 6d., 481s. 6d., 482s. 6d., 483s. 6d., 484s. 6d., 485s. 6d., 486s. 6d., 487s. 6d., 488s. 6d., 489s. 6d., 490s. 6d., 491s. 6d., 492s. 6d., 493s. 6d., 494s. 6d., 495s. 6d., 496s. 6d., 497s. 6d., 498s. 6d., 499s. 6d., 500s. 6d., 501s. 6d., 502s. 6d., 503s. 6d., 504s. 6d., 505s. 6d., 506s. 6d., 507s. 6d., 508s. 6d., 509s. 6d., 510s. 6d., 511s. 6d., 512s. 6d., 513s. 6d., 514s. 6d., 515s. 6d., 516s. 6d., 517s. 6d., 518s. 6d., 519s. 6d., 520s. 6d., 521s. 6d., 522s. 6d., 523s. 6d., 524s. 6d., 525s. 6d., 526s. 6d., 527s. 6d., 528s. 6d., 529s. 6d., 530s. 6d., 531s. 6d., 532s. 6d., 533s. 6d., 534s. 6d., 535s. 6d., 536s. 6d., 537s. 6d., 538s. 6d., 539s. 6d., 540s. 6d., 541s. 6d., 542s. 6d., 543s. 6d., 544s. 6d., 545s. 6d., 546s. 6d., 547s. 6d., 548s. 6d., 549s. 6d., 550s. 6d., 551s. 6d., 552s. 6d., 553s. 6d., 554s. 6d., 555s. 6d., 556s. 6d., 557s. 6d., 558s. 6d., 559s. 6d., 560s. 6d., 561s. 6d., 562s. 6d., 563s. 6d., 564s. 6d., 565s. 6d., 566s. 6d., 567s. 6d., 568s. 6d., 569s. 6d., 570s. 6d., 571s. 6d., 572s. 6d., 573s. 6d., 574s. 6d., 575s. 6d., 576s. 6d., 577s. 6d., 578s. 6d., 579s. 6d., 580s. 6d., 581s. 6d., 582s. 6d., 583s. 6d., 584s. 6d., 585s. 6d., 586s. 6d., 587s. 6d., 588s. 6d., 589s. 6d., 590s. 6d., 591s. 6d., 592s. 6d., 593s. 6d., 594s. 6d., 595s. 6d., 596s. 6d., 597s. 6d., 598s. 6d., 599s. 6d., 600s. 6d., 601s. 6d., 602s. 6d., 603s. 6d., 604s. 6d., 605s. 6d., 606s. 6d., 607s. 6d., 608s. 6d., 609s. 6d., 610s. 6d., 611s. 6d., 612s. 6d., 613s. 6d., 614s. 6d., 615s. 6d., 616s. 6d., 617s. 6d., 618s. 6d., 619s. 6d., 620s. 6d., 621s. 6d., 622s. 6d., 623s. 6d., 624s. 6d., 625s. 6d., 626s. 6d., 627s. 6d., 628s. 6d., 629s. 6d., 630s. 6d., 631s. 6d., 632s. 6d., 633s. 6d., 634s. 6d., 635s. 6d., 636s. 6d., 637s. 6d., 638s. 6d., 639s. 6d., 640s. 6d., 641s. 6d., 642s. 6d., 643s. 6d., 644s. 6d., 645s. 6d., 646s. 6d., 647s. 6d., 648s. 6d., 649s. 6d., 650s. 6d., 651s. 6d., 652s. 6d., 653s. 6d., 654s. 6d., 655s. 6d., 656s. 6d., 657s. 6d., 658s. 6d., 659s. 6d., 660s. 6d., 661s. 6d., 662s. 6d., 663s. 6d., 664s. 6d., 665s. 6d., 666s. 6d., 667s. 6d., 668s. 6d., 669s. 6d., 670s. 6d., 671s. 6d., 672s. 6d., 673s. 6d., 674s. 6d., 675s. 6d., 676s. 6d., 677s. 6d., 678s. 6d., 679s. 6d., 680s. 6d., 681s. 6d., 682s. 6d., 683s. 6d., 684s. 6d., 685s. 6d., 686s. 6d., 687s. 6d., 688s. 6d., 689s. 6d., 690s. 6d., 691s. 6d., 692s. 6d., 693s. 6d., 694s. 6d., 695s. 6d., 696s. 6d., 697s. 6d., 698s. 6d., 699s. 6d., 700s. 6d., 701s. 6d., 702s. 6d., 703s. 6d., 704s. 6d., 705s. 6d., 706s. 6d., 707s. 6d., 708s. 6d., 709s. 6d., 710s. 6d., 711s. 6d., 712s. 6d., 713s. 6d., 714s. 6d., 715s. 6d., 716s. 6d., 717s. 6d., 718s. 6d., 719s. 6d., 720s. 6d., 721s. 6d., 722s. 6d., 723s. 6d., 724s. 6d., 725s. 6d., 726s. 6d., 727s. 6d., 728s. 6d., 729s. 6d., 730s. 6d., 731s. 6d., 732s. 6d., 733s. 6d., 734s. 6d., 735s. 6d., 736s. 6d., 737s. 6d., 738s. 6d., 739s. 6d., 740s. 6d., 741s. 6d., 742s. 6d., 743s. 6d., 744s. 6d., 745s. 6d., 746s. 6d., 747s. 6d., 748s. 6d., 749s. 6d., 750s. 6d., 751s. 6d., 752s. 6d., 753s. 6d., 754s. 6d., 755s. 6d., 756s. 6d., 757s. 6d., 758s. 6d., 759s. 6d., 760s. 6d., 761s. 6d., 762s. 6d., 763s. 6d., 764s. 6d., 765s. 6d., 766s. 6d., 767s. 6d., 768s. 6d., 769s. 6d., 770s. 6d., 771s. 6d., 772s. 6d., 773s. 6d., 774s. 6d., 775s. 6d., 776s. 6d., 777s. 6d., 778s. 6d., 779s. 6d., 780s. 6d., 781s. 6d., 782s. 6d., 783s. 6d., 784s. 6d., 785s. 6d., 786s. 6d., 787s. 6d., 788s. 6d., 789s. 6d., 790s. 6d., 791s. 6d., 792s. 6d., 793s. 6d., 794s. 6d., 795s. 6d., 796s. 6d., 797s. 6d., 798s. 6d., 799s. 6d., 800s. 6d., 801s. 6d., 802s. 6d., 803s. 6d., 804s. 6d., 805s. 6d., 806s. 6d., 807s. 6d., 808s. 6d., 809s. 6d., 810s. 6d., 811s. 6d., 812s. 6d., 813s. 6d., 814s. 6d., 815s. 6d., 816s. 6d., 817s. 6d., 818s. 6d., 819s. 6d., 820s. 6d., 821s. 6d., 822s. 6d., 823s. 6d., 824s. 6d., 825s. 6d., 826s. 6d., 827s. 6d., 828s. 6d., 829s. 6d., 830s. 6d., 831s. 6d., 832s. 6d., 833s. 6d., 834s. 6d., 835s. 6d., 836s. 6d., 837s. 6d., 838s. 6d., 839s. 6d., 840s. 6d., 841s. 6d., 842s. 6d., 843s. 6d., 844s. 6d., 845s. 6d., 846s. 6d., 847s. 6d., 848s. 6d., 849s. 6d., 850s. 6d., 851s. 6d., 852s. 6d., 853s. 6d., 854s. 6d., 855s. 6d., 856s. 6d., 857s. 6d., 858s. 6d., 859s. 6d., 860s. 6d., 861s. 6d., 862s. 6d., 863s. 6d., 864s. 6d., 865s. 6d., 866s. 6d., 867s. 6d., 868s. 6d., 869s. 6d., 870s. 6d., 871s. 6d., 872s. 6d., 873s. 6d., 874s. 6d., 875s. 6d., 876s. 6d., 877s. 6d., 878s. 6d., 879s. 6d., 880s. 6d., 881s. 6d., 882s. 6d., 883s. 6d., 884s. 6d., 885s. 6d., 886s. 6d., 887s. 6d., 888s. 6d., 889s. 6d., 890s. 6d., 891s. 6d., 892s. 6d., 893s. 6d., 894s. 6d., 895s. 6d., 896s. 6d., 897s. 6d., 898s. 6d., 899s. 6d., 900s. 6d., 901s. 6d., 902s. 6d., 903s. 6d., 904s. 6d., 905s. 6d., 906s. 6d., 907s. 6d., 908s. 6d., 909s. 6d., 910s. 6d., 911s. 6d., 912s. 6d., 913s. 6d., 914s. 6d., 915s. 6d., 916s. 6d., 917s. 6d., 918s. 6d., 919s. 6d., 920s. 6d., 921s. 6d., 922s. 6d., 923s. 6d., 924s. 6d., 925s. 6d., 926s. 6d., 927s. 6d., 928s. 6d., 929s. 6d., 930s. 6d., 931s. 6d., 932s. 6d., 933s. 6d., 934s. 6d., 935s. 6d., 936s. 6d., 937s. 6d., 938s. 6d., 939s. 6d., 940s. 6d., 941s. 6d., 942s. 6d., 943s. 6d., 944s. 6d., 945s. 6d., 946s. 6d., 947s. 6d., 948s. 6d., 949s. 6d., 950s. 6d., 951s. 6d., 952s. 6d., 953s. 6d., 954s. 6d., 955s. 6d., 956s. 6d., 957s. 6d., 958s. 6d., 959s. 6d., 960s. 6d., 961s. 6d., 962s. 6d., 963s. 6d., 964s. 6d., 965s. 6d., 966s. 6d., 967s. 6d., 968s. 6d., 969s. 6d., 970s. 6d., 971s. 6d., 972s. 6d., 973s. 6d., 974s. 6d., 975s. 6d., 976s. 6d., 977s. 6d., 978s. 6d., 979s. 6d., 980s. 6d., 981s. 6d., 982s. 6d., 983s. 6d., 984s. 6d., 985s. 6d., 986s. 6d., 987s. 6d., 988s. 6d., 989s. 6d., 990s. 6d., 991s. 6d., 992s. 6d., 993s. 6d., 994s. 6d., 995s. 6d., 996s. 6d., 997s. 6d., 998s. 6d., 999s. 6d., 1000s. 6d., 1001s.

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW DANCE

MUSIC.
 Gee Up! Polka .. D'Albert.
 Waldeck Waltz .. D'Albert.
 Nearest and Dearest Waltz .. D'Albert.
 Patience Waltz and Quadrille .. D'Albert.
 Patience Lancers and Polka .. D'Albert.
 Olivette Waltz and Quadrille .. D'Albert.
 Olivette Lancers and Polka .. D'Albert.
 Drink, Paddy, Drink, Polka .. D'Albert.
 Vision d'Amour Valse .. D'Albert.
 Loyalty Waltz .. D'Albert.
 (Dedicated by permission to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.)
 Played at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
 Grenade Waltz .. Mrs. Smith Bridges.
 Venetian Waltz .. Mrs. Smith Bridges.
 Je T'Aime Valse .. Mrs. Smith Bridges.
 Played at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
 Mother Hubbard Polka .. Caroline Lowthian.
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW SONGS.

An Old-Fashioned Garden .. Lady Benedict.
 I'll sing thee songs of Araby .. Clay.
 Thine Alone .. H. Behrend.
 'Tis for the Best .. Madame Sainton-Dolby.
 AEL (Evermore) .. A. H. Behrend.
 In the twilight of our love .. A. Sullivan.
 (Drawing-room version of "Silverd" is the raven hair.)
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW PIANOFORTE

PIECES.
 Viscount Dupplin .. Three Album Leaves.
 Janotha .. Moment Musical.
 Janotha .. Value Brilliant.
 Viscount Dupplin .. Gavotte, Solo or Duet.
 Jules de Sival .. Handelian Dance.
 G. F. Kendall .. Odette.
 G. F. Kendall .. Margery, Old English Dance.
 G. F. Kendall .. Phyllis, Old English Dance.
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

PATIENCE. An Aesthetic Opera. By

W. S. GILBERT and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed at the Savoy Theatre with enormous success.
 Libretto
 Vocal Score
 Pianoforte Solo
 All the following sent post-free for half price.

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.

Boyton Smith's Fantasia .. 4 0
 Lido, Duet .. 4 0
 Knave's Fantasia .. 4 0
 Smallwood's Easy Fantasia, 1, 2, 3 .. each 3 0
 Fred. Goodyear's Grand Selection. (As played by all the Military Bands) .. 4 0
 Duet, as a Duet .. 4 0
 CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

MRS. L. MONCRIEFF'S NEW SONGS.

"Twas only a year ago, LOVE.
 A CREOLE LOVE SONG.
 THOUGHTS AT SUNRISE.
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS'

SYSTEM OF HIRE OF PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the instrument becomes the property of the HIRE at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes from 2s. Harmoniums from 1s. 6d.; and American Organs, from 1s. 6d. a quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from

30 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S YACHT PIANINOS,

with folding keyboards, from 30 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IRON-FRAMED

COTTAGE PIANOFORTES for Ocean Steamers and Extreme Climates, from 35 to 60 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S Early English

PIANOFORTES, artistically designed Ebonyed Cases, from 45 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S Iron Double

Overstrung PIANOFORTES. Check Actions, &c., from 50 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from

10 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE

HARMONIUMS, for Church, Schools, or Drawing Rooms, from 6 to 100 guineas; or, on the "Three-Years" System, from 1s. 6d. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED

AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. A large variety of views from 15 to 250 guineas. Price-Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PET ORGAN,

Seven stops, including Sub-bass and Octave Coupler. Elegant Carved Walnut Case. 18 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite

ORGAN. Five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two knee swell, elegant carved, case, price 25 guineas. With thirteen stops, octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 30 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S NEW STYLE

VICTORIA CASE. Twelve stops, five sets of reeds, sub-bass and Octave Coupler. 37 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S CENTENNIAL

GRAND ORGAN, 13 stops, 9 sets of reeds, and Combination Tubes, 45 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PIPE and REED

ORGAN, Style 110. Organ Pipe Front, handsomely decorated, seventeen stops, thirteen sets of reeds. 131 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S GRAND

ORGAN MODEL. Two claviers, two and a half octave of pedals, twenty-three stops, seventeen sets of reeds, elegant decorated pipes, solid walnut case. 225 guineas. The most perfect American organ manufactured. Illustrated List free.

INSTRUMENTS by ALL MAKERS may be

HIRED or PURCHASED on the "Three-Years" System. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS

FOR CASH. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS HALF PRICE.

In consequence of a change of partnership, the whole of this splendid stock, perfected with all the improvements of the day, is being sold at half price. In order to effect a speedy sale, the easiest terms arranged, with seven years' warranty. Trifling Cottages from hire, or taken in exchange, £10 to £12.
 Class 0, £14 .. Class 2, £20 .. Class 4, £26 .. Class 6, £32
 Class 1, £17 .. Class 3, £23 .. Class 5, £29 .. Class 7, £35
 American Organs from £5.
 91, Finsbury-pavement, Moorgate.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 15, Rue de Mail, Paris. Makers to Her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales. CAUTION: The Public that Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply to 18, Great Marlborough-street, where new Pianos can be obtained from 50 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from

50 guineas. ORGANS, from 35 guineas. GRANDS, from 12 guineas.

NEW MUSIC.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS' LIST OF NEW

AND POPULAR MUSIC.

BILLEE TAYLOR. COMIC OPERA.

STEPHENS and SOLOMON.
 Vocal Score, 6s. net; Piano Score, 2s. 6d. net.
VOCAL.
 The Self-Made Knight. All on Account of Eliza.
 The Virtuous Gardener. Charity Girls' Chorus. 6d.
PIANO PIECES.
 Quadrilles by Coote. Valse by Chas. Godfrey.
 Lancers by Grenville. Phoebe Polka by Grenville.
 Selection of Airs. Godfrey. Fantasia by Ch. Tourville.
 Price 2s. net each.

CLAUDE DUVAL. Comic Opera.

STEPHENS and SOLOMON.
 Quadrilles by Coote. 4s. Valse by Tourville. 2s.
 Polka by Grenville. 3s. Coranto by Tourville. 2s.
 Vocal Score. 6s. net.

LORD BATEMAN. Comic Opera.

STEPHENS and SOLOMON. In the Press.

NEW SONGS by FREDERIC H. COWEN.

The night has a thousand eyes.
 Round I kiss me, Sweetheart, the spring is here!
 If thou wilt, remember. I think of all thou art to me.
 Good Night. Alas!
 In Keys to suit all voices. Price 2s. net each.

NEW SONGS by FLORIAN PASCAL.

MORE THAN ALL. In D. for Soprano or Baritone.
 THE CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER. In A minor, for Baritone.
 MAY MORN. In B flat, for Soprano or M.-S.
 Price 2s. net each.

By J. L. HATTON.

STARS. For Contralto or Baritone. Price

2s. net.

ARTHUR GRENVILLE. NEW DANCE

MUSIC.
 Secret of Love Valse. 2s. net. Suzanne Valse. 2s. net.
 Babiole Lancers. 2s. net. Babiole Galop. 1s. 6d. net.

WESTMINSTER BELLS. Piano.

TOURVILLE. A charming reverie, in which the well-known chimes of "Big Ben" are cleverly reproduced. Price 1s. 6d. net.

PHILLIS. Gavotte-Pastorale. Piano.

TOURVILLE. Founded on an old English ballad. Quaint and effective. Price 1s. 6d. net.

SERENADE HONGROISE. By V.

JONCIERES. A great favourite at all Parisian Concerts. Piano solo. 1s. 6d. net. Piano duet, 2s. net. Violin and Piano, 2s. net.

LOVE'S SECRET. Song. Sung by Mrs.

I. Langtry at Theatre Royal, Haymarket, in "Ours."
 Price 2s. net. Also arranged as a Valse by Arthur Grenville. Price 2s. net.

ENTRACTE SEVILLANA.

J. MASSENET. Piano Solo. Price 1s. 6d. net.

NEW DANCE MUSIC, performed at Her

Majesty's State Ball, Buckingham Palace, May 17, by Coote and Tinney's Bands.

Valse	La Source	Waldteufel.
Valse	La Barcarolle	Waldteufel.
Valse	Naples	Waldteufel.
Polka	L'Esprit Français	Waldteufel.
Valse	The Flower Snow	Waldteufel.
Polka	Bouge et Noir	Coote.
Valse	Vom Rhein zur Donau	Kéler Béla.
Valse	The Colonel	Bucalossi.
Lancers	Aladdin	Lutz.

Post-free, 24 stamps each.
 Horwood and Caw, 42, New Bond-street, W.

B. WILLIAMS'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PRINCESS HELEN OF WALDECK

BYMONT. Suite de Valse. Par GEORGES LAMOTHE. 2s. net.

AUF IMMER (For Ever). Waltzer. By

OSCAR SEYDEL. The favour with which this waltz has been already received bids fair to outstrip the celebrated "Walt von Dir" in popularity. 2s. net.

THE OLD AND THE YOUNG MARIE.

By Weatherly and COWEN. Sung by Miss Clara Samwell. 2s. net.

LOVE ABIDES. By Weatherly and

ROECKEL. 2s. net.

THRO' THE GOLDEN GATE. Words

by Frederick Wood; Music by GEORGE FOX. Sung by Miss Emilie Lloyd. 2s. net.

London: B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row.

BY THE COMPOSER OF "SPARKLING CASCADES."

ON THE WATERS. LANGTON

WILLIAMS' Piano Piece. Just published. "A beautiful lacarole movement."—W. WILLIAMS and Co., 21, Tottenham-court-road.

GRANDS and SEMI-GRANDS

by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, ERARD,

and CRAMER.

on Cramer's Three-Years System (originated by them), from £1 3s. per quarter; the easiest and most satisfactory mode of acquiring a thoroughly reliable instrument of the highest quality as regards both tone and construction. Any instrument may be exchanged within three months without loss. The hiring may be discontinued, or an exchange made on special terms, at any time during the currency of the agreement. Pianofortes tuned by the year in town or country. Regent-street, W.; Moorgate-street, E.C.

PLEYEL WOLFF and CO.'S PIANOS.

Every description of these celebrated instruments for SALE or HIRE.

Sole Agency, 170, New Bond-street, W.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS

at ROQUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

SETS FOR THE WEDDING TABLE AND BOUDOIR, IN POLISHED BRASS, ORMOLE, SEVERE CHINA, BRONZE, ALGERIAN ONYX, and OXIDIZED SILVER, from 21s. to £10.

DRESSING CASES

JEWEL CASES .. 21s. to £50

DESPATCH BOXES .. 15s. to £10

TOURISTS' WRITING CASES .. 4s. 6d. to £5

ENVELOPE CASES and BLOTTING BOOKS .. 10s. 6d. to £5

STATIONERY CASES and CABINETS .. 21s. to £5

INKSTANDS .. 5s. to £5

CANDLESTICKS (per pair) .. 7s. 6d. to £5

GLOVE and HANDKERCHIEF BOXES (per pair) .. 21s. to £5

CASES OF IVORY BRUSHES .. 6s. to £10

SCENTED BOTTLES .. 10s. 6d. to £5

WORK BOXES and BASKETS .. 15s. to £5

CARRIAGE and TABLE CLOCKS .. 6s. to £10

OPERA and FIELD GLASSES .. 21s. to £5

FANS, IVORY, PEARL, and WOOD .. 5s. to £5

CARD TRAYS and TAZZAS .. 5s. to £5

CIGAR and CIGARETTE CABINETS .. 5s. to £5

THE NEW "TANTALUS" LIQUEUR STAND .. 10s. to £10

THE "TANTALUS" PERFUME STAND .. 7s. to £5

And a large assortment of ENGLISH VIENNESE, and PARISIEN NOUVEAUTES, from 6s. to £5.

PORTRAIT ALBUMS at RODRIGUES',

Interviewed for Vignette and Cabinet Portraits, 4s. 6d. to £10. Albums, Scrap Albums, Presentation and Regimental Albums, Portrait Frames and Screens in great variety.

RODRIGUES' DRESSING BAGS for

Travelling, with silver, silver-gilt, and plated fittings, from 10s. to £20; Summit Bags, Waist Bags, Carriage Bags, and Bags of all kinds at very moderate prices.—42, Piccadilly.

NEW MUSIC.

CLASSICS FOR YOUNG PIANISTS.

Edited by F. LEMOINE.
 1. Tema Extract (Mozart). 4. Choral Fantasia (Beethoven).
 2. March alla Turca (Mozart). 5. Hush, ye Pretty. (Haydn).
 3. Rondo all' Ogarano 6. Tema con Var., from Septet (Beethoven).
 Each, 3s.

"Exceedingly well fingered and arranged, and will be found a great help to teachers."—Orchestra.

BON SOIR ET BON JOUR.

Denx Esquisses pour Piano, par COTSFORD BICK.
 Very fresh and original in melody and effect.
 "Pretty and graceful."—Graphic.
 Price 3s.

VIOLIN and PIANO.—JANSA'S

LA PRUGHIERA ("Moss in Egitto"). 3s.

VIOLIN and PIANO.—JANSA'S

WEBER'S LAST WALTZ. 3s.

VIOLIN and PIANO.—JANSA'S

AGNUS DEI (Mozart). 3s.

VIOLIN and PIANO.—MOLIQUE'S

Celebrated ANDANTE. 3s.

HEARTS. C. PINSUTI. Sung by Miss

Mary Davies. Price 4s.

THE SINGERS FROM THE SEA. A

Canata for Female Voices. Composed by A. H. BEHREND. Poetry by Hugh Conway.

"The prettiest composition of its kind produced this season."
 "All is equally dainty in its way; in fact, we know of no musical work more suitable for a school breaking-up, where the female element predominates."—Graphic.

"Well adapted for amateur performance."—Musical Times.
 "We recommend the Canata to all as containing very fresh and interesting music."—Telegraph.
 Price 3s.

Each of the above, post-free, at half-price in stamps.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for JUNE

contains: Wagner's "Parsifal"—The Mendelssohn Family—The Great Composers: Chopin—Musical Activity of the Year—"The Nibelung's Ring" at Her Majesty's Theatre, German Opera at Drury Lane, Sacred Harmonic Society, Crystal Palace, Richter Concerts, Symphony Concerts, &c.—Music in Birmingham, Bristol, Manchester, and Yorkshire—Occasional Notes, Correspondence, Foreign and Country News, Reviews, &c. Price 3d.; post-free, 4d. Annual Subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for JUNE contains:—At Analysis of Wagner's Festival Drama, "Parsifal," by F. Corder.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for JUNE

contains:—"The Radiant Morn hath passed away." Anthem. By the Rev. H. H. WOODWARD. Price, separately, 1d.

London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co., 1, Berners-street, W.; and 80 and 81, Queen-street, E.C.

MONACO.—THE SUMMER BATHING

SEASON IS NOW OPEN.

The Sea Baths of Monaco are completely protected from the north winds, and the most healthful and enjoyable on the Mediterranean Coast.

The Grand Hotel des Bains, upon the seashore, contains most comfortable and luxurious apartments for families at moderate prices.

Hot and Cold Salt and Fresh Water Baths, and Hydropathic Establishment. Tropical vegetation abounds, yet the temperature is always toned by the cool sea breezes.

MONACO is situated about 35 minutes from Nice, and 20 minutes from Mentone, and vice versa, either town for its sanitary arrangements and beautiful climate.

NAPLES-BY-THA-SEA.—See Naples as it should be seen, from the Balconies of the HOTEL ROYAL DES ETRANGERS. Patronised by High Life. Always open. Views and Prices of Mr. CAPRANI, Sole Proprietor.

NAPLES.—HOTEL TRAMONTANO, on the Corso V. Emanuele. Highest and healthiest part. Magnificent view of the Bay and Islands. Desirable homely family Hotel. Kept by an English Lady.

NAPLES.—HOTEL DE RUSSIE.

Celebrated for comfort. Facing the Landing Station of the Capri Steamers. Fine View of Vesuvius. Close to Palais Royal. PRANI, Director.

NAPLES.—AMERICAN DENTISTRY,

with latest Discoveries. Gold and Vulcanite Sets. Stopping in Gold.—Mr. J. CAMMEROTA, Dentist, adjoining the English Chemist—F. Kernot.

MESSINA.—HOTEL VICTORIA. First

Class house. Specially recommended for comfort and price. W. Moeller, Proprietor. TAORMINA.—Hotel Bellevue, First Class. Grandest scenery in Italy. G. KELLERMANN, Proprietor.

MILAN, Pallanza, Locarno, Bellagio, Venice.

Grand Hotel at Milan. First Class Extra.

Grand Hotel at Pallanza. Best and most comfortably regulated Hotels on the Continent.

Grand Hotel at Locarno. Grand Hotel at Bellagio. Grand Hotel at Venice.

MALTA, Corsica, Egypt, Constantinople,

Italy, Greece, and Danube, by Frassinetti and Co.'s steamers—Prospectus and tariff of Smith, Sundus, and Co., Gracechurch-street; or Frassinetti and Co., 6, Place de la Bourse, Marseilles.

TOULOUSE.—Grand Hôtel du Midi.

Patronised by the Duke of Norfolk and English nobility and gentry. First-class hotel. English spoken; and comfort of view are specially studied. E. FOURQUET, Proprietor.

BIARRITZ PREFERABLE TO PAU or

RIVIERA. No frost or snow, no typhoid or other fever. Pure air. Splendid sea. Sea warmed by the Gulf Stream, and no sewage discharges.

BIARRITZ.—VILLA EUGÉNIE HOTEL

and RESTAURANT. Superior Class. Grand apartments and club, with every comfort. Table d'Hôte, Restaurant, Café, Casino, and Concert every evening. Billiards, Gymnastics, Lawn-Tennis. Large ornamental Garden surrounded by pine wood. Bathing on the magnificent sands. Fine winter climate. Mr. CALMEL, Proprietor of the Grand Hôtel du Lucien, at Lucien, is the Director of the Palais Biarritz.

CAUTERETS.—Grand Hôtel Continental.

Most comfortable of the Pyrenean Stations. 200 Chambers. Conversation Table d'Hôte, Table d'Aca, Grand Theatre, Casino, Club—Same property. Madame BAILLY, Proprietor.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT YARMOUTH: VIEW OF GREAT YARMOUTH, FROM GORLESTON.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

ENLARGED

GREAT YARMOUTH.

The visit of the Prince of Wales to this important seaport town of Norfolk, the county of his own habitation in the season of a country gentleman's life at home, is a proper occasion for us to present some illustrations of that place and its neighbourhood. An account of the proceedings on Tuesday, with the opening of the New Municipal Buildings, will be found at another page of this journal.

The East Anglian region, comprising Norfolk and Suffolk, dips gradually, both from its northern and from its southern divisions, towards a part of its circumference near the sea-coast, where the low level forms a small Fenland, bearing some resemblance, probably, to what the greater Fenland of Cambridgeshire and Lincolnshire used to be while its rivers and shallow lakes were still undammed and undrained. Three East Anglian rivers, the Yare, the Bure, and the Waveney, with their tributary streams from the east, the north, and the south, come to meet each other in a flat seaward district, on the border of the two counties, where it seems as if there was once a broad inlet of the German Ocean, similar to the Wash, till the upheaval of the shore, or the deposit of mud, converted its bed into a solid piece of land. The middle river is the Yare, flowing, with the Wensum, from Norwich to Yarmouth, and there receiving the Waveney from Suffolk, on the one hand, and the Bure on the other; but this last-named river, with the Ant and the Thurne, in a flat country northward, forms a number of "Broades," as the shallow lakes are called in East Anglia, delightful waters for fishing. Let us here commend, to the English summer tourist and the fisherman, an excellent little "Handbook to the Rivers and Broades of Norfolk and Suffolk," by Mr. G. Christopher Davies, of Norwich, which is published, with a large-scale map, by Messrs. Jarrold and Sons. But our present concern is to keep to Yarmouth.

It must be observed, however, that the approaching confluence of the three rivers above mentioned, at the back of Yarmouth inland, makes a large sheet of water called Breydon, only three miles from the sea, and reached by its tides. The town is situated on a peninsula between the sea, the Yare, and Breydon Water, with the Bure direct from the north. Here, for several miles, the sea-coast is low and flat, but it rises in sand-cliffs beyond Gorleston, to the south, and at Caister, in the opposite direction. Gorleston, two or three miles from Great Yarmouth, is also an outlet of the Yare, and was formerly called Little Yarmouth, which accounts for Yarmouth, the principal town, being styled Great. It is distant from London about 120 miles, and twenty from Norwich. The population, including that of Gorleston and Southtown, is between forty and fifty thousand. Their staple industry is the herring fishery, and the curing and export trade of herring, "Yarmouth bloaters" having a wide commercial renown. There is also considerable trade in the agricultural produce of Norfolk and Suffolk, and manufactures of different kinds, with boat-building, rope, net, and sail making, and the import of foreign merchandise.

Yarmouth is a very ancient corporate borough, apparently from times before the Norman Conquest, but received a Charter of enfranchisement from King John, and was invested with further municipal dignities by Charles II. and by Queen Anne. Its heraldic shield displays an odd combination of the forepart of three lions with three herrings' tails; a ship, of the most primitive type, is engraved on the common seal of the borough; and the municipal insignia comprise, with two maces and a sword of justice, a silver-gilt oar, to symbolise the maritime pursuits of the townsfolk. There are some old mural fortifications, the Black Friars' Tower and other towers still remaining, with parts of the town wall, but the gates have disappeared. Yarmouth was held by a garrison of the Parliamentary army during the Civil Wars, but its history has generally been peaceful.

Standing on the Denes, as the open level grounds between the sea and the inner water are locally styled, this town has an airy and salubrious position. Its haven, constructed by artificial cuttings, several times repeated, across the strip of land, has cost from first to last a million of money—a million and a half, including all the outworks; the North and South Piers, framed of massive oaken piles and beams, running out three quarters of a mile, with two auxiliary breakwaters, and leaving an entrance 200 ft. wide; the depth of water at low tide on the bar is 9 ft. 6 in., but from 15 ft. 6 in. to 17 ft. at high spring tides. The Great Yarmouth Harbour Commissioners have jurisdiction over the rivers up to Norwich, to Coltishall, and to Beccles. The North and South Quays, the Marine Parade and Esplanade, with a seaside promenade of three miles, the bridges over the Yare and Bure, and other improvements of the site, render the modern town both commodious and agreeable; and it is well paved, drained, and lighted. The older part of Yarmouth, adjacent to the earliest haven, which was a former channel of the Yare, the most northern outlet, long ago choked up with sand, is more quaint than convenient. It was hemmed in by the old town walls and the river; and the intersecting parallel lines, of narrow streets and close-built "Rows," or alleys, to the number of 156, have been compared by Charles Dickens to the form of a Gridiron. These Rows are usually six feet wide, but their overhanging upper storeys often come within three feet of each other, so that opposite neighbours at their windows can almost shake hands from side to side of the street. They are inhabited by the families of fishermen, sailors, and labourers; but some of the houses, even in these narrow lanes, were once the handsome mansions of opulent merchants. The pavement is of round pebbles from the beach, and the only carriages that can pass are wheel-barrows, or one-horse trollies, called "Yarmouth carts," made very narrow, with the wheels beneath, instead of outside, the body of the vehicle. "Kitty Witches' Row" is 4½ ft. wide at one end, and but thirty inches wide at the other; it was named, some say, from a Mr. Christopher Wych; another story, which seems mythical, is that there was a peculiar tribe of witches called "Kitty Witches" in that part of England. The records of the Yarmouth Corporation, indeed, in the year 1645 show that Mr. Hopkins, the professional witchfinder, was commissioned to employ his skill in hunting out such wicked persons, and to be paid his accustomed fee.

The Old Parish Church, that of St. Nicholas, is the largest parish church in England, being wider than most of our great cathedrals, though not equal to these in length. Its entire width, not including the transepts, is but 110 ft., the aisles being 39 ft. wide and the nave 30 ft. wide; the nave is 140 ft. long and the chancel 90 ft.; the general height is 42 ft., and the spire is 168 ft. high. It was founded by Bishop Herbert de Losinga, a Suffolk man, Abbot of Thetford and Bishop of Norwich, in the reign of William Rufus; but little of the Norman building is left. The grand aisles of the nave are wholly of early English architecture; and these, with the comparative narrowness of the nave in the middle, have a very striking effect. There is room here for a congregation of five thousand people, but during three hundred years, until 1864, the church was partitioned by walls dividing the chancel and its aisles from the nave, while the south aisle was allowed to fall into a ruinous condition. This has been rebuilt, and other extensive restorations have been accomplished of late years, with equal liberality and good taste, mainly by the efforts of Archdeacon Nevill. But St. Nicholas's Church three centuries ago must have been far more splendid than it is now, the chancel then being most richly decorated, and numerous chapels in the aisles filled with every kind of costly adornment.

The Old Market-place, nearly three acres in extent, with several public buildings, charity schools and other institutions, and good houses and shops on the opposite side, is an important feature of the town. Near this, an avenue of trees leads to the Fishermen's Hospital, where a statue of St. Peter, the patron of fishermen, in a cupola above the gateway, overlooks a group representing Charity, a woman protecting a naked child, in the centre of the front yard. Twenty aged fishermen and their wives, but with no children, reside in this hospital, and receive half-a-crown a week to live upon. The Black Friars' Tower, constructed of brickwork and faced with flints set in a chequered pattern, was built in 1337, taking its name from the adjacent Convent of a monastic Order: but this, as well as the South-east tower, which stands two hundred yards from it, semi-circular in form, projecting beyond the town wall, belongs to the old fortifications of Yarmouth. There was a Castle or Keep, with four turrets, in the centre of the old town, but it was demolished in the seventeenth century.

The Old Borough Jail, more commonly styled the Toll-house, from the customary receipt of tolls by the Bailiff in the principal Chamber, has an antiquity of six hundred years. The Early English stone doorway, and the two windows with cinque foil heads, the external gallery and staircase, and the sculptured town arms, with a sword-bearing figure above, guarding the entrance to this building, show that it was once the abode of municipal dignity, rather than a mere jail.

The Townhall, erected in 1716, on the banks of the Yare, is an edifice of the Grecian style, its river front, to the west, being adorned with a portico of Tuscan columns and a range of pilasters, with entablature and balustrade above; it has a fine large Assembly Room and other state apartments. The New Municipal buildings are shown in a separate illustration. They have been erected from the designs of Mr. J. B. Pearce, architect. Before quitting Old Yarmouth, we would notice some other architectural antiquities, of which not the least remarkable is the Star Hotel, on Hall Quay, a handsome Elizabethan mansion, built from 1594 to 1606, by William Crowe, merchant, who afterwards purchased Caister Castle of Sir William Paston. It became, about one hundred years ago, the property of a gentleman named Bradshaw; but the popular notion that it belonged to John Bradshaw, president of the Judges who condemned King Charles I. to death, is entirely groundless. The principal room on the first floor, decorated with fine black wainscot panels, and with fluted pilasters surmounted by carved male and female figures, besides ornamental carvings of foliage, fruit, and flowers, is a good specimen of a stately domestic interior. Over the chimney are carved, in high relief, the arms of the English Merchant Venturers' Company, a sea with a dolphin's head, a three-masted ship, the standard of England, and a globe held by two hands thrust out of a cloud above. The Norfolk and Norwich Archaeological Society, in 1867, held their meeting in this room, and Mr C. J. Palmer, F.S.A., read a paper concerning the old house. The chief apartment is called "the Nelson Room," only because it contains a portrait of Lord Nelson.

The naval hero of Trafalgar, indeed, being a Norfolk man, though not born at Great Yarmouth, his memory is honoured in this town. On the South Denes, near the Race-course, stands the Nelson Monument, erected in 1817; a pillar of Scotch marble, designed by Wilkins, the architect of our National Gallery. The column, rising 144 ft. high, is surmounted by the figure of Britannia, with a laurel wreath and a trident pointing to Nelson's native village, Burnham Thorpe. It can be ascended by 217 steps; the pedestal bears a lengthy eulogistic inscription.

Caister, one of the several interesting places within an hour's walk of Yarmouth, presents to view the ruins of a grand old castellated mansion of the fifteenth century. This castle, as it is styled, was built by Sir John Fastolf—not to be mistaken, as Shakespeare himself says in the prologue to one of his plays, for his own Sir John Falstaff. The real Sir John Fastolf was a military commander of some note in the French wars of Henry V., but returned home in 1439, and dwelt here in the house which he had built. He bequeathed it to John Paston, the head of a family whose private affairs were made known to us with extreme minuteness, in the nineteenth century, by the publication of "the Paston Letters." The house was a large quadrangular building, of brick, with a circular tower, 94 ft. high, surrounded with a broad moat; the whole measured 170 ft. by 155 ft. Its great hall and other state apartments are gone, but the tower yet remains, with some portions of walls and the moat. Caister Castle, and also Shadingfield Lodge, are among the subjects of our Yarmouth Sketches; but the neighbourhood might furnish many other subjects worthy to employ the Artist's pencil, if we had space for more Engravings. A view is given of the marshes behind the town, where, as young David Copperfield said to his nurse Peggotty, the land is mixed up, "like toast and water," with the river and the tidal inlet of the sea. Young David wondered how it came to be so flat, if the world were really round, as his geography book said, but Peggotty replied, that "we must take things as we find them." The windmills serve to work pumps for the land drainage. Visitors to Yarmouth will observe the number of look-out boxes, perched on scaffolds, or on the roofs of houses, commanding a view of the open sea. Here at all hours of daylight, but especially in the early morning, men in blue guernseys keep watch for the shoals of herring. Yarmouth and Lowestoft, between them, employ about eight thousand men, with a thousand boats, in this important fishery, capturing about 450,000,000 herrings in the year.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

Twelve months (including Christmas Number), £1 9s. 3d.
Six months, 14s. Christmas Half-Year, 15s. 3d.
Three months, 7s. Christmas Quarter, 8s. 3d.

Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6d. for each Number, paid in advance.

ABROAD.

The yearly subscription abroad is 36s. 4d. (on thin paper, 32s.), with the following exceptions:—

To Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Mozambique Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, 41s. (thin paper, 34s.)
To Madagascar (except St. Mary), 45s. (on thin paper, 36s. 4d.)

Subscribers are specially advised to order the thick paper edition, the appearance of the engravings in the thin paper copies being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publishing Office, 128, Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London; or by Post-Office Order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, George C. Leighton, of 198, Strand, London.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Bowling, Alfred George Lovelace, to be Minister of St. Mark's, Hoxlydown.
Chaytor, Charles, Rector of St. Alban's, Worcester; united by Order in Council to St. Helen's, Worcester.
Fagan, Henry Stuart; Rector of Great Cressingham-with-Bodney.
Fielder, Trevor; Vicar of St. Andrew's, Lambeth.
Grantham, H., Minor Canon of Chester Cathedral; Rector of St. Mary's, Chester.
Hawth, W.; Sub-Chantor of York Cathedral.
Lambert, J. H., Curate of Much Marcle-with-Yatton, Herefordshire; Middlebury-Vicar in Hereford Cathedral, and Chaplain H.M. Prison, Hereford.
Maude, S., Curate of Holy Trinity, Haverstock-hill; Vicar of Needham Market, Suffolk.
Nichols, T. B.; Evening Lecturer of St. Thomas's, Newcastle.
Phillips, B.; Chaplain of the Birmingham Workhouse.
Potter, J. H.; Vicar of Holy Trinity, Upper Tooting.—Guardian.

The Queen has been pleased to approve the appointment of the Rev. Ernest Roland Wilberforce, Canon of Winchester and Sub-Almoner to the Queen, to the new see of Newcastle.

The Bishop of Durham has conferred the Archdeaconry of Auckland (the creation of which had been formally notified in the Gazette) on the Rev. Henry William Watkins, M.A., Archdeacon of Northumberland.

The Duke of Edinburgh presided last Saturday in the theatre of the London University at Burlington House, where the Duchess of Edinburgh distributed the prizes gained by the children of the schools in connection with the Chapel Royal, Savoy.

A handsome memorial stained-glass window has been put into the east end of Hubberston church, Milford Haven, by the Rector, the Rev. John Bowen Rowlands, to the memory of his mother. The work has been designed by Messrs. A. L. Moore and Co., Southampton-row.

A meeting of the Curates' Alliance was held last Saturday, when it was reported that the opposition offered on behalf of the Alliance at several intended sales of livings had prevented the advowsons in question being disposed of. A resolution denouncing the sale of livings, and another in support of Mr. Leatham's bill, now before Parliament, were passed.

The Archbishop of Canterbury presided yesterday week at the annual general court of the Incorporated Church Building Society, held in the rooms of the National Society, Westminster. There was a large and influential attendance. The report showed that there was a field of usefulness for the society much larger than they had funds to deal with, and the need for support was strongly urged by several speakers.

The Archbishop of Canterbury visited Upper Norwood last week, attended by the Rev. L. T. Davidson, M.A., as chaplain, and formally opened, under his license, the chancel and part of the nave of a new church to be called St. John the Evangelist, Upper Norwood. His Grace preached the sermon and spoke at the luncheon. The church will have to be consecrated later on. Mr. Pearson, who is engaged on Truro Cathedral, is the architect.

Last Saturday the Bishop of Chichester consecrated a portion of the new cemetery at Hove, Brighton, which has been provided at a cost to the town of £17,000. Twenty-five acres have been purchased, but only twelve are at present laid out—eight and a half being consecrated, three devoted to Nonconformists, and half an acre to Roman Catholics. At the close of the ceremony, the Bishop proceeded to lay the foundation-stone of a new church (St. Barnabas) in Sackville-road.

The Bishop of St. Albans has admitted four ladies as the first sisters of the newly-established community of the Name Jesus at Maplestead. The community has been formed on the model afforded by the Bèguines, or Ursulines, abroad. The sisters make no vows for life, but only of poverty, chastity, and obedience, revocable from time to time. Their primary but by no means their only work is in penitentiaries. The Bishop of Winchester has opened some new buildings at Hawley, built and endowed by the late Charles Randall as a children's home, which is carried on by the Clewer sisters.

A meeting of the board of management of the Bishop of London's Fund was held at the office, 46A, Pall-mall, last week, the Archdeacon of Middlesex in the chair. The secretary read the report of the executive committee, which stated that the amount of new money received since the commencement of the year had been £9250, which, with the balance on Jan. 1, grants cancelled, &c., had given, when divided in the proportions settled by the board, £3464 for living agents, and £6959 for material objects. The former sum remained still available for the grants to be made in June; out of the latter sum grants had been made for clergymen's residences, amounting to £692, for schools £100, for mission buildings £1632, and for churches £4489, leaving a balance for future grants of £44. The eighth instalment of her Majesty's gift has been received.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was opened on Thursday week in Edinburgh with the usual state ceremonial. The Earl of Aberdeen, her Majesty's Lord High Commissioner, held a Levée at Holyrood Palace at eleven o'clock, which was attended by the local municipal bodies, representative noblemen, and the leading clergymen of the Established Church. The avenues leading to the reception-room at the palace were prettily decorated with flowers and evergreens. After the Levée his Grace, accompanied by the Countess of Aberdeen and suite, went in procession to St. Giles's Cathedral, where service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Smith, of Cathcart, the retiring Moderator of the Assembly. The streets through which the procession passed were lined with military, and the pageant was witnessed by large crowds of spectators who were on the Calton-hill, and occupied the pavements along the greater portion of the way between Holyrood and the cathedral. At the conclusion of the service in the cathedral, the Lord High Commissioner went in procession to the General Assembly Hall, while a Royal salute was fired from the castle. The Assembly having been constituted in the usual way, the Moderator (Dr. Smith) moved the election of Professor Milligan, Aberdeen, as his successor, and Professor Milligan took the chair. The commission to the Lord High Commissioner and her Majesty's letter having been read and recorded, the Lord High Commissioner addressed the Assembly, and acquainted them of Her Majesty's intention to renew the grant of £2000 to be applied towards the promotion of Christian knowledge and of the principles of the reformed religion in the Highlands and islands of Scotland. He had also to suggest for their consideration whether a portion of that grant might not beneficially be appropriated to aiding and encouraging men to preach the Gospel in the Gaelic language in some of those portions of the country. The Moderator replied in appropriate terms, and other business was then proceeded with.

There has arrived at the East India Docks the first shipment of frozen meat from New Zealand. It consists of 5000 sheep, and, though brought by a sailing-vessel, the Dunedin, the voyage occupying ninety-eight days, the cargo is reported to be in excellent condition.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

DIGESTION—THE SALIVA.

Professor Arthur Gamgee, M.D., F.R.S., in his second lecture, given on Tuesday, May 23, in the first place described the characters and general purposes of the salivary secretion; and then commented on the structure of the salivary glands, pointing out the distinction recently drawn between the so-called serous salivary glands, such as the parotid of man, and the mucous salivary gland, as represented by the sub-maxillary gland of the dog, and the mixed form of gland, as observed in the sub-maxillary gland of man. Attention was directed to the differences which the secreting cells of the salivary glands exhibit in the varied conditions of rest and activity. The remarkable relationship of the salivary glands to the nervous system was fully examined, reference being made to the theory of Heidenhain, that the gland cells are under the influence of two classes of nerve fibres—the secretory and the trophic, of which the former influences the secretion of water and salt, and the latter that of organic matter, by apparently hastening the chemical changes in the protoplasm of the gland-cell. The vascular changes which follow stimulation of various nerves were noticed, and it was shown that these changes do not account for the phenomena of secretion, inasmuch as, under the influence of drugs, the vascular changes may be induced without concomitant secretion. Having dwelt upon certain other facts relating to the secretion of saliva, the Professor considered the chemical action of the saliva of man and some other animals. This is confined to starch, which, when cooked, is in the first place transformed by a ferment in the saliva (salivary diastase) into soluble starch, and then into various dextrins, and into a sugar termed maltose, identical with the sugar formed in germinating barley under the influence of the ferment named diastase. Whilst soluble starch is non-diffusible, the products of the digestive action of saliva upon starch are diffusible—i.e., can pass through animal and vegetable membranes. This is characteristic not only of the saliva, but also of the other active digestive juices.

PROPERTIES OF THE METALS—MAGNESIUM, &c.

Professor Dewar, M.A., F.R.S., began his sixth lecture, given on Thursday, May 25, with illustrations of magnesium, a metal of a silvery white colour, widely diffused in nature. The salts were explained to be valuable agents in the production of ammonia and phosphoric acid for agricultural manures. The metal burns with an exceedingly brilliant light, which, from its richness in ultra-violet rays, is a powerful photographic agent, as was shown, and the distinctive bands of its spectrum characterise the solar atmosphere. Magnesium is also very remarkable for its power of burning in carbonic acid; and, by combining with the nitrogen of the air, it has become the means of the synthetical production of the volatile alkali ammonia; a formation which would be of immense value if it could be cheaply effected. The production of the highly useful per-oxide of hydrogen, or oxidised water, was explained and its properties described. The peculiar effect, termed catalytic, formerly attributed to the mere presence of an element, was stated to be due really to a series of secondary actions. The Professor next illustrated the properties of zinc and cadmium, very analogous metals, being exceedingly fusible and volatile, and obtained from their ores by means of carbon, as vapours. Zinc is extremely valuable for its resistance to the action of oxygen, for which it is much used in the arts. The soluble salts of these metals also serve many purposes. Of the fusible alloys of cadmium plugs are made, for an important office in the arrangements for electric lighting. The peculiarities of the spectra of these metals and their variations, with the source of light, temperature, and atmospheric pressure, were well illustrated.

SACRED LAWS OF THE HINDOOS.

Sir Henry S. Maine, K.C.S.I., F.R.S., who gave the discourse at the evening meeting on Friday, May 26, began by referring to the introduction of the study of Sanskrit, by Sir William Jones, who, on becoming an Indian Judge, found it needful to refer to the laws. The laws of Menu, which he translated, were then dated about 1200 B.C., and, believed to be the work of one man, are considered by Professor Max Müller to be part of a long-continued series, and to have been compiled about 1300 A.D. They are in verse. Much more ancient books, in the form of aphorisms, have been discovered in the Punjab, the work of a school of learned Brahmins during many ages. They are essentially religious and liturgical, teaching what men ought to know and do from life to death—theology and morals. There is a perfect continuity of life; and the doctrine of the transmigration of souls pervades the whole system; the soul of a vicious man enters the body of one of the lowest animals; that of a holy person might be united to God. Punishment for sins was to be excessively severe; there were twenty-two hells or purgatories; and men were exhorted to torment themselves in this world, to escape worse hereafter. As time went on, the king, whose office in early times was chiefly to enforce penances, became a judge, the chief of a tribunal, and eventually a code of civil law was constituted. The inheritance of property was intimately connected with ancestor worship. When a Brahmin became old he became a hermit, and his property was divided amongst his sons, whose bounden duty it was at his death to appease his spirit by sacrifices. The earnest desire for sons led often to adoption. The authority of the Brahmins was exorbitant; they enjoyed immunity from the sanctions of the criminal laws, and were believed even to have a certain degree of power over the gods. They were priests, legislators, and rulers. On a full examination, their influence is considered to be rather evil than good; and to this may be attributed the last great mutiny. The Hindoo mind now is turning towards Western culture and civilisation, and the future government of India is a very important problem.

FORMS OF POETRY.

Professor David Masson began his second lecture, given on Saturday last, May 27, with remarks on reverie or day-dreams or passive cogitations, termed by Shakspeare "sweet sessions of silent thought," only to be occasionally indulged in. Here we may have mingled reminiscences of the past, forming a visionary whole. It is passive spontaneity, and if we try to break in on it the spirit is gone. The phantoms formed represent the mood of the mind which formed them. The habitual reveries of any one may be taken as poems of that person's constitution. This is what Mr. Stuart Mill considers to be the type of real poetry. Examples may be found in Shelley. Professor Masson then passed on to the artistic recollection and construction of reverie by a poet intentionally, weaving and harmonising all his phantasms into an effect of beauty. In illustration of this, examples were cited from Tennyson's "Princess" ("The splendour falls on castle walls," &c.), and from Keats' "Endymion" ("O Sorrow," &c.). A great many of the best short poems of our poets are such "overtures in dream language." An extract from Thomas the Rhymer was read, and also a summary of Browning's poem, "Childe Roland to the dark Tower came," a weird piece of dream phantasy, which only a bold critic would undertake to explain. After remarking that it becomes the habit of the poet to think in images, rather than in abstract propositions, and giving examples, from Keats (a definition of life), and Wordsworth's defence of the sonnet-form, the Professor commented on the Mythopœia, which corresponds to Bacon's "feigned history," which includes works of imagination, in both prose and poetry—fables, ballads, epics, and romances—all exhibiting more or less of a complex character, the result of constructive art. Such works are primarily the literature of a country, and have most fascinated the soul of the world.

BENEVOLENCE AND SELF-HELP.

The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh visited Charing-cross Hospital on Thursday week, where her Royal Highness presented the prizes to the students in the medical school. The Duke and Duchess then inspected the wards of the hospital, and afterwards were conducted to the board-room, where an address was read, and a number of young ladies presented purses to the amount of nearly £300. Their Royal Highnesses were most cordially greeted on arrival and departure.

On the same day the Earl of Derby presided at the annual meeting of the Governors of the Brompton Hospital for Consumption. He expressed the hope that as they were to open on June 13 the new building, which had more than absorbed the large legacy from the late Miss Read, the £10,000 additional income which was needed to maintain it efficiently would be forthcoming.—Lady Burdett-Coutts opened a bazaar at Kensington Townhall, in aid of the funds of the Clergy Relief Corporation.—At the annual general meeting of the Sailors' Home it was stated that during the year 9022 seamen had been received into the home, including 3481 old boarders. Since the establishment of the institute 350,924 officers and seamen had participated in its benefits, and the aggregate of money paid in by boarders was £2,729,730.—The annual meeting and half-yearly election of the Infant Orphan Asylum, Wanstead, was held at the Cannon-street Hotel. The treasurer, Mr. John Deacon, was in the chair. The report was read by the secretary, Mr. H. W. Green, and stated that more than 600 children had been benefited by the asylum during the year. Sixty-two had been admitted, and sixty-eight had left. The School-Inspector had reported very favourably on the schools. The Duke of Connaught has promised to take the chair at the anniversary, on June 24.—A meeting was held at Willis's Rooms, under the presidency of the Earl of Shaftesbury, on behalf of the seaside branch of the Metropolitan Convalescent Institution at Bexhill, near St. Leonards. Donations to the amount of £791 were announced.

The annual meeting of the friends of the Royal Association in Aid of the Deaf and Dumb was held last week in the lecture-hall of the association, Oxford-street; Earl Cairns occupied the chair. The Rev. S. Smith, the secretary and Chaplain, read the report, which stated that the work of the society constituted a special mission to the deaf and dumb of the metropolis, its object being to promote their spiritual and temporal welfare. The society continued to provide fourteen services per week in eight parts of London and suburbs, conducted in sign manual language by its three Chaplains, three lay missionaries, and extra Sunday teachers. The temporal welfare of the deaf and dumb was promoted by making them depend on their own labour for support, instead of on charity or public funds, and several of them had been admitted into employment in the Post Office. In cases of distress from want of work, and in sickness, temporary pecuniary assistance was given, and the sum of £299 had been expended in the education and maintenance of several children ineligible for the London Asylum. The funds had been so low that the committee were compelled to sell out the only investment, and there was a debt of £600 on the building. The chairman remarked that the institution was unique in the metropolis, and he thought it only required to be known to ensure for it more support. The meeting was addressed by other gentlemen, the speeches being interpreted as they were made to the deaf and dumb in the meeting by sign-manual language.

Dr. B. W. Richardson presided yesterday week at the annual meeting of the British Medical Society of London, Chandos-street, Cavendish-square. There are now 264 members of the association and thirteen medical student associates.

On Monday several events of interest took place. The first instalment of the public park at Dover was opened. It is situated on the north side of the town, and commands a fine view of the Dour Valley and the Channel.—On the same day the Earl of Derby opened a bazaar at Stanley Park, Liverpool, in aid of the funds of the Stanley Hospital. In the course of a sound, practical speech he said he should like to see a further extension of a movement for obtaining from patients some contribution towards the medical assistance they received.—Presiding at the annual dinner of the Wilts Friendly Society held at Wilton Lord Pembroke spoke upon co-operative societies, and expressed the opinion that such organisations would solve the difficulties between capital and labour.—Sir Robert Lloyd-Lindsay, M.P., was present at the annual festival of the Royal Berkshire Friendly Society—of which institution her Majesty the Queen is patroness—held in Englefield Park, the seat of Mr. Richard Benyon, the president, who entertained the members at dinner and tea, and provided amusements during the afternoon. Sir Robert Lindsay gave an address on the importance of thrift and forethought, and urged upon young men the duty of joining some sound friendly society.—Lord Reay opened the proceedings of the Co-operative Congress in the Sheldonian Theatre, Oxford. He described co-operation as the best friend of capital, and the strongest ally of the middle classes. An exhibition of manufactures of productive societies, in connection with the Congress, was opened in the Corn Exchange by Mr. Broadhurst, M.P., the President of Trinity occupying the chair. The governing body of the Manchester Unity of Oddfellows began their annual meeting at Cardiff. The Grand Master, Mr. Flannagan, reviewed the proceedings of the past year, and the board of directors presented a report, which gave a favourable account of the condition of the society. A resolution was passed unanimously expressing indignation at the atrocious assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke, and reference was made to the important services rendered by Lord Cavendish to the Manchester Unity.

Princess Christian, who takes an interest in the poor parishes of East London, opened a bazaar on Wednesday, which lasted over the three following days, in aid of the church and schools and mission fund of the parish of St. Paul, Haggerston, in the neighbourhood of Shoreditch.

The meeting of the Royal Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows took place on Wednesday—the Earl of Morley, Under-Secretary of State for War, in the chair.

Lord Shaftesbury again appeals on behalf of the annual excursion into the country for the Ragged School Children. Every successive excursion gives (he says) a fresh proof of the great moral and physical benefit to these poor creatures, who pass a good part of their lives in dirt and darkness.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated March 11, 1880), with a codicil (dated March 31, 1882), of Mr. Frederick Schwann, formerly of No. 6, Moor-gate-street, and of Manchester and Glasgow, but late of No. 23, Gloucester-square, merchant, who died on April 22 last, was proved on the 20th ult. by Frederick Sigismund Schwann, Theodore Schwann, John Frederick Schwann, and Charles Ernest Schwann, the sons, the executors, the value of the personal estate being upwards of £280,000. The testator bequeaths £500 to the Huddersfield Mechanics' Institute and Technical School; £40,000 to his son Frederick Sigismund; £60,000 to his son Theodore; £74,000 each to his sons John Frederick and Charles Ernest; £40,000, upon trust, for his daughter, Mrs. Mary Catherine Barbara Holland; his household furniture and effects between his five children; £3000 each to the four daughters of his son Frederick Sigismund; and numerous legacies to employes in the several firms in which he was a partner, and to others. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be divided between his five children in proportion to the sums specially bequeathed to them. The legacies to his children are to be in addition to the gifts made by him to them in his lifetime.

The will (dated April 22, 1881) of Mrs. Abigail Edelman, late of No. 8, Montpelier-crescent, Brighton, who died on March 17 last, was proved on the 2nd ult. by Alexander Davidson Kemp, the acting executor, the value of the personal estate exceeding £27,000. The testatrix leaves £500 to the Church Missionary Society; £500 to augment the living of Merton, Surrey; and other considerable legacies. The residue of her property she gives to her cousin, the said Alexander Davidson Kemp.

The will (dated Oct. 2, 1880), with a codicil (dated Oct. 7, 1881), of Mrs. Emily Williams, late of Oxford Lodge, Worthing, who died on March 14 last, was proved on the 6th ult. by Alfred Bell, William Henry Brooker, and Frederick William Steward, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to nearly £27,000. The testatrix bequeaths £1000 to the Worthing Infirmary; £500 each to the Sussex County Hospital, the Hospital for Incurables, Putney, and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge; £3000 Consols to the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, to endow the living of Sompting, Sussex; and £1000 Consols, upon trust, for the dividends to be applied by the Vicar and Churchwardens of the parish of Sompting for the benefit of the deserving poor, in the purchase of fuel, blankets, and clothing, to be distributed on Dec. 20 in each year.

The will (dated March 24, 1880) of Signor Pasquale Favale, late of Manetti Palace, Strada Mergellina, Naples, who died on March 7 last, was proved in London on the 3rd ult. by Pietro Miletto, the sole executor, the value of the personal estate being over £12,000. The testator first declares his intention of dying as he has lived, an honest man, hating tyrants and corruption; and he then gives and bequeaths to the editor enjoying the greatest repute in any town of Europe, such standing to be determined by his executor, the sum of 6000 Italian lire, free of any expense, tax, or deduction soever, subject to the obligation of printing and issuing to the public the novel written by him in the French language and intitled "Zuleite; or, a Prince of Satriano in the Year 1630;" his comedy, in five acts, called "An English Election;" three poems, entitled "Ferdinand the Second of Naples on the Threshold of Paradise," "The True Progress," and "The Final Judgment;" and various poetries; the said editor to receive the proceeds of such publications upon condition that nothing shall be omitted, and that he shall place one hundred copies of each work at the disposal of his executor and keep one hundred for himself. He also bequeaths to her Imperial and Royal Majesty of India and of the United Kingdom of Great Britain his most cherished production, called "Alzira," a tragic opera in three acts, still undited, trusting that her Majesty will order the same to be represented in her Imperial and Royal theatre for the benefit of the poor of the great City of London; 24,000 lire to the municipality Gioia dal Colle, to found a scholarship at either the Royal College of Music at Naples or Bologna for a youth of Gioia dal Colle, or Bari, to be tenable for ten years; 12,000 lire each to the municipalities of Gioia dal Colle, Bari, and Naples, the interest to be applied every year in endowing on their marriages three poor honest girls between sixteen and twenty-five, their names to be drawn by lot; 18,000 lire to the municipalities of Paris and London, in which latter city his wife was born, the income to be applied each year in endowing on their marriages three poor but honest girls between sixteen and twenty-five, to be drawn by lot; and some other legacies. The residue of his moneys is to be divided between Miss Antonietta Ottieri, the companion of his late wife, and the charitable institutions, for both sexes, of Gioia dal Colle. It is well, however, to mention that some of the pecuniary legacies are dependent on his investments in the Turkish funds being successfully realised.

The will (dated Sept. 8, 1881) of Dame Anne Arbuthnot, widow of Sir Robert Keith Arbuthnot, Bart., late of the Piazza delle Indipendenza, Florence, who died on March 6 last, was proved on the 16th ult. by the Rev. Robert Keith Arbuthnot, the son, the acting executor, the value of the personal estate exceeding £12,000. The testatrix bequeaths £6000 to her son Robert Keith; £4000 to her son Fitzgerald Hay; her furniture and effects and an annuity to her daughter, Henrietta Annie; and legacies to other relatives and to a servant. The residue of her property she gives to her two sons.

The will (dated June 15, 1871) of the Hon. Jane Elizabeth el Mezrab, wife of the Cheikh Medjnel el Mezrab, late of Damascus, in Syria, who died on Aug. 11 last, was proved in London on April 13 last by the Right Hon. Edward St. Vincent, Baron Digby, the brother and sole executor, the personal estate exceeding £6000. The testatrix specially gives to her husband £1000, her house and stables at Damascus, all her horses and dromedaries, and certain jewellery and other effects; to her son Heribert, Baron de Venningen, £1000 and some jewellery; to each of her brothers, Lord Digby and the Hon. Kenneth Henry Digby, several articles of jewellery; and the residue of her property to her husband. The deceased was formerly the wife of the late Earl of Ellenborough, and afterwards the wife of Baron Venningen, of Bavaria.

The will (dated Feb. 24, 1882) of Lord Henry Vere Cholmondeley, late of East Burnham Lodge, Slough, Bucks, who died on Feb. 27 last, was proved on April 18 last by Lady Frances Isabella Catherine Cholmondeley, the widow, and John Winston Thomas Spencer, the executors, the personal estate exceeding £4000. The testator leaves £200 and his furniture and other chattels personal to his wife; and all his real estate and the residue of the personality, upon trust, for her for life, and then for his children, or other issue, as she shall appoint.

The will (dated March 2, 1879) of Sir Pierre Louis Napoleon Cavagnari, K.C.B., C.S.I., who died on Sept. 3 last at Cabul, has been proved in London by Dame Mercy Emma Cavagnari, the widow and sole executrix, to whom he leaves all his estate and effects. The personal estate in British India exceeds Rs. 50,000, and in this country amounts to about £350.

1. The Yare, with the Townhall. 2. Nelson Room, Star Hotel. 3. The Black Friars' Tower. 4. The South-east Tower. 5. A Yarmouth Cart. 6. Look-Outs. 7. St. Nicholas' Pariah Church. 8. The Yare, with the Townhall. 9. The Black Friars' Tower. 10. A Yarmouth Cart. 11. The South-east Tower. 12. Look-Outs. 13. St. Nicholas' Pariah Church.

SKETCHES OF YARMOUTH AND

DRAWN BY S. J.

Quays. 9. Marshes behind Yarmouth. 10. The Jail. 11. The Fishermen's Hospital. 12. Kitty Witches' Row. 13. Caister Castle. 14. The Nelson Monument. 15. The Market-place.

ITS NEIGHBOURHOOD.

RAD.

OBITUARY.

THE DUKE OF GRAFTON.

The Most Noble William Henry, sixth Duke of Grafton, Hereditary Ranger of Whitchbury Forest, Lieut.-Colonel 1st Northampton Rifle Volunteers, J.P. and D.L., died at his residence in Grosvenor-place, on the 21st ult. His Grace was born Aug. 4, 1819; the eldest son of Henry, fifth Duke of Grafton, by Mary Caroline, his wife, third daughter of Admiral the Hon. Sir George Crauford Berkeley, G.C.B.; and succeeded to the family honours at his father's decease, March 26, 1863. Prior to his accession he was an Attaché at Naples, and, from 1847, sat in the House of Commons as M.P. for Thetford. He held the office of Comptroller of the Seals until it was abolished. He married, Feb. 10, 1858, the Hon. Marie Anne Louise, only daughter of Francis, third Lord Ashburton, but had no issue. His Grace's successor is his brother, General Lord Augustus Charles Lennox FitzRoy, C.B., now seventh Duke of Grafton, who was born June 22, 1821, and married, June 9, 1847, Anna, youngest daughter of Mr. James Balfour, of Whittingham, county Berwick, by whom (who died Dec. 23, 1857) he has Henry James, Earl of Euston, born Nov. 28, 1848, and other issue. The Ducal House of Grafton descends from Henry FitzRoy, second son of King Charles II., by Barbara Villiers, Duchess of Cleveland.

RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN HOLKER.

The Right Hon. Sir John Holker, one of the Lords Justices of the Court of Appeal, died on the 24th ult. He was born in 1828, the son of Mr. Samuel Holker, manufacturer, of Bury, by Sarah, wife, daughter of Mr. J. Brocklehurst, of Clitheroe; received his education at Bury Grammar School, and in early life was articled to a solicitor, Mr. Easton, of Kirkby Lonsdale. In 1854 he was called to the Bar at Gray's Inn, became a most successful barrister, and attained his silk gown in 1868. From 1872 till the present year he sat in Parliament for Preston in the Conservative interest, during which period he held office as Solicitor-General, 1874-5, and Attorney-General, 1875 to 1880. The honour of knighthood was conferred on him in 1874, and he was appointed a Lord Justice of Appeal in January last. Sir John married, first, in 1863, Jane, daughter of Mr. James Wilson, of Eccles, near Manchester, which lady died the following year; and secondly, in 1874, Mary Lucia, daughter of the late Mr. Patrick MacHugh, of Cleetham Hill, Manchester. A portrait of Lord Justice Holker was given in our Number for May 23, 1874.

REV. DR. WILLIAM HANNA.

The Rev. William Hanna, D.D., LL.D., of Edinburgh, died on the 24th ult., at 77, Colshill-street, Eaton-square, in his seventy-fourth year. He was son of the Rev. Dr. Samuel Hanna, Professor of Theology at Belfast, was educated at the University of Edinburgh, and, in 1835, became Minister of East Kilbride, Lanarkshire. Subsequently, leaving the Established Church with his father-in-law, Dr. Chalmers, at the disruption, he was called, in 1850, to Free St. John's Church, Edinburgh, where he was long associated with Dr. Guthrie. Dr. Hanna's writings are well-known: amongst them were "Wycliffe and the Huguenots," "Wars of the Huguenots," "Memoirs of Dr. Chalmers," and many religious works. He was for a time editor of the North British Review.

We have also to record the deaths of—

The Hon. Lady Henniker, on the 23rd ult., at Brighton, aged seventy-seven. She was the youngest daughter of John Minet, third Lord Henniker, and was married, Feb. 14, 1826, as his second wife, to Sir Augustus Henniker, Bart., of Newton Hall, Essex, who died in 1849. By this union she had three sons and eight daughters, of whom the eldest son is the present Sir Brydges Powell Henniker, Bart.

Mr. Thomas Somerville, of Drishane, in the county of Cork, J.P. and D.L., High Sheriff 1863, on the 19th ult., in his eighty-fifth year. He was eldest son of Mr. Thomas Townsend Somerville, of Drishane; was married to his cousin, Henrietta Augusta, eldest daughter of Colonel Townsend, of Castle Townsend, by whom he leaves one son, Colonel Thomas Henry Somerville, and one daughter, Henrietta.

Mr. Henry MacDowall, of Garthland, in the county of Renfrew, J.P. and D.L., on the 20th ult., at his seat near Loch Winnoch, in his eighty-sixth year. He was second son of Day Hort MacDowall, of Walkinshaw, grandson of William MacDowall, of Castle Semple, and nephew of William MacDowall, of Garthland and Castle Semple, M.P. for the county of Renfrew.

Miss Ellen Margaret Ross O'Connor, on the 23rd ult., at the Palazzo Grimani, Venice, the residence of her niece, the Contessa Adèle de Watteville Micheli. Miss O'Connor, who was born in 1818, was the daughter and coheir of Rear-Admiral Sir Richard O'Connor, younger son of Sir P. O'Connor, of Marble Hill, county Cork. Of her two sisters, the elder married the Count de Watteville de Loyus, of Bern, and the younger, Sir Maurice O'Connell, Bart., of Killarney.

Lady Georgina Molyneux, at Earl's Court, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge Wells, in her seventy-eighth year. Her Ladyship was the second daughter of George, third Earl of Ashburnham, by Lady Charlotte Percy, his wife, sister of George, fifth Duke of Northumberland. She was married, first, Feb. 28, 1828, to Mr. Henry Revely Mitford, of Exbury, which marriage was dissolved by act of Parliament; and secondly, in 1842, to the Hon. Francis G. Molyneux, son of the second Earl of Sefton.

Captain Hervey George St. John Mildmay, R.N., of Hazel Grove House, Somerset, at Aix-les-Bains, on the 21st ult. He was born in 1817, the son of Mr. Paulet St. John Mildmay, M.P., by Wyndham Anna Maria, his wife, youngest daughter of the Hon. Bartholomew Bouverie, and was nephew of the late Sir Henry Carew St. John Mildmay, Bart. Entering the Navy in 1832, he served at St. Jean d'Acre in 1840 and received the Syrian and Turkish medals, and became a retired Captain in 1862. He married, first, in 1859, the Hon. Elizabeth Lefevre, third daughter of Viscount Eversley; and secondly, in 1875, Augusta Frances, daughter of the Rev. R. Seymour, Canon of Worcester and Rector of Kinwarton, Warwickshire.

Yesterday week was celebrated the silver wedding of the Earl and Countess Stradbroke, the occasion being made one of general rejoicing on the estate. The Earl and Countess were present at the festivities, and in responding to the toast of his health, Lord Stradbroke, who is now eighty-eight years of age, said he could not long live to be among them, but he wished them all well now and in the time to come.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

F.O.N.H. (Liverpool).—We believe your problem is correct, and it shall have early publication.

J.G.C. (Highgate).—The coincidence is noted. Thanks for the problem.

A.M. (Nottingham).—Always glad to hear from you. The game shall soon appear.

L.L. (Denmark-hill).—Incorrect solutions are not acknowledged.

A.J.W. (Carlisle).—Mr. Wormald died in 1876.

E.P.W. (Southampton).—An answer to your query was crowded out last week. The solution of the Rev. H. Bolton's problem described in your letter is 1. Q to B 5th (ch), K takes Q; 2. Kt takes P, any move; 3. P to Kt 4th, mate.

S.W.M. (Norwich).—You may have two or more Queens, three or more Rooks, Bishops, and Knights, by promotion of Pawns, on the board at the same time.

Jumbo (Dundee).—Correct this time. There is nothing like perseverance.

LITSLAW (Dublin).—As A's Rook could be moved to the second square of either Bishop, B should have asked A to describe his move with precision. B was a party to the blunder and can enforce no penalty.

J.P. (Weston-super-Mare).—You shall have a report on the problems shortly.

PROBLEMS received with thanks from W.L.G., F.E. Page, and E.W. Smith.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF HERR SCHWARZ'S FOUR-MOVE PAIR PROBLEM received from Norman Rumbelow, B.H. Brooks, D.W. (Guernsey), and H. Hampton.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF M. LEPRETEL'S PAIR PROBLEM received from B.H. Brooks, D.W. (Guernsey), and H. Hampton.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF DR. GOLD'S PROBLEM received from S. Lowndes, F. Casella (Paris), H. Blacklock, L. Sharwood, Ben Nevis, M. O'Halloran, Harry Springthorpe, Plevna, D.W. (Guernsey), C.S. Wood, Albert and Lewis Schneider (Naples), Filgrin, F. Johnston, Norman Rumbelow, Donald Mackay, and C.W. Crookery.

CORRECT SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1892 received from Herbert H. Claxton (Princeton, U.S.A.); of Dr. Gold's enigma from B.H.C. (Salford); of M. Lepretel's from Norman Rumbelow.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1894 received from O. Chertis, Jumbo, P.S. Shenale, John Perkins, F.M. (Edinburgh), J.M. (Dublin), B.H.C. (Salford).

CORRECT SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1896 received from O. Chertis, Fred Young, F.S. Shenale, John Perkins, and F.M. (Edinburgh).

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1898 received from H.B.W. Foster, Ben Nevis, Smutch, C. Chertis, W. Jones, James Dobson, Fred E. Page, Fred Young, Ben Nevis, L.L. Greenaway, A.M. Porter, H. Reeve, Jupiter Junior, G. Seymour, D.W. Kell, H. Ingeroll, Harry Springthorpe, F. Casella (Paris), R. Jeason, P.T. Kemp, H.H. Noyer, Aaron Harper, H. Lucas, Thomas Waters, M. O'Halloran, L. Sharwood, B.H. Brooks, Shadforth, Sudbury (Suffolk), Norman Rumbelow, F. Johnston, B.H.C. (Salford), (ant. E.J. Winter Wood, Harward, D. Mackay, Cryptotype, J.M. (Dublin), Ernest Sharwood, A.W. Scrutton, S. Lowndes, Otto Fulder (Ghent), F.G. Parolov, W. Hillier, T.H. Holden, N.S. Harris, Joseph Ainsworth, G.W. Law, B. Robinson, G.S. Oldfield, S. Bullen, M. Tipping, Antonio F. Mosley, C.W. Crookery, C.C.M. (Dundee), A. Chapman, Gyp, R.C. Allen, P.S. Shenale, Alice A. Lawton, Plevna, Anna Maria Kilner, E. London, R.J. O. John Hall, Dr. F. St. F.J. Wallis (Newcastle), O.S. Wood, Laura Greaves (Shelton), Shrapnel, J. Russell Clouette, F.M. (Edinburgh), J.A.S. John Perkins, and G. Johnson.

PROBLEM No. 1898.

By W. GRIMSHAW.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

THE VIENNA TOURNAMENT.

The following Game, played in the above tournament between Messrs. BLACKBURN and BIRD, has come to hand too late in the week for extended comment. It may be said, however, that Mr. Bird, who is very obviously out of play, suffered disadvantage by casting prematurely, and that from the 20th to the 23rd move his Queen was hunting down Pawns at one side of the board when she should have been serving her sovereign at the other. This series of weak moves, which ultimately cost him the Queen for a minor piece, culminated in a blunder which enabled his skilful adversary to capture a Rook for nothing, and so brought the struggle to an end.

(Irregular Opening.)

WHITE	BLACK	WHITE	BLACK
(Mr. Blackburn).	(Mr. Bird).	(Mr. Blackburn).	(Mr. Bird).
1. P to K 4th	P to Q 4th	18. Q to K 5th	Q to Q Kt 3rd
2. Kt to K B 3rd	P to K 3rd	19. P to Q B 4th	B to B 3rd
3. Kt to Q B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd	20. Q to K B 5th	Q takes Kt P
4. P to Q 4th	P takes P	21. R to Kt sq	Q to Q 5th
5. Kt takes P	P to Q R 2nd	22. P to K R 4th	R to K B sq
6. B to K 2nd	P to K B 3rd	23. R to K sq	Q takes Q B P
7. Castles	P to Q 4th	24. R to K 3rd	Q R to K sq
8. P takes P	Kt takes P	25. R to K Kt 3rd	R to K 3rd
9. Kt takes Kt	P takes Kt	26. P to R 5th	P to K Kt 3rd
10. B to B 3rd	B to K 2nd	27. B to K 5th	Q to Q 5th
11. R to K sq	Castles	28. P to B 4th	Q to Q 8th (ch)
12. B takes P	Q takes B	29. K to R 2nd	Q to Q 4th
13. Kt takes Kt	Q takes Kt	30. P takes P	R P takes P
14. R takes B	B to K 3rd	31. Q to R 3rd	Q takes B
15. B to B 4th	K R to Q sq	32. P takes Q	K to Kt 2nd
16. Q to K 2nd	B to Q 4th	33. Q takes R
17. B to Q B 7th	Q to K B 3rd

Since our last issue, which recorded the progress of the tournament down to the 19th inst., when the games between Messrs. Steinitz v. Ware, Weiss v. Tschigorin, and Fleissig v. Mackenzie were unfinished, the play has proceeded daily; and on Saturday, the 27th ult., the fifteenth round was completed. These games resulted in favour of Messrs. Ware, Mackenzie, and Weiss. The ninth round was played on Saturday, the 20th, with the following result:—

Bird ... 0	Winawer ... 1	Schwarz ... 1	Weiss ... 0
Englisch ... 0	Mackenzie ... 0	Steinitz ... 1	Meitner ... 0
Mason ... 0	Noa ... 1	Tschigorin ... 0	Blackburne ... 1
Paulsen ... 0	Hrudy ... 0	Ware ... 0	Witek ... 1
	Zukertort ... 0	Fleissig ... 1

The notable incidents of this round are the defeat of Zukertort by Fleissig, the latter defeating the "Scotch Gambit," and the first defeat of Mason, the victor of the hitherto unconquerable American being the Hungarian amateur, Dr. Noa. On its conclusion, each competitor having played nine games, the score stood as follows:—

Blackburne ... 7	Zukertort ... 5	Fleissig ... 3
Mackenzie ... 7	Hrudy ... 4	Ware ... 3
Winawer ... 7	Schwarz ... 4	Bird ... 2
Noa ... 6	Steinitz ... 4	Meitner ... 2
Mason ... 5	Witek ... 4	Paulsen ... 2
Englisch ... 5	Weiss ... 4	Tschigorin ... 2

Appended is the result of the several rounds played during the week ending the 27th ult.:—

TENTH ROUND.	THIRTEENTH ROUND.
Fleissig ... 0	Noa ... 0
Hrudy ... 0	Englisch ... 1
Paulsen ... 1	Blackburne ... 0
Ware ... 0	Paulsen ... 0
Winawer ... 0	Schwarz ... 0
Witek ... 0	Steinitz ... 0
Weiss ... 0	Tschigorin ... 1
Steinitz ... 1	Ware ... 0
Zukertort ... 0	Schwarz ... 1

ELEVENTH ROUND.	FOURTEENTH ROUND.
Hrudy ... 1	Mason ... 0
Meitner ... 1	Fleissig ... 0
Paulsen ... 0	Paulsen ... 0
Schwarz ... 1	Ware ... 0
Steinitz ... 1	Steinitz ... 0
Ware ... 0	Tschigorin ... 0
Winawer ... 1	Ware ... 0
Witek ... 0	Englisch ... 1
Zukertort ... 0	Winawer ... 1

FOURTEENTH ROUND.	FIFTEENTH ROUND.
Blackburne ... 0	Noa ... 1
Hrudy ... 0	Mackenzie ... 0
Meitner ... 0	Mason ... 1
Steinitz ... 1	Bird ... 0
Tschigorin ... 1	Schwarz ... 0
Ware ... 0	Paulsen ... 1
Winawer ... 1	Weiss ... 0
Witek ... 1	Winawer ... 0
Zukertort ... 0	Witek ... 0
	Weiss ... 1

The events of last week's play are undoubtedly the defeats sustained by Captain Mackenzie in the eleventh and twelfth rounds at the hands of the young amateurs Schwarz, of Vienna, and Tschigorin, of St. Petersburg. In his game with Herr Schwarz (Four Knights' Opening), the American Champion was opposed to extremely fine play, and had an inferior position from the twentieth move to the close of the game on the thirty-fifth. His game with Tschigorin (a Centre Gambit opened by the latter) extended over thirty-one moves; but we have not yet had time to peruse it. In the game between Blackburne and Mackenzie, the latter played the French defence, and the former obtained a fine attack by the sacrifice of a Pawn; but the American Champion came out of the melee the "exchange" ahead. A fine end game resulted; and, after seven hours' play, Blackburne stuck his flag. The latter, in his game with Zukertort, adopted the Giuoco Piano, and an end game ensued—Queen and Knight against Queen and Bishop, in which the first player eventually won.

The score on the conclusion of the fourteenth round stood as follows:—Mackenzie, 10; Steinitz and Winawer, 10; Blackburne, 9; Mason, 9; Englisch, Noa, and Schwarz, 8; Witek, 8; Hrudy and Zukertort, 7; Bird, Fleissig, and Tschigorin, 6; Paulsen and Weiss, 6; Meitner, 5; and Ware, 3.

Baron Kolisch arrived in London in the early part of the week, and visited the Divan in the Strand on several occasions during his brief stay here.

THE CENSUS OF CANADA.

The first volume of the Canadian Census Statistics of 1881 has been submitted to the Dominion Parliament by the Hon. J. H. Pope, the Minister of Agriculture, and contains various interesting schedules, among which are those relating to the religions and nationalities of the population.

With regard to the former the particulars are as follows:—Roman Catholics, 1,791,932; Presbyterians, 676,155; Adventists, 7211; Baptists 225,236; Free Will Baptists, 50,065; Mennonites, 21,254; Brethren, 8831; Church of England, 574,818; Congregationalists, 26,900; Disciples, 20,193; Episcopal (Reformed), 2596; Jews, 2393; Lutherans, 46,850; Methodists of all classes, 742,961; Pagans, 4178; Protestants, 6519; Quakers, 6583; Unitarians, 2126; Universalists, 4517; no religion, 2634; other denominations, 14,289; not given, 85,769. Total, 4,334,810.

The population of Canada includes the following nationalities:—Africans, 21,391; Chinese, 4883; Dutch, 30,412; English, 181,301; French, 1,298,929; Germans, 255,319; Icelanders, 1009; Indians, 108,547; Irish, 967,403; Italians, 1849; Jews, 687; Russians, 1227; Scandinavians, 4214; Scotch, 690,883; Spanish and Portuguese, 1172; Swiss, 4183; Welsh, 9947; all others, 43,567.

According to nativity, the population of the Dominion stands thus:—Natives of England, 169,504; Ireland, 165,598; Scotland, 115,082; Ontario, 1,467,988; Quebec, 1,227,809; Prince Edward Island, 101,547; Nova Scotia, 420,088; New Brunswick, 288,265; British Columbia, 82,715; Manitoba, 19,590; Territories, 68,430; other British Possessions, 10,348; France, 4389; Germany, 25,328; Italy, 777; Russia, 6376; Spain, 215; Sweden and Norway, 2078; United States, 77,763; other countries, 14,169.

The male population of Canada number 2,188,854, and the females 2,135,956; married, 1,380,064; widowed, 160,330; unmarried, 2,784,366.

Canada was divided for Census purposes into 192 districts and 2139 sub-districts.

The Court of Appeal has decided that the jewels given to a lady upon her marriage, for her separate use, are liable for debts incurred by her before marriage.

WHY BOOKS ARE WRITTEN.

It is a fact known to publishers, and painfully known to authors, that not one book in ten—it would be safe to say not one book in twenty—pays the cost of publication. It is perhaps equally certain that only one book in fifty satisfies the publisher for his risk and the author for his labour. From a commercial stand-point, the man who writes books to gain a livelihood embarks in a hazardous undertaking. He may succeed, but he is far more likely to fail. His work may be too good or too bad for the market, and, instead of winning either fortune or fame, he may never even attain what De Quincey calls "the distinction of being read absolutely by nobody at all." Literature is the most fitful and precarious of professions; but it is not on that account the less crowded, and one reason for this is obvious: every other profession demands a long and expensive training; literature, according to Mr. Trollope, requires only a chair and table, paper, ink, and brains. Indeed, if we may judge from the mass of books that claim attention from an indulgent public, brains are not always needed. Colonel Butler, in one of his pleasant papers of travel, tells the story of a man who thought that if he put down all that he had seen and all that he hadn't seen he would be able to write a good book; so, perhaps, the poet Gray was right when he said that even a fool might write a good book by chance. It is, however, charitable to suppose that brains are generally used in the composition of books; and literature has, no doubt, a singular charm for clever men who wish at one stroke to win reputation and money. Of course the philosopher will tell us that fame is the most unsubstantial object at which a man can aim. Everybody knows that this is true, but it is none the less true that even the philosopher loves the fame he affects to despise. Poets in all ages have acknowledged this "infirmity." The non omnia moriar of Horace, the assertion of Shakespeare that his powerful rhyme will outlive the gilded monuments of princes, the equally bold assertion of Wordsworth that deathless powers to verse belong, and the faith of Southey that his name will not perish in the dust, do but testify to a feeling that has prompted, more or less, the creation of all great works in literature or art. To leave something behind one that the world will not let die; to make, as Burns says, a useful book, "or to sing a song at least;" this is the aspiration that gives life to the sculptor's chisel and to the poet's pen. It is often a mere illusion, but it is not an ignoble one; for if just actions "smell sweet and blossom in the dust," so assuredly is there vitality in the words that create a country's literature, and in the forms of beauty preserved in marble or on canvas. This desire for posthumous fame has, indeed, its ludicrous and its pitiable side. We smile at the hopeless ambition of George Eliot's Mr. Casaubon, and we fail to sympathize with Porson's aspiration that he might be known three centuries hence as having done a great deal for the text of Euripides. The fame that reaches an author while living is but a doubtful possession. The great names of one era are the small ones of the next, and the modern reader marvels at the enormous popularity of books published fifty years ago, which now stand dust-covered on the highest shelf of his bookcase. Vanitas vanitatum was the text Thackeray loved too well to preach from; but it is one which forces itself on the mind when standing amidst what may be called the "buried treasures" of a vast library. Nevertheless, the love of fame will ever be one of the reasons why books are written. The want of money is another.

There are authors who are mere tradesmen. They may be said to write by the yard and to receive back a due measurement of pay. It is honourable labour, and work by no means too handsomely recompensed even now; while in the last century hack-writers, as they were called, lived in garrets and fared as Johnson fared through the best years of his life. A man may get into a literary groove, and keep there without any higher aim than the respectable and legitimate one of providing for himself and his family. He may do his hack work as Johnson did it, and as Goldsmith did it, and be satisfied with the fruits of his labour. Neither of those great men, however, was content to regard literature as a trade, and few men are content who love the profession they have chosen. At the same time, the want of money is often the origin of an author's inspiration. Did it not produce "Tom Jones" and "The Vicar of Wakefield?" Was it not the prompter of Shakspeare and Scott, of Thackeray and Dickens? Do we not owe "Elia" to it, and many another volume equally dear to the hearts of Englishmen?

(Continued on page 556.)

THE OLD TOWNHALL, GREAT YARMOUTH.

SHADINGFIELD LODGE, YARMOUTH, VISITED BY THE PRINCE OF WALES.

And yet, be it remembered, there is not one of these men, nor any man who has won a high place in literature, who rose to that height while regarding his work as a simply commercial engagement. The money might have been dear to him, or as indispensable as it was to Dr. Johnson when he wrote "Rasselas" in order to pay for his mother's funeral; but money is never the sole prompter of men of genius. No fine work of art can be executed without giving an exquisite delight to its creator. Necessity may be a spur to genius, but love alone can sustain it and lead it to fine issues.

Take another reason why books are written. A man is sometimes impelled to the task. He has a message to deliver, and the fire that burns within him cannot be resisted. Like Bunyan, Blake, and Swedenborg, he has seen visions and dreamt dreams, and, prophet-like, must tell what he has seen. It would seem as if no circumstances, however adverse, could silence the immortal song of Milton, or hinder the prisoner in Bedford Jail from writing his allegory. Men such as these write because they cannot help it; and to an inspiration like this we owe all that is noblest in imaginative literature.

Again, a vast number of books owe their origin to benevolence. The publication of innumerable sermons must be due to this virtue, since it is difficult to suggest another reason for their existence, and authors who flourish on what are vulgarly called plagiarisms, are, no doubt, actuated by a similar desire of benefiting mankind. It was philanthropy that led the eccentric Thomas Day to write "Sandford and Merton"—a book once as popular as Mr. Hughes's "Tom Brown;" and it must surely be philanthropy which prompts despairing widowers to write biographies of a first wife before marrying a second. Domestic discomfort, by-the-way, is also an incentive to literature, and when "the first Mrs. Milton left his house," the poet began his treatise on Divorce. Indeed, he seems to have been impelled to the task soon after the honeymoon.

The reasons why books are written crowd upon us as we write. One author spends his nights and days in overthrowing the theory of another, and is himself annihilated by a third; or he proves by all the laws of logic that Isaac Newton was a fool, and writes himself down an ass. Again, a man having persuaded himself that the "Iliad" was not written by Homer, gives rise to a stream of controversy, which has not yet ceased to flow; and if a critic discovers that Shakspeare did not, as an Irishman would say, write his own plays, it is inevitable he should record his discovery in a book. Poets, by-the-way, from Homer to Mr. Browning, are guilty of having produced enormous libraries. Every page that Virgil, Dante, Shakspeare, Milton, and Goethe have written has been seized by the critics and made to yield a hundredfold—not, indeed, of genius, but of print. Then, a man has a crotchet to air, and writes books to air it. He has discovered the lost ten tribes in Patagonia; he has met with the Wandering Jew; he knows the year that will prove the end of our earthly system; or he feels so strongly the blessedness of silence in this chattering world that, like Mr. Carlyle, he writes a score of volumes in defence of a precept he has no desire to practise. Eccentricity and folly are fruitful sources of book-making. A man turns the book of Job into rhyme; another performs the same office for the plays of Shakspeare; a third undertakes to make the "Pilgrim's Progress" acceptable to Anglo-Catholics. Which reminds us that theological and political controversy have enriched printers and paper-makers and burdened the world with an infinite number of heavy volumes which, to use Charles Lamb's phrase, cannot be called books.

Of making many books there is no end, and every week adds to the pile of volumes that are read only by idle people, or that are wholly unreadable. What a blessing it would be to the world if the production of books were to cease for some years, so that readers might have leisure to look about them, and to make the acquaintance of authors who have been pushed aside to make way for the novels of the hour. There are great works by living men which claim leisurely reading; there are books full of exquisite mirth, of weighty thought, of lovely imagination, of which, for lack of time, we are forced to be ignorant; there are works that have stood the test of ages known to the modern reader only by name; and thus it happens that while driving at full speed through a number of books he gains no knowledge of literature. The reasons why books are written are plentiful as blackberries; it is not always so obvious why they should be read.

THE NEW MUNICIPAL BUILDINGS, GREAT YARMOUTH.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2249.—VOL. LXXX.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1882.

WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE.
By Post, 6½d.

ARABI PASHA, THE WOULD-BE DICTATOR OF EGYPT.—SEE PAGE 562.

1. Remains of a Village, destroyed by an Inundation of the Nile.

2. View of the Arabian Mountain Range.

NILE SKETCHES, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 562.

BIRTHS.

On the 4th inst., at Thickholms, Meltham, Yorkshire, the wife of E. Hildred Carlile, of a daughter.

On the 2nd inst., at 2, Clifton Villas, Camden-square, the wife of Charles W. Hastings, Esq., of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 6th inst., at Christ Church, Lancaster-gate, by the Vicar, the Rev. W. Boyd Carpenter, M.A., Hon. Canon of Windsor, assisted by the Rev. C. R. Gorton, M.A., Vicar of Walsby, North, and the Rev. A. W. Beard, M.A., Rector of Greenford, Middlesex, Arthur Disney, only son of Martin Disney, Esq., of Pembroke Villas, Bayswater, W. to Emma Florence Assheton, youngest and only surviving daughter of the late George W. Hill, Esq., of Carnarvon. Foreign and Colonial papers please copy.

On the 5th inst., at St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate, by the Rev. William Rogers, M.A., Rector, Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen, Edward Brydges Williams, M.P., of Carnanton, Cornwall, to Emily, daughter of J. M. Levy, Esq., of 51, Grosvenor-street, W.

DEATHS.

On the 5th inst., at The Crouch, Seaford, Sussex, after a long and severe illness, Maria, the beloved wife of Henry Simmons, aged 70 years.

On the 3rd inst., at Broadfield, Port-Glasgow, Arthur Francis Stoddard, Esq., of Broadfield, aged 71 years. Any friends omitted will please accept of this intimation.

On the 31st ult., at Roxborough Castle, Moy, Ireland, the Countess of Charlemont.

*• The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 17.

SUNDAY, JUNE 11.
First Sunday after Trinity.
St. Barnabas, Apostle and Martyr.
Morning Lessons: Josh. iii. 7-iv. 15, or Deut. xxxiii. 1-12, Acts iv. 13. Evening Lessons: Josh. v. 13-vi. 21, or xxiv. or Nahum i.; Acts xiv. 8.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., the Bishop of London; 3.15 p.m., Archbishop of Canterbury; 7 p.m., Rev. R. M. Grier, Vicar of Rugeley.
MONDAY, JUNE 12.—Geographical Society, 8.30 p.m.

TUESDAY, JUNE 13.
Anthropological Institute, 8 p.m.
Photographic Society, 8 p.m.
Colonial Institute, 8 p.m., Mr. G. Baden-Powell on Imperial Defence in our Time.
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14.
Oxford Commemoration.
Horticultural Society, 11 a.m.
Society of Arts, conversations, at South Kensington Museum, 8 p.m.
United Service Institution, 3 p.m., Vice-Admiral Selwyns on Hydrographic Propulsion.

THURSDAY, JUNE 15.
New moon, 6.33 p.m.
Royal Society, 4.30 p.m.
Society of Antiquaries, 8.30 p.m.
Linnean Society, 8 p.m.
Chemical Society, 5 p.m., papers by Messrs. C. E. Groves, J. J. Hammett, A. G. Perkin, and R. Warington.
Numismatic Society, anniversary, 7 p.m.

FRIDAY, JUNE 16.
Society for Propagation of the Gospel, 3 p.m.
Philological Society, 8 p.m., Professor Postgate on Latin and Greek Etymology.
SATURDAY, JUNE 17.
St. Alban, British Proto-Martyr.
Prince of Wales's Levée, at St. James's Palace, 2 p.m.
Mansion House, banquet to the Mayors, in connection with the Royal College of Music.

BRIGHTON.—THE NEW PULLMAN LIMITED
EXPRESS, Lighted by Electricity, and fitted with the Westinghouse Automatic Brake, now runs between Victoria and Brighton.
From VICTORIA, WEEKDAYS, at 10.45 a.m. and 3.30 p.m.
From BRIGHTON, WEEKDAYS, at 1.20 p.m. and 6.45 p.m.
This new Train, specially constructed and elegantly fitted up by the Pullman Car Company, consists of four Cars, each over 55 ft. in length.
The Car "Beatrice" (Drawing-room) contains also a Ladies' Boudoir and Dressing-room.
The Car "Louise" (Parlour) contains also a separate compartment for a private party.
The Car "Victoria" contains a Buffet for Tea, Coffee, and other Light Refreshments, also a Newspaper Counter.
The Car "Maud" is appropriated for Smoking.
The whole Train is lighted by Electricity, the system being that of Edison's Incandescent Lamps in connection with Faure's system of Accumulators.
Lavatories are provided in each Car, and a separate compartment for servants is also provided in one of the Cars.
The Staff attached to this Train consists of a Chief Conductor, Assistant Conductor, a Page Boy, and Two Guards.
There is Electrical communication between the several Cars and the Conductors; a passenger travelling in any one of the Cars can therefore call the attention of the Conductor by pressing one of the small Electric discs.
There is a covered gangway communication between each Car, thereby enabling the Conductors to pass from Car to Car.

BRIGHTON.—EVERY SUNDAY.—A Cheap First-Class
Train from Victoria at 10.45 a.m., calling at Clapham Junction and Croydon.
Day Return Tickets, 10s.
A Pullman Drawing-room Car is run on the 10.45 a.m. Train from Victoria to Brighton, returning from Brighton by the 8.30 p.m. Train. Special Cheap Fare from Victoria, including Pullman Car, 13s., available by these Trains only.
Tickets and every information as to the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly, and 8, Grand Hotel-buildings, Trafalgar-square; City Office, Hays Agency, Cornhill; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.—SEASIDE.—TWO
MONTHS, FORTNIGHTLY, and FRIDAY or SATURDAY to MONDAY (First, Second, and Third Class) TICKETS are ISSUED by all Trains at REDUCED FARES to YARMOUTH, LOWESTOFT, WALTON-ON-THE-NAZE, WELLEY (for CLACTON-ON-SEA), HARWICH, DOVERCOURT, ALDEBURGH, FELIXSTOWE, SOUTHWOLD, HUNSTANTON, and CROMER.
For full Particulars see Handbills and Time Tables.
London, April, 1882. WILLIAM BIRT, General Manager.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.
THE FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN from Nine till Seven. Admission, One Shilling; Catalogue, 6d.—GALLERY, 51, Pall-Mall.
H. F. PHILLIPS, Secretary.

THE EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF
PICTURES, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS M'LEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket.—Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER
COLOURS.—THE NINETY-SEVENTH EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, 5, Pall-mall East, from Ten till Six. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d., Illustrated do., 1s.
ALFRED D. FRITH, Secretary.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.—SUMMER
EXHIBITION NOW OPEN, from Nine till Seven. Admission, 1s. Season Tickets, 5s.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity."—The Times) and "THE ASCENSION." "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRETORIUM." "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6, 1s.

THE LION AT HOME. By ROSA BONHEUR.
This splendid chef-d'œuvre, the latest production of this celebrated Artist, also the complete Engraved Works of Rosa Bonheur. Now on exhibition at L. H. LEFEBVRE'S GALLERY, 1a, King-street, St. James's, S.W. Admission, One Shilling. Ten to Six.

DE NEUVILLE'S SAVING THE QUEEN'S COLOUR
AT ISANDULA. THE LAST SLEEP OF THE BRAVE (these the property of the National Fine Art Association), and THE CEMETERY OF ST. PRIVAT, NOW ON VIEW, at Messrs. Dowdeswell's, 133, New Bond-street, two doors from the Grosvenor Gallery. Admission, One Shilling.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT.
Managers, Messrs. Alfred Reed and Corney Grain.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Lombard-place. NOBODY'S FAULT, by Arthur Law; Music by Hamilton Clarke; and SHALL AND EARLY, and New Musical Sketch by Mr. Corney Grain. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight; Thursday and Saturday at Three. Admission, 1s. and 2s.; Stalls, 3s. and 6s. No fees.

OUR HOLIDAY NUMBER.

AN ORIGINAL NOVEL.

THEY WERE MARRIED!

By Messrs. BESANT and RICE,

Will be Published June 27.

This complete Novel has a special interest in having been the last work in which the late Mr. Rice was engaged with his collaborator, Mr. Besant.

A COLOURED PICTURE.

MARRIED FOR LOVE,

By MARCUS STONE, R.A.,

Painted especially for this Holiday Number, has been beautifully reproduced by Messrs. Leighton Bros., and will be presented gratis to all purchasers of the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS HOLIDAY NUMBER.

One Shilling. Postage, Threepence-Halfpenny.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
BRILLIANT SUCCESS OF THE
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS'
SUMMER ENTERTAINMENT.
Houses crowded to repletion at every performance.
HEMR EMILE VAUPEL,
the great Baritone, of the Imperial Opera, Berlin.
HAS ACHIEVED AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH ALMOST WITHOUT PRECEDENT.
His engagement can only be continued until September, when he has to return to Berlin.
The New Bill EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, SATURDAY, at Three and Eight.
Tickets and places at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall. No fees.

JUNE 15.—ST. JAMES'S HALL.—MR. GEORGE WATTS'
GRAND MORNING CONCERT.—Madames Christine Nilsson, Olga, Bergh, Sembrich, Trebelli, and Marie Rose; MM. Edward Lloyd, Massart, Foll, and De Roske. Solo, Pianoforte, Madame Sophie Menter and Mr. Willem Coenen. Violoncello, Mons. Holman. Conductors—Sir Julius Benedict, Signor Randegger, Mr. Parker, and Mr. Kingsbury. Tickets at Cramer's, 28, Regent-street; and the usual Agents.

MR. GANZ'S ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS, ST. JAMES'S
HALL. FIFTH and LAST CONCERT, SATURDAY NEXT, JUNE 17, at Three o'clock. The programme will include Mendelssohn's Symphony in A minor (the Scotch). M. Vladimir de Pachmann will play Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in G major; and, with Mr. Ganz, Mendelssohn and Moscheles's Pianoforte Duet on the tiny March from Weber's "Freischütz." Vocalist, Madame Rose Hersey. Conductor, Mr. Ganz. Tickets, 1s. 6d., 1s., 6d., and 1s., at Austin's, Chappell and Co., and of Mr. W. Ganz, 126, Harley-street, W.

LYCEUM.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.
Every Evening, at Eight, ROMEO AND JULIET. Romeo, Mr. Irving; Juliet, Miss Ellen Terry; Nurse, Mrs. Stirling; Messrs. Fernandez, Terrias, Howe, &c. Morning Performance, Saturday, June 16, at Two o'clock. Box-office (Mr. Harsh), Ten to Five. Benefit of Miss Ellen Terry and 1,000th Performance of "Romeo and Juliet," June 26.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1882.

The death of Garibaldi removes the last of the illustrious Triumvirate who laboured with infinite toil, and amid continuous discouragements and difficulties, to make a nation of Italy, which a generation ago was nothing more than a "geographical expression." Neither Mazzini nor Cavour lived to see the great work completed by the proclamation of Rome as the capital of the new Kingdom. Garibaldi alone enjoyed that privilege, and it is characteristic of his high-minded patriotism, that, notwithstanding his ill-regulated republican aspirations, he made no difficulty in loyally accepting the House of Savoy when he found that in this way only could Italian unity be achieved and consolidated. The marvellous and romantic career of Giuseppe Garibaldi covers nearly the entire nineteenth century. Born, in 1807, at Nice, his adventures began at a very early age. The youthful sailor was, as far back as back as 1832, implicated in Mazzinian conspiracies, and the death sentence passed upon him led to expatriation and his campaign as a free lance in South America. The advent of Pius IX. to the Pontifical chair brought the young hero back to Italy; and on the flight of the "reforming" Pope, Garibaldi was among the foremost defenders of Republican Rome against the French. With great difficulty he escaped from the Eternal City, and settled down for a time to the prosaic occupation of a soap manufacturer in New York. We next hear of him as a coasting trader between Nice and Marseilles, Caprera having become his head-quarters. Henceforth Garibaldi was associated with the cause of Italian independence. He commanded a volunteer corps when Napoleon III. confronted Austria on Italian soil, and he retired for a while into obscurity after the disappointing compact at Villafranca. Shortly after, he organised the celebrated expedition to Sicily, and the wonderful advance from Marsala to Naples ended in the easy defeat of the Neapolitan troops, his temporary dictatorship, and the presentation of a new State to Victor Emmanuel. Two years subsequent to his public entry into Naples in his now historical red shirt by the side of the King, the restless hero was in arms against the Papal authority, and, having been wounded in his encounter with the Royal troops who opposed his march, he was made a prisoner, and in due time released. In the campaign of 1866 he was again to the front, and a year later the irrepressible Italian liberator was once more invading the Papal States on his own account, and, being defeated, he again found himself a captive at Spezia, and shortly after a willing exile on his beloved island. Meanwhile Italian Unity was consummated by the occupation of Rome following upon the downfall of the French Empire, although Garibaldi, with spasmodic generosity, afterwards raised a corps to fight the battles of the French Republic.

The news of the decease of the great Italian in his island home on Friday last evoked the most genuine and touching expressions of sympathy throughout Europe. So universal a tribute of reverential homage, everywhere and by all classes of society—of which the adjournment of the French Legislature was one of the most striking illustrations—shows how profound was the admiration inspired by Garibaldi's noble qualities and self-sacrificing career. It may be that Mazzini, with his never-flagging and concentrated enthusiasm, and Cavour, with his sagacious and practical statesmanship, did as much to lay the foundations or to raise the edifice of Italian unity as Garibaldi himself. But he, rather than they, is in the popular imagination the Liberator of Italy. The remarkable qualities of the man—his singleness of purpose, child-like simplicity, and self-abnegation—were combined with a dauntless spirit and quenchless faith that never thought of difficulties except to overcome them, and were translated into incessant action till his object was achieved. In view of this unique combination of heroic qualities, coloured by the halo of a romantic career, which is legendary in its strange vicissitudes, the faults and failings of the illustrious deceased—his wild utterances, his amazing blunders, and his impulsive eccentricities—are forgotten. In his last days at Caprera, when his frame was shattered and shrunken, and his limbs racked with excruciating suffering, he was the same lion-hearted man as when he faced the French artillery on the Roman ramparts, or marched into Naples at the head of his "immortal thousand" volunteers. Italians have hardly as yet realised in their national life the exalted virtues of those who struggled for their emancipation; but their passionate and pathetic grief at the loss of their beloved countryman, even at the advanced age of seventy-five, can hardly fail to develop into nobler resolves.

Although much has happened during the past week, in connection with the Egyptian problem, the mystery surrounding it is almost as great as ever. For one thing, the attitude of the French Government has become more defined. Their zeal for the reigning Khedive has, to say the least, never been excessive; but their craving for "preponderance" and their antipathy to Turkish intervention have been a sore embarrassment to England and a source of perplexity to Europe in general. When, however, M. de Freycinet was interpellated in the Chamber of Deputies, he found it necessary to disclaim a policy of adventure, the intention of sending a military expedition to the Valley of the Nile, or any wish to act apart from the European Concert. This conspicuous hauling down of the exclusive French flag was approved by the Chamber, which, notwithstanding M. Gambetta's vehement but somewhat oracular protests, passed a vote of confidence in the Government by an overwhelming majority. In accordance with this new policy, the French Cabinet, with the assent of England, proposed a Conference of Ambassadors at Constantinople, based upon the maintenance of the status quo in Egypt, the continuance of Tewfik Pasha as the ruling Khedive, and the confirmation of the rights of the Sultan as suzerain. All the European Powers accepted the suggestion in principle, and have quietly awaited the development of events.

The Porte was thus placed in a dilemma. To allow the combined Powers to take the initiative would seriously impair its abstract claims to sovereignty in Egypt. Withholding, for the present, his assent to a Conference, the Sultan, so long apparently passive, began to act with a view to prevent the necessity of convening any diplomatic conclave. Dervish Pasha was forthwith sent on a special mission to Cairo, with orders to bring about a pacific arrangement. His arrival in Egypt has been preceded by telegraphic messages from Constantinople, which strongly suggest the suspicion that Ourabi Pasha may throughout have been more of a tool in the hands of the Turkish Pashas than a dictator on his own account. All that he has been imperatively ordered to do "by his Sovereign the Caliph" he has done. The independence of the Khedive is scrupulously respected, the military have been kept well in hand, the exercise of absolute power has been restricted, the fortifications of Alexandria have been discontinued, and resident Europeans have been protected from insult and injury. There has been no outbreak, not a single life has been lost, and the panic of Europeans in Egypt has subsided. It perhaps as little concerns the Porte as Ourabi himself that throughout the country business is paralysed, and that the Fellahs, being unable to get money advances in anticipation of their crops, see nothing but bankruptcy before them.

Neither by the cultivators of the soil, nor by Europeans in general, nor by the Khedive himself, will Dervish Pasha be welcomed as a deliverer. To them it can only mean protracted intrigues with a view to make Turkish domination a necessity, and to arrange a compromise between the Sultan and the head of the Egyptian army. This result can be as little averted by the Anglo-French ironclads riding in the harbour of Alexandria, as by any authority Tewfik Pasha can assume. For, as is magniloquently asserted in the recent Circular of the Porte, the sovereign rights and prerogatives of his Imperial Majesty the Sultan, who, while confident of his ability "to re-establish a normal situation in Egypt in a mutually satisfactory manner," "fails to see the necessity of the assembling of a Conference." Apparently, therefore, the Joint Control is a thing of the past. If revived, it will not be by the action of France and England alone, but by the decision and pressure of all the Powers combined, several of whom are only too pleased to see the influence of the Western Powers restricted, if not superseded.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Late in the autumn of 1870 I passed through Lyons on my way from Geneva to Rome. The haste which I was in was of the hottest: for the Italian troops were marching in force on the Eternal City; and my mission was to be in, not at the death, but at the birth of Free Rome. Lyons, in which I was compelled to waste a couple of hours, presented an extraordinary sight. The constituted authorities had been temporarily ousted by the ultra-democratic party; and a kind of Committee of Public Safety was sitting at the Hôtel de Ville. The Red Flag was waving over the city; the tocsin, dreadfulest of all bells, was sounding; and in the midst of the Place Bellecour had been erected a raised platform, covered with crimson baize, on which was a table at which sat three or four citizens, duly coiffés with the bonnet rouge: while another citizen was busily drubbing a big drum, and yet another, standing at the top of the steps leading to the platform, invited in stentorian tones all true patriots to walk up, and enrol themselves as francs-tireurs for the defence of the Republic, One and Indivisible, from the barbarian hordes of Germany. The Place Bellecour only wanted a guillotine for the spectacle to have been complete.

Yet was the Place Bellecour comparatively deserted; and very few volunteers that evening, at least, seemed anxious to come forward to aid la Patrie en danger. The bulk of the population of Lyons were massed at the Pezache station waiting for the arrival from Italy of a famous Commander, who, with divers adherents, clad, as he was, in red shirts, was coming to help the bruised and battered French. The Commander was Giuseppe Garibaldi, Soldier, Sailor, Patriot, Hero, and Honest Man, who is Dead, and whose ashes have been by this time gathered together in an urn and placed by the side of the ashes of his two babies in a little sepulchre at Caprera by the shore of the much-sounding sea.

Looking at what Garibaldi did, and what more—had he had strength enough—he would have done, it is perfectly easy to understand why, by the advocates of ultramontanism, despotism, and Bonapartism, he was hated with an almost rabid fury of exasperation. The profound contempt which he entertained, politically and personally, for Napoleon III. (who on his side rather admired the uncompromising old Lion), rendered him the bête noire of the Chauvinist faction; while clericalism loathed him, perhaps, more bitterly than it had loathed any opponent since Voltaire. Between the Man in the Red Shirt and the Man in the Shovel Hat it could not be otherwise than Guerra a cuchillo. Of Garibaldi, indeed, it may be said, as Manzoni in the "Cinque Maggio" said of the First Napoleon, that he was an object d'immense invidia

E d'ineffabile amor.

I have nothing to do with the Garibaldi-haters. They have a right to their opinions, as I have to mine. I do not wonder at the Frangais calling the dead man "a charlatan and an adventurer;" at the Pays styling him a brigand chief; or at the Univers characterising him as "a notorious malefactor, whose accumulated crimes render his memory infamous." Dear old Univers! It was in that esteemed journal that Molière was called (by M. Louis Veuillot) a scoundrel. Molière had written "Tartufe."

Not within the compass of this page could I set down what I have seen, and what I think, of the Hermit of Caprera. Those who regard him, as I have ever done, with inextinguishable love, may deem that there could be no better epitaph for him than the concluding verse of one of the noblest elegiac poems in the English language, Dryden's Heroic Stanzas on the Death of Oliver Cromwell:—

His ashes in a peaceful urn shall rest;
His name a great example stands, to show
How strangely high endeavours may be blest,
Where piety and valour jointly go.

Yes, he was pious; but from the Wordsworthian, not the Univers, point of view. To listen to his franc et beau parler—I am speaking of the days of his campaign in the Tyrol in 1866—was a lesson of charity, of toleration, and of an unaffected natural piety by which, as the Lake Poet has beautifully put it, his days were "linked each to each."

If letters could be boiled down, and only their inspissated essence preserved, as a kind of epistolary portable soup, I am afraid that a Papin's Digester of a very large size indeed would be required for the boiling down of the correspondence which I have received bearing on the disputed question of the authorship of the "Whole Duty of Man." Of the far-reaching popularity of the book among all sorts and conditions of men a curious proof is afforded by a correspondent who tells me that he has a copy of the "W. D. of M." which formerly belonged to William Makepeace Thackeray, who on the flyleaf has autographically recommended the work to some person (probably a kinsman) by the Christian name of "Edward," as a book which "would do him good."

The most practical equivalent that I can find for the "boiling down" process is to give the following extract from Dr. Angus's excellent "Handbook of English Literature," a copy of which has been sent me by an esteemed friend. At page 553 I read:—

The Whole Duty of Man first published in 1659. It is equally remarkable for the idiomatic vigour of its style, the uncertainty of its authorship, and the defectiveness of its evangelical teaching. It has been ascribed to Bishop Fell, Archbishop Sancroft, Lady Packington, and many more; but the question as yet remains unsettled. To correct its theology, Henry Venn, of Queen's College, Cambridge, Curate of Clapham, and Rector of Yelling, in Huntingdonshire, wrote The Complete Duty of Man; or, a System of Doctrinal and Practical Christianity (1764), a book that has rivalled the fame and circulation of the earlier treatise.

Dr. Angus's brief note contains the gist of at least a hundred of the communications which I have received on the subject. More than fifty others give particulars of different editions of the "W. D. of M.," ranging in date between 1675

(no owner of a first edition has yet turned up) in the possession of various correspondents; but I am bound to remember that the readers of the "Echoes" are not all bibliographers, and I must not bore them. One or two more claimants to the honour of the authorship of the "W. D. of M." may, in the interests of research, be mentioned. A small "History of England," by the author of "The Knights of St. John," &c., gives the name of "Abraham Woodhead" as the writer of the "W. D. of M." A. W. was a distinguished convert to Roman Catholicism during the Stuart period.

"The 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica,' by James Darling (London, 1854), col. 3194, cites, among the reputed authors of the W. D., Lady Packington, Archbishop Sancroft, Archbishop Frewen, Bishop Chapel, Abraham Woodhead, and William Fulman. A rev. correspondent, 'G. S. M.' (Salisbury), is of opinion that the vexed question was satisfactorily answered in Notes and Queries of April 22 in the present year, and that the honour of the authorship of the production must be ascribed to Dorothy, Lady Packington, one of the daughters of Lord Keeper Coventry, who married her father's ward, Sir John Packington, a direct ancestor of the present Lord Hampton, formerly Sir John Packington, Bart. Lady Packington, my rev. correspondent writes, was a most pious and accomplished gentlewoman, and the authoress of other excellent works besides the 'W. D. of M.'

This reminds me that my own copy of the "W. D." (the 1735 edition) has, bound up with it, a Manual of Private Devotions, several Collects and Pious Ejaculations, and the well-known and admirable essay on "The Government of the Tongue." The last is said, on the titlepage, to be by "the author of the 'Whole Duty of Man.'" There is also a collection of Prayers, "For Their Use who Mourn in Secret for the Public Calamities"—evidently intended for the edification of distressed Cavaliers. Are all these by Lady Packington?

"J. L. V." (Stockport) points out that the advertisement to the bookseller in my copy of the 1735 edition must be incorrect if it be signed "John Hammond," as the advertisement affixed to the edition of 1675 bears the signature of H. Hammond. I can only repeat that which I put in print last week: that the advertisement in my copy is signed "John," and not "H." Hammond.

Mem.: When did the Packington family eliminate the C from their patronymic? I ask, because one of the ribald songs written by Theodore Hook against Queen Caroline in the John Bull is noted to be sung to the tune of "Packington's Pound." In older books I find a tune mentioned called "Paggington's Pound." What was it?

I am often asked by correspondents, personally unknown to me, whether I am "serious" in asking such and such a question. I beg to assure them that I am quite serious, and that I have long since abandoned the practice of grinning through a horse collar. My main object in life (next to paying the greengrocer and pacifying the butlerman) is to get at the Truth of things; and an immense number of currently accepted assertions are wholly or partially false. Now, I am about to ask a question which I daresay will provoke many incredulous sneers as to my being serious. Can anybody tell me who Sir Roger de Coverley was?

In the Second Number (written, as we all know, by Steele) of the Spectator I find:—"The first of our society is a gentleman of Worcestershire, of an ancient descent, a baronet; his name is Sir Roger de Coverley. His great grandfather was inventor of that famous country dance which goes by his name." The designation of Sir Roger was not, then, the invention of Steele; and Tyers tells us that the character of the Worcestershire baronet was intended to represent Sir John Packington of Worcester, "a Tory," not without good sense, but abounding in absurdities. Tickell, on the other hand, held the opinion that the account of the club in the Spectator is altogether fictitious.

Be it as it may, there must have been in the reign of Queen Anne a famous country dance called Sir Roger de Coverley. Was it the "Old English dance" of which King Charles the Second was so fond. The original Sir Roger must have been a personage of some note to have given his name to a dance. We do not name a Derby "crack," or a fresh butterfly, or a new orchid after Tom, Dick, or Harry. Who was the dance-christening Sir Roger? When did he flourish? In Elizabeth's time, the Eighth Harry's, or during the Wars of the Roses? It may be a very long or a surprisingly short cry to our great-grandfathers. When I was a child I knew an old gentleman past eighty years of age who used to give me a minute account of the execution of Sir John Fenwick, in William the Third's time, which relation my old gentleman's father had heard from his grandfather.

Mem.: The County Histories should contain some particulars of the De Coverley family, did such a one ever exist. My shelves are poor in County Histories, which are deplorably costly. But whether there ever was or was not a Sir Roger de Coverley, we have Steele's admission that long before Addison and he made Sir Roger immortal there was a famous dance which went by the baronet's name. I recall that there is a capital monograph on Sir Roger de Coverley by the late Mr. W. H. Wills. Some of my readers may possess it, and be able to tell me whether any explanation is given of the sponsor of the famous country dance alluded to by Steele.

The following, I venture to think, should have been sent, not to me, but to Mr. Burnand. The Punch office is in Whitefriars:—

I remember some years ago, whilst strolling round the lovely bay at Port Erin, on the west coast of the Isle of Man, being "quarrelled" on the same subject (the letter Q) by a young and lively London girl of fifteen. We were noticing the peculiar Manx names of "Quilliam," "Quilleash," &c. (from which the Mac has dropped, by-the-by, Quilliam equalling McWilliam), and I ventured to assert for her instruction that "Q" was always followed by a "u." "Oh! no," replied she, as quick as thought. "How so, I said. Give me an instance. To which the prompt response was, 'Kew Gardens!' I collapsed.—H. S.

The annual meeting of the Early Closing Association was held on Thursday at Exeter Hall; and on Sunday last an open-air meeting of shop assistants and other advocates of early closing took place near the "Reformers' Tree," in Hyde Park. During more than twenty years I have done my best in the columns of a daily paper to advocate the early closing movement—so far as that movement could be carried out without injustice to the trading community and without inconvenience to the public; but it appears to me at present that there is an extreme section among the shop assistants and their friends who are beginning to demand things à Chailot—things in the moon; simply impossible things.

At largely attended meetings both in London and at Liverpool it was unanimously agreed to urge the Government to introduce a bill into Parliament limiting the hours of shop assistants' labour to ten per diem. As the vast majority of the London shopkeepers could not afford to employ a double set of assistants and work their establishments on the system of "shifts," the "Ten-Hours' Bill," were it to become law, would shut up the shops of London at six p.m. and thus practically paralyse the activity of a metropolis containing four millions of souls. London after six in the afternoon would be literally a living tomb.

If, in view of the vast numbers of people who do not go to bed until midnight or until a later hour, and who are incessantly wanting to buy something, a schedule of exempted shops was appended to the Ten-Hours' Bill; and if among these exempted places were to be found grocers, bakers, licensed victuallers, fruiterers, newsvendors, tobacconists, confectioners, restaurants and cook-shops, and so forth, the Ten-Hours' Bill would become a grossly unjust and one-sided measure, giving freedom at six p.m. to a few hundreds of West-End shop assistants, while it retained in slavery many more thousands of assistants in the shops of densely-populated neighbourhoods, especially in the suburbs.

I note that the Worshipful Company of Horners, with a view of encouraging Technical Education, have, with the kind permission of the Lord Mayor, decided to hold next October, at the Mansion House, an Exhibition of articles, ancient or modern, whether British or foreign, made of Horn, or of which Horn is a component part, but excluding articles in ivory, bone, or tortoise-shell. Prizes will be given to exhibitors being members of the trade.

Let me see. French horns, the original license of the Horns at Highgate and the Horns at Kennington; Gallait's picture of Counts Egmont and Horn; the songs of Charles Horn; Marwood's History of Hornucastle; Anson's Voyage Round Cape Horn; Horne Tooke's "Diversions of Purley;" a collection of hornets and horn-flies; specimens of the horn-beam tree and horn-beak fish, a horn of plenty, a horned owl, the first hornpipe that the sailors danced to, a plaster cast of Michel Angelo's Horned Moses, a Cohorn battery, and the original manuscript of "Little Jack Horner." It should be a grand exhibition.

To be a little more technical, the Horners' Exhibition might comprise ancient and modern inkhorns (Dr. Johnson wore an inkhorn at his buttonhole when, as one of Mr. Thrale's executors, he took an inventory of the property at the Bank-side Brewery); shoe horns, bugle horns, drinking horns, and combs, knife handles, horn spoons and buttons. A few horn lanterns as used by the old "Charleys" or watchmen, would be decided desiderata; and in a few out of the way country farm-houses and dame schools there may be lingering some of the horn-books from which our great grand parents used to learn their letters from the "criss-cross" row downwards.

Their books of stature small they take in hand,
Which with pellucid horn secured are,
To save from fingers wet the letters fair.

Thus Shenstone in the "Schoolmistress." Mr. J. O. Halliwell, searching the Archer family account books for his "Notes on Shakespeare," found this entry—"Jan. 3, 1715-16, one horn-book for Mr. Eyres, Twopence." Of what age, I wonder, was "Mr. Eyres"? It has been well remarked that many books at one time enjoying an unusually large circulation are precisely those likeliest to become the scarcest in a succeeding age; for example, nearly all school books, and above all horn-books, than which, down to the beginning of the reign of George II., there was, perhaps, no kind of book more universally diffused.

Mem.: Cookery books have also a tendency to become scarce. Ladies give these volumes to their cooks. The volumes are tossed into the "Cook's Drawer"; and Tom Hood has told us what the "Cook's Drawer" is like. For the ultimate fate of the cookery book that goes to the kitchen ask the Cat, or the "foolish fat scullion"—in modern times represented by an impertinent young lady at eighteen pounds a year and "all found," who on her "day out" wears a Princess costume and a hat and feather—who lights the kitchen fire. In the course of nearly forty years bookstall hunting I have known a great number of books which have in process of time become scarce and costly. I will only cite "Lawrence's Lectures on Man," "Walker's Analysis of Beauty," "Millingen's Curiosities of Medical Experience," Beckford's "Vathek" (in French), Jeremy Bentham's Works, and Harris's "Hermes." I remember them all plentiful and cheap. But there is one book which throughout my time has always been procurable for the sum of one shilling sterling—I mean "Delolme on the Constitution of England." It is only the people who read the work in question—one of the windiest that I know—who are scarce.

G. A. S.

NILE SKETCHES, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

SEE PAGE 562.

1. Cairo and the Citadel, viewed from the Desert.

4. Pyramids of Sakkarah, from the Nile.

7. Tourists Returning from the Pyramids, at Sakkarah.

2. Right bank of the Nile, above the Kasr-en-Nil iron bridge at Cairo.

5. A Donkey Boy.

8. Tomb of a Saint, in Cemetery at Sakkarah.

3. Street in Sakkarah.

6. Interior of a Fellah's House, at Sakkarah.

9. Old Mill at Sakkarah.

FROM CAIRO TO BENI-SOUF.

T H E C R I S I S I N E G Y P T.

SEE NEXT PAGE.

A SANTON PREACHING IN THE STREET OF SITTEH ZEINEB, CAIRO.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT.

The situation of affairs both at Cairo and at Alexandria continues to occasion the most serious anxieties. The Khedive of Egypt, Tewfik Pasha, has been unable to reduce the military revolt, Arabi Pasha, to due obedience; and the Ministry of War, and command of the army and forts, are still in Arabi Pasha's hands. He has desisted, however, at the Khedive's urgent request, from threatening the British and French squadrons at Alexandria, by constructing batteries which might be used against them. The Sultan of Turkey, through Said Pasha, Foreign Minister of the Porte, has replied to the French proposal, which the British and other foreign Governments had accepted, for holding a Conference of the European Powers, at Constantinople, to settle the Egyptian difficulty. The Sultan does not consider this necessary, but has sent his own Special Commissioner, Dervish Pasha, with two assistant diplomats, to communicate his will to the Khedive and to Arabi Pasha. Great excitement prevails among the Mohammedan population of Cairo, who resent the interference of Christian nations with their domestic concerns; Arabi Pasha, with Ali Fehmy Pasha, and Abdellal Pasha, his colleagues in the Ministry, do not spare appeals to Mussulman fanaticism, and to Egyptian national sentiment, against England and France. One of the Sketches, by our Special Artist at Cairo, presented this week, shows a street preacher, called a Santon, addressing a popular audience in the neighbourhood of the Mosque dedicated to the Lady Zeineb (Sittah Zeineb), who was a favourite wife of the Prophet Mohammed. It is still hoped that no acts of violence will be perpetrated at Cairo; but a large number of the European residents, with their families, alarmed at the state of the country, have departed from Egypt; and business is quite at a standstill, to the great loss and distress of the trading and labouring classes.

Our Special Artist has also furnished us with an interesting series of Views on the Nile above Cairo, part of which appear in this Number of our Journal. These are mostly taken at Sakkarah, in the plain of Memphis, where the second great necropolis, or cemetery, of the ancient Pharaohs was situated, with eleven Pyramids, the famous Apis Mausoleum, the burial-place of the Sacred Bulls, and many other sepulchres adorned with magnificent wall-painting. The Sketches, however, are rather designed to illustrate the present social condition of the Egyptian peasantry, their habitations, costume, and domestic life, than the remarkable monuments of antiquity. The Nile itself almost unchanged by the lapse of time, but with a striking difference of aspect in the spring and early summer and in the season of its yearly inundation, is the grandest natural feature of this region. In the far distance, looking to the north-east, towards the head of the Red Sea, the Arabian mountain range is discerned through a marvellously clear atmosphere, tinged with beautiful colours by the rising or setting sun.

THE BRITISH FLEET.

The two middle pages of this Number are filled with Illustrations of the British ships of war, in the Mediterranean or in the Channel and Reserve Squadrons, available if required to defend British interests in the Levant, which seem to demand particular attention in view of the Egyptian Crisis.

The squadron in the Mediterranean, the most powerful as well as the most numerous of any of our fleets abroad, comprises six ironclads—namely, the Alexandra, flying the flag of the Vice-Admiral Commanding-in-Chief on the station, an armoured vessel of 9492 tons displacement, armed with two 25-ton and ten 18-ton guns, with her hull protected by armour 13½ inches thick at the most vital parts of the vessel, and carrying a crew of 671 officers and men; the Inflexible, of 11,500 tons displacement, with four 80-ton guns, armour 24 inches thick and a crew of 349 officers and men; the Téméraire, of 8412 tons displacement, with four 25-ton and four 18-ton guns, armour 12½ inches thick, and a crew of 534 officers and men; the Superb, of 8994 tons displacement, armed with twelve 18-ton and four 6½-ton guns, armoured with 13½-inch iron plates, and carrying 620 officers and men; the Monarch, of 8322 tons, with 8½-inch armour, four 25-ton, two 12-ton, and one 6½-ton guns, and a crew of 515 officers and men; and the Invincible, of 6034 tons displacement, armed with ten 12-ton guns, protected by 9½ inches of armour, and carrying a crew of 450 officers and men. The aggregate tonnage of the six armoured vessels forming the English ironclad squadron in the Mediterranean amounts, therefore, to 52,754 tons; while their total armament comprises four 80-ton guns, ten 25-ton, twenty-six 18-ton, twelve 12-ton, and five 6½-ton guns, and their crews include 3139 officers and men. With the exception of the Iris, a fast steel despatch-vessel of 3735 tons; the Hecla, a torpedo depot ship of 6400 tons, with a crew of 223 officers and men; and the Hibernia, a receiving ship permanently stationed at Malta, with a crew of 121 officers and men, the other vessels on the Mediterranean station are all gun-boats, small paddle-wheel steamers, &c., with crews of from 50 to 100 men each; the aggregate of the crews of all the ships on the station, including the ironclads, being 4367 of all ranks.

The ironclads of the Channel Squadron are the Achilles, an armoured frigate launched in 1864, in the earlier days, that is to say, of the ironclad reconstruction of the Navy; and the Agincourt and Northumberland, both which left the slips in 1868. All these vessels are of great size, the displacement of the Achilles being 9694 tons, that of the Agincourt 10,627 tons, and that of the Northumberland 10,584 tons, and they carry numerous crews, the complement of each including 705 officers and men of all ranks. They are, however, only armoured with plates ranging in thickness from 3 inches to 5½ inches, and carry only 9-inch 12-ton guns. Being, therefore, thus lightly armoured and lightly armed, they can hardly be classed at all among the ironclads of the Navy. Neither, with two exceptions, can the ships forming the First Reserve Squadron be accounted of greater strength, either offensively or defensively. They are the Warrior, 9681 tons, the first ironclad built for the English Navy, launched in 1861, thickest armour 4½ inches; the Defence, 6074 tons, launched in 1862, thickest armour 4½ inches; the Hector, 6960 tons, launched in 1864, thickest armour 4½ inches; the Valiant, 6420 tons, also launched in 1864, thickest armour 4½ inches; the Repulse, 6190 tons, launched in 1867, thickest armour 5 inches; the Penelope, 4394 tons, launched in 1867, thickest armour 6 inches; the Lord Warden, a wooden armour-plated ship 7675 tons, launched in 1867, thickest armour 7 inches; the Hercules, 8700 tons, launched in 1867, thickest armour 11 inches; and the Belleisle, launched in 1876, thickest armour 13½ inches. The Hercules carries 18-ton and the Belleisle 25-ton guns.

The Queen has given orders for the following promotions in and appointments to the Order of the Bath:—To be Knights Commanders—James Caird, C.B., Senior Copyholder, Inclosure, and Tithe Commissioner; Ralph Wood Thompson, C.B., Under-Secretary of State for the War Department. To be Companions—Robert George Wyndham Herbert, Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies; Charles Lennox Peel, Clerk of the Council; Colonel Thomas Inglis, of the Royal Engineers; Henry Jenkyns, Assistant Parliamentary Counsel.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, June 6.

It has been a great week for England. The old country has maintained nobly its ancient renown for the production of the best horses and the best pickpockets in the world. At Longchamps on Sunday the French police were so favoured by fortune in their annual tournament with the British light-fingered visitors that one of the stables had to be converted into an improvised lock-up. But the elegantly dressed crowd of practitioners temporarily confined there represented only an infinitesimally small fraction of the English criminal contingent, whereas the havoc created by the anonymous and more dexterous majority remains as a proof of the national superiority. In the matter of horses the superiority of England was equally marked. The English won the three great events of the week—the Grand Steeplechase with Whisper-low, the Grand Hurdle-Race with the Duke of Hamilton's Marc Antony, and the Grand Prix with Bruce. This last race excited little or no enthusiasm, so completely was the victory of Bruce a foregone conclusion. Nevertheless the attendance at Longchamps was greater than ever. The vast hippodrome was literally black with people, and from the Cascade to the Place de la Concorde on each side of the avenues the crowd stationed in serried ranks from three o'clock in the afternoon until seven to witness the legendary return, the "retour des courses." Frankly, the return was not brilliant; the equipages were shabby, the horses still shabbier, and the tremendous rain storm that came on, as usual, just before the Grand Prix was run, had converted the roads into mud, and taken the gloss off things in general. After dinner, in the old times, it was the custom to go to Mabilly, where the victors and the vanquished got up a scrimmage, the coups de poing de la fin, to finish up the day. This year there was no scrimmage, and the extraordinary balls held at the Hippodrome, the Concert Musard, Tivoli, the Elysée Montmartre, and other similar establishments were sufficiently tame. However, the racing season is now over in France, and horses and jockeys will be able to take a rest until the Deauville week.

But, thanks to the dog show in the Tuileries gardens, "le sport" will continue to hold its own in the public attention until the middle of the month. The Exposition Canine—"la Canine," as the young bloods call it, with that trick of abbreviation that makes them talk about "l'Hippo" for the Hippodrome, "l'Hippique" for the Concours Hippique, and "l'Hortil" for the Horticultural Show—the Exposition Canine is terribly poor. Not more than one third of the dogs would be admitted to an English provincial show. And not only have the jury admitted mongrels, but they have even offered hospitality to dogs with the mange. The most interesting features of the show are the packs of harriers, beagles, and other hounds used for stag and boar hunting. These packs are accompanied by valets, keepers, and piqueurs in grand uniform, with their hunting knives and horns. To-morrow and Sunday next we are to have concerts, soli, duos, trios and faufares on the horn. The programme includes all the most aristocratic arrangements of this horn-music peculiar to French vinery, "la Chantilly," "la Royale," "la Rallye-Vendée," "la Boisselien," "la Vernon," "la Puysegur," &c. You see, with stags, boars, and wolves in abundance, vinery is an important affair in France; and anyone who has seen the ceremony of the blessing of the hounds in the chapel of Chantilly must have been struck with the old-world pomp with which the chase is still surrounded.

In the orangery of the Tuileries, adjoining this dog show, is an exhibition of the works of Paul Baudry, the decorator of the foyer of the Opera. Besides the famous portraits of Guizot, Beulé, Palikas, Madeleine Brohan, and Dupin, we see there a fine medallion of Saint Hubert, destined to figure over a chimney-piece at Chantilly; a ceiling painted for the millionaire Vanderbilt, and a quantity of decorative work by Baudry.

Another addition to the sights of Paris is the Musée Grévin, on the Boulevard Montmartre, which was opened to the public this morning. The Musée Grévin is a wax-work show devised by the ingenious draughtsman of the Journal pour Rire and the Journal Amusant. The idea is to make of it a newspaper in wax—to give a plastic reproduction of the men and events of the day. The result hitherto obtained is not particularly happy. The resemblances are rarely striking, and the general aspect of the whole affair is ghastly when it is not ridiculous. All the celebrities of the day figure, lifesize, in the Musée Grévin. Gambetta is at the tribune of the Chamber; Sarah Bernhardt is in her studio; Victor Hugo is writing; M. Grévy is in his working-room; and the actors of the Comédie Française are in the green-room of their theatre. In most cases, the vestments of the figures have been furnished by the models themselves, at the request of the artists of the Museum. Victor Hugo, sent an old alpaca coat, in spite of the express invitation to send a new one! Doubtless the Musée Grévin will have a great success of curiosity at first, and in time it may improve. At present, however, it is not up to the mark. The architecture of the museum is very pretty.

Victor Hugo's long-announced drama "Torquemada" has at length been published by Calmann-Lévy. There is no danger of the piece being played, for it is utterly unsuited for the stage. "Torquemada" is, to some extent, a philosophical drama. It is full of interminable monologues, strange reasonings, odd rhymes, and splendid phrases. In the hero of the Inquisition Victor Hugo sees a sombre fanatic who combats fire by fire, the eternal fire of hell by the momentary fire of the stake; and who, on the strength of a ferocious interpretation of St. Paul's words, faith burns by charity, has imposed upon himself the mission of saving men's souls by torture. Around Torquemada are grouped figures symbolic of a past age—the King, the Queen, the jester, the councillor, all equally monstrous in hideousness or vice. Being devoid of humour, Victor Hugo often falls into the grotesque when he means to be only grandiose.

I mention for the benefit of the bibliophiles the completion of the first volume of the édition de luxe of "L'Art du XVIIIème Siècle," by E. and J. de Goncourt. The last instalment is devoted to the two Saint-Aubins.

The death of Garibaldi has been the occasion of stormy discussions in the Chamber, in the Municipal Council, and in the press. The Conservatives endeavour to prove that Garibaldi was an enemy of France; the Republicans maintain the contrary. The Republicans, being the majority, have the victory, and the Municipal Council will be represented by four of its members at the funeral of the Italian patriot.

The affair of the students riots in the Latin Quarter continues to occupy public attention. This afternoon the Cabinet was interpellated on the subject in the Chamber, while the magistrates were examining the affair at the Palais de Justice.

On Monday, the militant Bonapartists made their annual pilgrimage to the Church of St. Augustin, to celebrate the mass of the anniversary of the death of the Prince Imperial. There was no manifestation of any kind, and the attendance was small. Still, Bonapartism is not dead yet. Prince Jérôme's paper La Napoléon has ceased to appear, and already three new Bonapartist papers—Le Combat, L'Ordre, and Le Peuple Français—have been started.

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

"Lohengrin" was given, for the first time here this season, on Thursday week, when Madame Albani repeated that charming performance as Elsa which has for several seasons been an attractive feature. As Ortruda, Mlle. Stahl made a further advance by her very dramatic impersonation of the character. M. Sylva as Lohengrin was most successful in the more declamatory passages of his music, and Signor Cotogni and M. Dauphin were, as before, respectively Telramondo and the Herald, M. Grasse having been a satisfactory representative of the King.

On Saturday Madame Adelina Patti appeared as Rosina in "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," for the first time this season, and sang Rossini's bright and florid music with all her wonted charm and brilliancy. The cast, as heretofore, included Signor Nicolini as Almaviva, Signor Cotogni as Figaro, and Signor De Reszké as Basilio, Signor Scolaro having been the Doctor Bartolo.

On Monday, Mozart's "Il Seraglio" was given, with a cast similar to that of last season. Madame Sembrich, as Costanza, again sang with brilliant effect, especially in the great bravura air, "Che pur aspro;" and Madame Valleria rendered the music of Biondina with admirable refinement of style. M. Gailhard as Osmino, and M. Soulauroix as Pedrillo, acted and sang with genuine humour. Signor Scolaro was efficient as the Pacha, and the cast was improved by the transference of the part of Belmonte to Signor Frapoli.

On Tuesday, Meyerbeer's "L'Africaine" was the opera, the occasion having included the powerful performance of Madame Pauline Lucca as Selika, a character in which that excellent artist gained great renown here in former seasons. Her acting as the Indian Queen was of an equally high order in Tuesday's representation of the opera, and her delivery of the music of the part was worthy of its dramatic surroundings. The co-operation of Madame Valleria as Inez was a valuable feature, as was that of Signor Pandolfini as Nelusko. M. Sylva, as Vasco de Gama, sang and acted with much effect, and the minor characters were efficiently filled. The stage effects were of the same splendid kind as heretofore. The duties of conductor have been, as usual, divided between Signor Bignani and M. Dupont.

GERMAN OPERA—DRURY LANE THEATRE.

Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" has been repeated since our notice of its production last week; Fraulein Maltin and Herr Nachbaur having efficiently replaced the former excellent representatives of Eva and Walther von Stolzing. The production of Weber's "Euryanthe"—announced for Tuesday last—was postponed to this (Saturday) evening, and has been again deferred—an extra performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio" having been announced for yesterday (Friday) evening.

Last Saturday's Crystal Palace concert included the first performance here of Berlioz's "Symphonie Funèbre et Triomphale," the composition of which immediately followed that of his symphony "Le Retour à la Vie," and preceded that entitled "Harold en Italie." The work now referred to was originally written for a military band; an orchestra of stringed instruments, and a chorus having afterwards been added by the composer. The symphony consists of three divisions—"Marche Funèbre," "Oraison Funèbre," and "Apothéose," the first movement being the most interesting. It has neither the musical nor the structural importance of a symphony, and is too noisy for performance in a concert-room. It served well enough for its original purpose—the ceremony of canonisation, in 1840, of the victims of the Paris Revolution of 1830—especially as it was then given in the open air. Saturday's concert included the brilliant pianoforte playing of Madame Sophie Menter in Liszt's Hungarian fantasia, and some unaccompanied solos; and Madame Peschka-Leutner sang some bravura pieces with much success. At this week's concert Signor Scambati is to conduct the performance of his new symphony, and to play Beethoven's pianoforte concerto in E flat.

The fifth of the present series of Richter concerts took place yesterday (Friday) week. The only novelty was the first appearance of Herr Georg Haeflein, who obtained a great and genuine success by his performance of Spohr's eighth violin concerto, known as the "dramatic" concerto. The orchestral playing, in well-known pieces, was of the same high order as usual at these concerts. At the sixth concert, on Monday evening, a very pleasing composition by Herr Sucher was produced with much success. It is entitled "Das Wald-fraulein," and is written for chorus, orchestra, and two solo voices, representing the Forest Maiden and a Knight. The music is both dramatic and melodious, and is well contrasted. It was admirably performed in its choral and orchestral details; the solo portions having been finely sung by Frau Sucher and Herr Winkelmann. Gluck's overture to "Iphigénie en Aulide" (with Wagner's ending), Liszt's very characteristic "Hungarian Rhapsody" for orchestra (No. 1), and Beethoven's symphony in C minor, completed the concert. The Rhapsody pleased so greatly as to be encored. Herr Richter, conducted with his wonted skill. Beethoven's great Mass in D is to be given at the seventh concert on Monday.

At the fourth of Mr. Ganz's orchestral concerts last Saturday afternoon—Madame Montigny-Rémaury made her first appearance this season, and Mlle. Marianne Eissler was heard for the first time in England. The first-named lady—the eminent pianist—played Beethoven's first concerto (in C) and a "Minuet" and "Gavotte" by M. Saint-Saëns, with great effect; and Mlle. Eissler made a successful début by her skilful performance of the "Adagio" from Spohr's ninth violin concerto. Berlioz's eccentric "Symphonie Fantastique" entitled "Episode de la Vie d'un Artiste" was well played by the orchestra, as were well-known overtures. The symphony has before been spoken of by us. Again the waltz movement pleased most, and had to be repeated. Madame Patey sang finely in an aria by Sarti, and an agreeable new song, "The Snow-white Rose," by Blumenthal.

Mr. Charles Hallé's series of chamber concerts at the Grosvenor Gallery is now more than half completed. Last week's programme included a repetition of Dvorák's pianoforte quartet in D, and performances of Mozart's pianoforte quartet in G minor, Beethoven's sonata for piano and violin in A minor, and pianoforte solos by Chopin. This week's selection comprised Brahms' pianoforte trio in B major, Beethoven's solo sonata in A flat, op. 110, the Adagio from Spohr's ninth violin concerto, and Schumann's pianoforte trio in G minor. It would be superfluous to comment on the fine pianoforte playing of Mr. Hallé and the refined violin performances of Madame Neruda.

Mlle. Vera Timanoff, the accomplished young Russian pianist, gave a recital at St. James's Hall on Wednesday afternoon, when her programme consisted of an interesting and varied selection of pieces by old and modern masters; and Mr. Oberthur gave a matinée musicale at the Marlborough Rooms the same day. Mr. Charlton T. Spencer gave his second pianoforte recital in the concert-room of the Royal Academy of Music in the evening, when his programme consisted of an interesting selection, chiefly instrumental.

That sterling pianist Mr. Franz Rummel gave a pianoforte recital at St. James's Hall yesterday (Friday) afternoon, with a well-selected programme.

The Chester Musical Festival opened in the cathedral on Wednesday morning with Mendelssohn's "Elijah." We have already given an outline of the performances, which were continued on the Wednesday evening and the two following mornings and evenings.

Of the first performance in England of Rubinstein's "Paradise Lost," at the Philharmonic Society's fifth concert, yesterday (Friday) evening, we must speak next week.

This (Saturday) afternoon an operatic concert is to be given at the Royal Albert Hall, the programme of which will be contributed to by some of the principal artists of the Royal Italian Opera—Mesdames Patti, Albani, and Sembrich being among those announced to appear.

Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and Mr. Carter's "Placida" are announced for performance at St. James's Hall this afternoon. Mesdames Christine Nilsson and Antoinette Sterling, Mr. Maas and Signor Foli, being the principal solo vocalists.

Mr. George Watts, conductor of the Philharmonic Subscription Concerts at Brighton, announces a morning concert (his first in London) at St. James's Hall next Thursday, supported by distinguished artists, vocal and instrumental.

THE PLAYHOUSES.

Yes, it is true that Mr. Henry Irving has made up his mind to "cross the big Pond," and that, with Miss Ellen Terry and the fine fleur of the Lyceum company, the most gifted of living tragedians will make a professional tour in the United States and Canada, commencing his campaign in New York City on Oct. 29, 1883. "The high contracting parties," that is to say, Mr. Irving himself and Mr. Henry E. Abbey, of New York, have agreed on the provisions of a treaty which henceforward must take its place among the "Fodera" of the Stage. The Irving repertoire will comprise "Hamlet," "Charles the First," "The Merchant of Venice," "Richard the Third," "Richelieu," "The Lyons Mail," "The Belle's Stratagem," "Louis the Eleventh," "The Bells," and "Much Ado about Nothing." There may be reasons of State, perchance, which may preclude the transportation bodily across the Atlantic of the elaborate scenery and "machines," as the French say, of "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Cup"; and the repertoire above mentioned is surely an amply sufficing one; still, I shall be very much surprised if the American public allow Mr. Henry Irving and Miss Terry to depart without a performance of the two last tragedies named. It is surely within the resources of American scene-painting to produce a banqueting-hall, a garden and a balcony, and a Tomb of All the Capulets for "Romeo and Juliet," and a Temple of the Ephesian Artemis for "The Cup," which should fairly satisfy the requirements of the two dramas, although they may not approach the magnificent scenic effects achieved at the Lyceum. But if "Romeo" and "The Cup" are not to be given in the 1883-4 tour Mr. Irving and Miss Terry can, at least, promise to come back again. So far as my experience goes, America is a country to which you are bound to return. He who has seen Niagara, and eaten terrapin at Baltimore, and canvas-back ducks at Philadelphia, and gumbo at Washington, and pompadour at New Orleans, and striped bass (to say nothing of Spanish mackerel) at New York, is as he who has drunk of the waters of the Fountain of Trevi at Rome. He must go back. So I am entitled to anticipate for the actor-manager of the Lyceum the achievement of two more artistic triumphs, and the making of two more fortunes. In his first tour, he will probably not go very far south nor very far west. Eventually, he is bound to make the Gulf of Mexico and the Bay of San Francisco aware of him. There are rich piles of dollars to be had for the playing for at the Golden Gate; and shining doubloons and pieces of eight have not wholly disappeared (the carpet-baggers notwithstanding) from the States of Louisiana and Florida. Of the dramatic success of Henry Irving in America I have no manner of doubt; and I shall be content to be set down as the very faintest of prophets—say, a Derby Prophet—if the Americans do not go wild with enthusiasm on Miss Ellen Terry. I seldom bet; but you may bet in this case confidently. I should add that Mr. Irving and his troupe will return to London at the end of April, 1884, and will reopen at the Lyceum on June 1. A steamer will be chartered to convey the necessary scenery, dresses, decorations, and "properties" to America; so that, to all intents and purposes, not only the plays and the players, but the very Lyceum itself will be "re-produced" in the States.

Last Monday I went to Mr. Toole's merry and sparkling little theatre, known by some of the admirers of the genial comedian as "the Tooleries," where the programme has been very sensibly and pleasantly amplified and diversified. On Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays is performed "After Darkness Dawn," the new domestic drama "adapted" (I believe from the Syro-Chaldaic or from the pre-Aryan Marowsky dialect) by Mr. A. A. Dowty, in which Mr. William Farren, jun., enacts with so much quiet pathos and artistic skill—and, to elderly playgoers, with such curious suggestiveness of his distinguished grandfather—the part of Prosper Mathieu, the French emigré. After this pretty little piece comes, on the evenings just named, the ever-welcome "Auntie." But on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays the performances consist of the farce of "Deaf as a Post" as a first piece—they were adaptors before Agamemnon, and "Deaf as a Post" is the French "Le Sourdeur; ou L'Auberge Pleine"—"After Darkness Dawn" as a second, and "Robert Macaire" as a last piece—Mr. E. W. Garden playing the bandit of "L'Auberge des Adrets," who was so cunningly made to caricature Louis Philippe; and Mr. Toole playing the cowardly Jacques Strop. "Sandwiched" between the second and fourth pieces is now a deliciously droll bit of dramatic absurdity, by Mr. Henry J. Byron, entitled "The Villainous Squire and the Village Rose." It is described as a "Bucolic Pastoral," and as being "farther from the Madding Crowd than Ever." The interlude only plays forty-three minutes, so you may attend a public dinner at Willis's Rooms and even make a speech advocating the claims of the Refuge for Penitent Box-Keepers and Reformed Check-Takers, run into Toole's Theatre, see the "Villainous Squire," and then go down quietly to the House of Commons and listen until two in the morning to a succession of lively debates on the vexed question as to whether blowing up an Irish gentleman's house with dynamite, riddling him with slugs, burning his ricks, and houghing his cattle should be held to be of the nature of "Boycotting" or of "exclusive dealing." It would be entirely useless for me to attempt to give you anything like an outline of the plot of the "Villainous Squire." It is all inside, indeed, without any outline; and the plot has apparently gone out for a walk.

and has not since been heard of; but if you wish to see human, or rather inhuman, villainy represented in its deepest dye and its most wolfish aspect, go and see Mr. Toole as the Squire, in a blonde wig and a high-peaked hat, like that which might have been worn by a Puritan preacher who had gone upon the turf—in a scarlet coat, white buckskins, with ribbons at the knees rivaling the adornments of Sixteen String Jack—in top-boots and spurs, and provided with a whip which obstinately refuses to be cracked. Go and see Mr. G. Shelton and Mr. Bruntton, as Bunnie and Corn, two "jabbering joshkins," one in a smock-frock the other in a flowery waistcoat, and both infinitely funnier than the incomprehensibly archaic bumpkins in the "other" "Squire," and in "Far from the Madding Crowd." Go and see Mr. E. W. Garden as Hugley, "made up" to represent the burglar of the period, and looking perhaps a little too much like the real article, and singing a song which fairly makes your flesh creep. See Miss Minnie Douglas and Miss Bella Wallis as Mopsa and Chloe, two artless country damsels; and last—and assuredly not least—be very particular about seeing Miss Emily Thorne, who, as Rose, "a tender but full-blown plant," fairly takes the audience by storm with her singing, her dancing, her archness, her vivacity, and her thoroughly good acting. All these good folks romp and rattle in an amazingly jovial way, and appear to enjoy the performance as much as the audience do. I should say that to witness the "Villainous Squire and the Village Rose" for the first time would be equivalent to a cure for the tooth-ache. When you had seen it twice you might find that you had no more trouble with a Bad Leg of Thirty-five Years Standing; and after performance number three your uncle in Bermuda would probably expire, leaving you universal legatee by his vast fortune.

G. A. S.

THE MAGAZINES.

The leading fictions in the Cornhill are not particularly good this month, but their deficiencies are amply compensated by the weird sea-poetry of the first part of a tale, somewhat inappropriately entitled "The Merry Men." The terror, mystery, and fascination attaching to the sea under certain conditions are here represented with a power at once vague and intense, partaking alike of the spell of Victor Hugo and the spell of Hermann Melville. "Names of Flowers" is also a poetical paper, in virtue of the numerous pretty legends which it recites in a very simple and agreeable style. Some of the interpretations of popular rites and ceremonies connected with flowers are ingenious and convincing. We are surprised that the writer should miss the obvious explanation of the use of the poppy at funerals, its symbolism of the sleep of death. An entertaining essay on Pulci's "Morgante Maggiore" shows a thorough acquaintance with that amusing specimen of reckless rhapsody in pure Tuscan, one of the most characteristic productions of the Renaissance, and in some sort a precursor of the Reformation. "A French Assize" illustrates the proposition that the administration of criminal justice, whether as regards judges, juries, or advocates, is not among "the things that they manage better in France."

It is also satisfactory to learn that, in the opinion of an enlightened foreigner, as conveyed in Mr. Patterson's abstract of Professor Felmeri's report to the Hungarian Government, published in Macmillan's Magazine, English education is before the Continental in some important respects. A less amount of actual information may be imparted, but the higher ends of education are, the Professor thinks, better attained upon the whole. Mr. Hodgkin contributes an interesting description of the Roman camp at Saalburg; and a native Egyptian eloquently adjures the Powers not to suffer the good work accomplished in his country since Ismael's deposition to be undone by a military adventurer. The main attraction of the periodical, however, is still Mr. Julian Hawthorne's too artificial but yet fascinating novel.

It may be questioned whether self-laudation in a magazine is quite compatible with good taste, even when relating to an admittedly honourable past which has taken rank as a chapter in the history of literature. We are, however, the less disposed to be critical with Blackwood's complacent retrospect of its old Noctes days, as the sketch of Wilson, Lockhart, and Hogg is the best thing in the present number. The quotations from the Noctes exhibit Wilson as a prose poet of a very high rank, a forerunner of Ruskin. He was before all things a large-hearted man, and his bile would undoubtedly have been moved by the petty carpings and cavillings of "False Coin in Poetry," an essay which would never have found a place in Blackwood under his régime. The writer does occasionally pick a little hole in the coat of a great poet, but much more frequently exposes his own entire want of imagination. There is nothing else in the number remarkable in any way, unless it be "Baron Fisco at Home," a clever study of a successful financial swindler on a large scale, written in slipshod verse in the manner of Mr. Browning.

Fraser is spoiled by bad editing. Scottish Universities, special hospitals, primitive beliefs, national education, are all important subjects ably treated, but produce a sensation of intolerable dullness when lumped together as they are here, with no relief except a few additional chapters of Mr. Clarke Russell's spirited yachting romance.

The most interesting article in the Fortnightly Review is Mr. Moncreu Conway's survey of the life-work of Emerson, especially remarkable for its frequent references to Emerson's anticipations of the philosophy of evolution, whose significance is now more apparent than when they were uttered. It is pleasant to find Emerson, in a letter to Carlyle, bearing spontaneous testimony to the happiness of the latter's wedded life which should silence current misrepresentations and exaggerations. The "Eton Boy," extracts from whose letters and diaries are published by Mr. Matthew Arnold, is Arthur Mynors, a young officer who fell a victim to dysentery in the South African campaign. The extracts justify all Mr. Arnold's admiration for the writer, and some of his admiration for the system of education of which Mynors was a favourable example. Mr. George is a Socialist, and his paper on the Irish question brings out the communistic aspect of it very clearly. If it is really no business of Government to protect property and compel the observance of contracts, Mr. George is unanswerable. Mr. John Wisker, however, is so far from agreeing with him as to insist vehemently on the duty of the Queensland Government, and, failing them, the mother country, to compel the planters to observe their contracts with their Polynesian labourers. A state of things is disclosed exceedingly disgraceful to the colony, for which the entire prohibition of Polynesian immigration would seem to be the sole effectual remedy. Mr. Gosse, reviewing the Paris Salon, pronounces the sculpture more interesting and meritorious than the paintings.

The Nineteenth Century and Contemporary Review have between them four articles more or less favourable to Home Rule, all unsatisfactory from avoiding the main question whether an Irish Parliament would not immediately embark upon a course of legislation hostile to Imperial interests, except Mr. O'Neill Daunt's, which directly raises it. Mr. Daunt thinks it would be the great business of an Irish Parliament to encourage Irish industry; but does not say how this is to be done otherwise than by taxing imports from Great Britain, which would be a very short cut to civil war. Earl Grey's article in the Nineteenth Century on Irish politics in general is useful as a retrospect, but offers little practical aid in dealing with present problems. Mr. Flanagan's criticism of the system of small holdings, and Mr. Marriott's denunciation of the Caucus are both pointed and effective. The experiments of Messrs. Barrett, Gurney, and Myers in "thought reading" require to be carefully repeated and verified by persons less prepossessed in favour of the genuineness of the phenomena. If confirmed, they would be an important contribution to psychology. The miscellaneous contributions to the Contemporary include several on important subjects, especially Mr. Seton-Karr's application of his Indian experience to judicial rents, and Professor Levi's remarks on the revival of Italian industry. All, however, are a trifle tame, except Mr. Quilter's remarkably plain-spoken article on the Royal Academy exhibition.

The Century is very strong this month, with the continuation of "Through One Administration," one of the most delicate and subtle of Mrs. Burnett's fictions; Carlyle's Irish Diary, sometimes trivial, but always characteristic; and Mr. Kegan Paul's highly appreciative sketch of Cardinal Newman. It is easy to exaggerate Dr. Newman's actual influence on contemporary thought, unless we are careful to distinguish between the personal affection and admiration which he has been able to inspire and the actual following which he has been able to command. "The Bee Pastures of California" is a vivid picture of the brilliant flower-region of California, now disappearing before the plough. Harper is also an excellent number, with graphic and admirably illustrated papers on Yarmouth, New Mexico, and Baltimore. It may be the artist's faults that the portraits of Baltimore ladies in the latter scarcely bear out the character for surpassing loveliness attributed to the sitters. The Atlantic may be looked on as a Longfellow memorial number. It contains a fine steel portrait of the deceased poet; a poetical tribute to "Our Dead Singer," by Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes; a hitherto unpublished poem by Longfellow, on "Decoration Day," written shortly before his death; and an estimate of his character and genius, by O. B. Frothingham. The number also contains an article on Darwin, by John Fiske, who knew him personally; and the continuation of Mr. Hardy's and Miss Phelps's serials.

Belgravia is as entertaining as usual, with clever serial stories, Mrs. Macquoid's agreeable paper on Helmsley and its picturesque neighbourhood, and Dr. A. Wilson's popular natural history of the elephant. The gem of an excellent number of the Gentleman's Magazine is an unpublished diary of Swift's, kept when detained at Holyhead by stress of weather, and intended for the perusal of Hester Johnson. It is most characteristic of the writer throughout, and has some most genuinely Swiftian touches. Mr. Fox Bourne writes on Carlyle and Mrs. Carlyle with refreshing fairness and good sense; Mr. Dutton Cook contributes an interesting account of the gifted and eccentric actor Robson; and Mr. Winter records his close and amusing observation of a pet spider.

Temple Bar, in addition to its usual quantum of fiction, has entertaining papers on Rossini, "An Attempt to Reach Merv," and the New York seaside resort, Coney Island. The most amusing contribution, however, is a review of Sergeant Ballantine's reminiscences, written by some one whose memory is as long as the Sergeant's, and is able to cap several of his best stories. The best article in Time is Mr. Preece's on the electric light. London Society is light and readable, as usual.

The various periodicals issued by Messrs. Cassell, Pether, and Galpin include—The Magazine of Art, Picturesque Europe, the Family Magazine, Universal History, Gleanings from Popular Authors, Picturesque America, British Ballads, Old and New London, Old and New Edinburgh, Science for All, Familiar Wild Flowers, Royal Shakespeare, the Illustrated Book of Canaries and Cage-Birds, and an Illustrated Bible.

Mr. Francis George Heath has accepted the editorship of the Journal of Forestry, the new volume of which, just commencing, will devote considerable space to all subjects interesting to lovers of the country. Mr. Heath's management begins with the June number.

Among the Fashion Books are—Le Follet, La Saison, Le Moniteur de la Mode, World of Fashion, Ladies' Treasury, Myra's Journal, Myra's Mid-Monthly.

Other magazines and serial publications received are:—The Portfolio, Art and Letters, Men of Mark, Army and Navy Magazine, the Squire, Across Country, St. James's, Churchman, Aunt Judy's Magazine, Theatre, Pathways of Palestine, St. Nicholas, Irish Monthly, Universal Instructor, Burlington, Mouth, Science Gossip, Argosy, Good Words, Leisure Hour, Celebrities of the Day, Churchman's Shilling Magazine, Antiquary, Bibliographer (the first volume of which is completed), Psychological Review; and monthly parts of Chambers's Journal, All the Year Round, Household Words, Harper's Young People, Knowledge, Our Darlings, Sunday at Home, Sunday Magazine, Day of Rest, Boy's Own Paper, and Girl's Own Paper.

At a meeting, on Tuesday, of the Birmingham Town Council the Mayor read a letter from Cardinal Newman inclosing a cheque of £20 towards the library fund.

Mr. Stuart Cumberland will give next Friday evening, in Exeter Hall (the Earl of Shaftesbury in the chair), his marvellous reproductions and explanations of so-called spiritual phenomena and illustrations in thought reading. He will give an entire change of manifestations at the same place on Saturday afternoon next.

Sir S. Northcote presided last Saturday evening at a dinner at Exeter in aid of the Commercial Travellers' Association, taking occasion to commend the system of thrift which formed the basis of such organisations, and at the same time pointing out the important position of the commercial travellers themselves as links in the home trade contributing to the development of the country's commerce.

The Queen has approved of the honour of knighthood being conferred on the following gentlemen holding the office of Chief Justice in the Colonies:—Richard Cayley, Chief Justice of the Island of Ceylon; George Philipps, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Hong-Kong and its dependencies; James Marshall, Chief Justice of the Gold Coast Colony; Henry James Burford Burford-Hancock, Chief Justice of the Leeward Islands; Adam Gib Ellis, Chief Judge of the Supreme Court of the Colony of Mauritius.

A fine etching, by M. Charles Waltner, of the well-known picture called "The Evening Hymn," by Mr. George Mason, A.R.A., has been published by Messrs. Colnaghi, Pall-mall East. This picture, at the Royal Academy Exhibition of 1868, was one which attracted much interest by its graceful and tender treatment of a subject appealing to refined sympathetic feeling. It represents a few English country girls, in the fading light of an autumn sunset, walking homeward across the fields, apparently from church or chapel, and singing over again the last hymn of the evening service.

Hector,
eighteen 64-ton guns.

Valiant, eighteen 64-ton guns.

Defence,
eighteen 64-ton guns.

Lord Warden,
eighteen 64-ton guns.

Repulse,
ten 9-ton guns.

Hercules,
eight 18-ton guns.

Monarch,
four 25-ton guns, two 64-ton guns.

Iris,
ten 64-pounders.

Superb,
sixteen 18-ton guns.

Alexandra,
two 25-ton guns, ten 18-ton guns.

Téméraire,
four 25-ton guns, four 18-ton guns. ten 12-ton guns.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT: THE BRITISH FLEET AT 12-ton guns.

Penelope,
ten 12-ton guns, five 6½-ton guns.

Warrior,
ten 12-ton guns, sixteen 6½-ton guns.

ble, 12-ton guns, torpedo-vessel.

Agincourt, seventeen 12-ton guns.

Helicon, despatch-boat.

Infexible,
four 80-ton guns. Northumberland, seventeen 12-ton, seven 6½-ton guns.

Minotaur,
seventeen 12-ton guns.

BLE TO DEFEND OUR INTERESTS IN THE EAST.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

A wet Ascot week is little less than a national calamity, and early on Tuesday morning the outlook was as unpromising as it well could be. This gloomy state of affairs doubtless prevented many intending visitors from journeying to the famous heath, so, though the rain ceased long before racing began and the afternoon proved as fine as could be wished, the attendance was far smaller than usual. According to custom, proceedings commenced with the Trial Stakes, in which the slashing Valentino gave weight and a good beating to four somewhat moderate opponents. Tristan had only Chippendale to beat in the Gold Vase, as Crudo, the third runner, was merely started to assist the French crack. Lord Bradford's old horse looked well enough, but he has grown cunning of late, and must be a difficult animal to train, owing to his unfortunate habit of breaking blood-vessels. He was well beaten directly they turned into the straight, and Tristan gained the easiest of victories. It will be a great pity if M. Lefèvre's colt is not allowed to have a cut at Foxhall in the Cup, though there is certainly every temptation to reserve him for the rich Hardwicke Stakes on Friday. There was not much character about the ten runners for the Prince of Wales's Stakes, if we except Quicklime, a good, honest colt, and a thoroughly consistent performer. Pursebearer has evidently been completely overrated, Exequer is a confirmed rogue, Gareth is very moderate, and the less said about the other half-dozen the better. Under these circumstances slight odds were laid on Quicklime, in spite of his 5 lb. penalty and the 7 lb. allowance claimed by the majority of the others, and his clever victory did not do much to improve his position in the St. Leger quotations. Mr. Houldsworth, unlucky as he is elsewhere, generally manages to win a race or two at Ascot, and, after her grand fight with Hauteur at Epsom, Lilac appeared to have a capital chance of scoring for the "green and gold" in the Twenty-fifth Biennial Stakes. She beat all the other fancied ones cleverly enough, but found an unexpected conqueror in The Duke, a son of Barbillon and Lady Abbess, who has been highly tried on two or three occasions this season, but disappointed his party sadly both at Northampton and Newmarket. The field of eight that contested the Ascot Stakes were very fair samples of handicap horses, though it cannot be said that there was anything of very high class amongst them. It had been understood that Archer would ride Fortissimo (8 st. 7 lb.), but he appeared on the back of Retreat (8 st. 7 lb.), which made that horse, who looked remarkably well, a very warm favourite. Edelweiss (7 st. 9 lb.) was also well backed, and Exeter (8 st. 13 lb.) had plenty of friends. Faugh-a-Ballagh (6 st. 2 lb.) made some show of a race with Retreat; but the latter won with plenty in hand, and has thus made up for the disappointment of last year, when he came in first for this race, but was disqualified on the ground of a cannon, and the stakes and bets awarded to Teviotdale. Edelweiss was a poor third; and old Exeter, who seems fairly "played out," could not improve on his performance of last year. There were twelve runners for the Maiden Plate, which invariably produces a good field. This time, little Martin, carrying about three stone of dead weight, had the mount on Blue Rock, who did manage to finish third, but had no chance against Fulmen, a well-named son of Galopin and Lightning. Up to this time, backers had had matters pretty much their own way; but the ring got a turn in the Twenty-eighth Triennial Stakes, the odds of 7 to 2 on Limestone being cleverly upset by Privateer, his solitary opponent.

Wednesday proved a regular bookmakers' day, as three or four hot favourites were upset in rapid succession. The opposition to Shotover in the Ascot Derby was very feeble, and her 10 lb. penalty did not prevent her from securing an easy victory. Geheimniss did not fare so well in the Fern Hill Stakes, and perhaps it was too much to ask her to contest a burst of four furlongs after a preparation for a comparatively long race. She never seemed fairly to get into her stride, and could not quite reach Narcissa, against whom 20 to 1 might have been obtained. There were just a score of runners for the Royal Hunt Cup, and Sweetbread (6 st. 4 lb.), who shared the position of favourite with Ishmael (7 st. 12 lb.) at the finish, secured the easiest possible victory from Edensor (7 st. 8 lb.) and the Peine de Cœur colt (7 st. 2 lb.). Of course, long odds were laid on St. Marguerite for the Coronation Stakes, but she tied to nothing under her 7 lb. extra, and Rozelle, another 20 to 1 chance, won the rich prize for Mr. Houldsworth. After his clever victory of the previous day, The Duke was backed against the field for the Thirtieth Triennial Stakes, but had no chance with Symphony, a daughter of Petrarch and Bowstring, who was tried highly before her defeat at Epsom, and should do further credit to her young sire.

The annual sale of the yearlings bred at Marden Park took place at Sandown Park on Saturday last, and the result proved that there is still plenty of money in the market for really good animals. Twenty-six lots were offered, and a purchaser found for every one of them, the aggregate amount realised being 7515 gs., or an average of about 289 gs. A beautiful filly by Hermit from Breakwater (1050 gs.) made the highest price, in spite of having been foaled with only one eye; she was knocked down to Mr. Long, and will ultimately go to Australia. An own sister to the speedy Sabella, by Blair Athol—Jocosa (850 gs.), came next on the list, and was followed by a son of Craig Millar and Hedge Rose (600 gs.), who broke loose and gave an exhibition of his galloping powers round the paddock just before being led into the ring. A colt by Hermit—Miss Bell (580 gs.), a filly by Wild Oats—Crinon (560 gs.), and a filly by Strathconan—Lady Augusta (500 gs.), were about the best of the remainder.

There seems to be no end to the long scores that are being made in all kinds of cricket-matches this season, and bowlers continue to have a very bad time of it. After one or two narrow escapes, the Australians have suffered their first defeat, Cambridge University very unexpectedly beating them by six wickets. It is almost unnecessary to state that this triumph was obtained mainly by the aid of the three Studds. Mr. C. T. Studd (118), J. E. K. Studd (66), and G. B. Studd (42 and 48), all batted grandly; and, amongst the Colonials, A. C. Bannerman (50) and Messrs. T. Horan (51) and G. Giffen (59) did most of the scoring. Our visitors then journeyed on to Manchester, where they beat Lancashire by four wickets. Messrs. Massie (47 and 31) and Murdoch (65 and 27) fully maintained their great reputation; and, for the county, Barlow (not out, 66) and Mr. A. G. Steel (50) did most of the scoring. The Notts men had all their work to do to defeat Surrey by four wickets, a result mainly due to the fine play of Barnes (58 and 48) and Scotton (49). On the other side, Read (not out, 37), and Messrs. W. W. Read (56) and J. Shuter (44) all did well. The victory of Yorkshire over Derbyshire was regarded as a matter of course, and was gained by eight wickets. There was no remarkable scoring on either side, Bates (54) coming out at the head of the poll. The draw between the M.C.C. and Ground and Leicestershire proved a very sensational affair.

The second wicket of the club fell for 19, and then Barnes (266) and Midwinter (187) carried the score to 473 before they were parted. They thus contributed no less than 454 while they were together, a performance quite without parallel; Panter (not out, 46) did best for Leicestershire. A wonderfully close and exciting contest between Surrey and Middlesex resulted in the success of the former by 25 runs. Messrs. A. P. Lucas (53), W. W. Read (74), E. O. Powell (53), and S. Colman (68), a member of the Clapham C.C., who had never previously represented his county, all did well for Surrey; but the fine batting of Messrs. A. J. Webbe (31 and 66) and S. W. Scott (35 and 126) very nearly snatched the game out of the fire. The Surrey men are to be specially congratulated on the result, as, this week, Middlesex has inflicted a crushing defeat on Gloucestershire by no less than ten wickets; Mr. G. B. Studd (84) was again in grand form for the winners.

About the only feature of the Civil Service Sports—which were held at Lillie-bridge on Saturday last—was the grand performance of W. George in the open mile. He covered the full distance in 4 min. 19 2-5 sec., which is the best time on record by nearly four seconds. The exhibitions of the Civil Servants themselves were, with one or two exceptions, melancholy in the extreme.

Another "best on record" was accomplished on the same afternoon, at the annual meeting of the West Kent Cycling Club, where H. L. Cortis rode a full mile in 2 min. 43 1-5 sec.

The Channel match of the New Thames Yacht Club was sailed last Saturday from Southend to Harwich. The first prize was won by the Miranda, the second by the Lorna, and the third by Buttercup. The Mignonette and the Eva were successful in a handicap match to Harwich.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

ITALY.

King Humbert has consented to become godfather to the grandson of the Prince Imperial of Germany.

Garibaldi died at Caprera yesterday week. A profound impression has been created in Italy (and not in Italy alone) by his death. The Chamber of Deputies at Rome has adjourned till the 12th inst., as a sign of mourning. A monument is to be erected to him at the expense of the State, while pensions of 10,000f. have been voted to his widow and to each of his five children. In his will Garibaldi has left instructions that his body should be cremated, his ashes remaining in Caprera. A memoir of Garibaldi appears on another page, and his portrait is given with this Number.

GERMANY.

Prince Charles, the Emperor's only living brother, has met with a serious accident. He left Berlin last Saturday on his way to Wiesbaden, and on account of his great age and weakness stopped the night at Cassel, where the accident, the breaking of the left thigh bone, occurred on Sunday in his bed-room. It must be remembered that the Prince is in his eighty-first year, which makes his condition precarious.

Yesterday week the German Antarctic expedition, consisting of Dr. Schrader and six companions, sailed by the Hamburg mail-steamers for Monte Video, whence it will proceed by Imperial corvette to the island of South Georgia, to establish a scientific station for meteorological observations.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

Herr von Kallay, late Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has been made Imperial Minister of Finance with the administration of Bosnia and the Herzegovina.

RUSSIA.

Last Saturday the Czar again visited St. Petersburg, attending a mass for the soul of the late Empress of Russia. He afterwards visited the Winter Palace, and returned to Peterhoff.

An Exhibition of Russian products was opened on Thursday week at Moscow, by the Grand Duke Vladimir. The Metropolitan said the Exhibition evidenced an amount of progress which should be the source of pride to every true Russian.

The Official Messenger publishes an Imperial order abolishing the present West Siberian Government, and establishing a Government of the Steppes, to include the territories of Akmolinsk, Semipalatinsk, and Semiretchensk.

GREECE.

The King and Queen and the Royal Family returned to Athens on the 1st inst., from their cruise; on the 2nd, being the fête of Prince Constantine, a Te Deum was sung in the Cathedral. The Court went to Tatoi on Sunday for a few weeks.

AMERICA.

A strike of iron and steel workers extends over a large area. A serious riot has occurred in Chicago in connection with the ironworkers' strike. A number of men who had refused to join the strike were dragged from a railway train and beaten. The assailants used pistols, and Judge Pillsbury, of the Appellate Court, was mortally wounded.

The Supreme Court of the district of Columbia sitting in banco has refused the application made by Guiteau's counsel for leave to reopen the whole case.

CANADA.

Princess Louise landed at Quebec on Sunday under a Royal salute, and was received by the Marquis of Lorne. Her Royal Highness, who is in excellent health, was presented with an address in French, by the Mayor of Quebec, and was most heartily cheered by the people.

It is stated that the Governor-General has given his assent to the Deceased Wife's Sisters Bill, which was passed by the Dominion House of Commons by 137 votes to 34, and by the Senate, on the third reading, by 38 votes to 11.

Mr. Frank Smith succeeds the Hon. John O'Connor as Postmaster-General.

In British Columbia the Premier, Mr. G. A. Walkern, has resigned, and has been appointed Judge, in the room of Judge Robertson, deceased. The Hon. R. Beaven, the Minister of Finance and Agriculture, has been called upon to form a Ministry, and new elections will be held immediately.

The Speaker of the Manitoba Legislature has resigned in consequence of alleged gross corruption and disregard of provincial rights by the Government. It is reported that the Government will appeal to the people immediately.

The Duke of Manchester, who is at Chicago, acting on behalf of a Scotch Company, has bought the Canada Pacific Railway with the ten million of acres of land assigned to the promoters of the railway by the Dominion Government. The intention is to carry out a large scheme of colonisation.

Serious injury has been done by fire at the Quebec station of the Grand Trunk Railway. The loss is variously estimated at from four to nine hundred thousand dollars.

AUSTRALIA.

The Colonial Treasurer of Victoria has introduced his financial statement in the Legislative Assembly. The revenue for the last financial year, including the balance of revenue and expenditure of £188,000, was £5,750,000, being £316,000 in excess of the estimates. The expenditure was £5,370,000, exclusive of £305,000 applied for the redemption of Treasury

Bonds. The Customs revenue shows an increase during the year of £169,000, and the railway revenue of £115,000. The Treasurer estimates the revenue for the present financial year at £5,610,000, and the expenditure at £5,570,000. The actual surplus at the close of the year is estimated at £36,000, which is proposed to be applied in reducing the beer excise, establishing a penny postage, and remitting the tea duty.

Sir Arthur Blyth, K.C.M.G., the Agent-General for South Australia, has received the following telegram from the Government at Adelaide, dated the 3rd inst.:—"Parliament was formally opened on June 1. The Governor's speech proposes an extension of the Adelaide and Nairne Railway to Border Town; the construction of a railway from Palmerston (in the northern territory) to Pine Creek; the extension of the Port Augusta and Government Gairns Railway towards June Creek and the colony of Queensland; and an extension of the Hallett and Terowie Railway towards the Barrier Ranges. The revenue for last financial year exceeded the amount estimated. Splendid rains have fallen throughout the colony."

The Natal Legislative Council was opened on Wednesday. Twenty lives have been lost by fire in a Swedish village, the poor-house being ignited by lightning.

According to a telegram published in Paris, the insurgents in the Sudan have succeeded in capturing Khartoum, the chief city of the province.

For some time past the most vigorous measures have been taken for the destruction of the locust plague in Cyprus. Fully seven-eighths of the whole quantity of locusts with which the island is infested have been destroyed.

The breech-piece of one of the new fifteen-pounder breech-loading guns on board H.M.S. Swiftsure gave way last week while that vessel was at Madeira. One man was killed, and three others were injured.

Lieutenant-General Thomas L. J. Galwey, R.E., Inspector-General of Fortifications and Director of Works, has been appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Bermudas or Somers Islands.

Some excitement has been caused at Calcutta by the issue of new regulations as to the importation of oils. Replying to a remonstrance from the Chamber of Commerce, the Indian Government has promised to consider the matter.

GENERAL HOME NEWS.

The plants in the Rhododendron Walk, Windsor Great Park are now in full bloom.

Captain Douglas Galton has accepted the presidency of the forthcoming Sanitary Congress at Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The Crystal Palace of the Dublin Exhibition, including Leinster-hall, has been bought by Mr. J. Orrell Lever, M.P. It is to be re-erected, with additions, near Battersea-park.

The gardens of the Inner Temple have been thrown open in the evening for the benefit of the public, and will remain open during June, July, and August, every evening.

Yesterday week the Bath and West of England Show at Cardiff was brought to a close. As compared with previous meetings, this one has been a great success.

Miss Marianne North's Gallery at the Botanic Gardens, Kew, is open to the public at all hours when the gardens are open.

The Alton Loan and Art Exhibition will be opened in the Assembly Rooms next Friday, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught will honour the exhibition with their presence.

By the kind permission of Mrs. Beever, an amateur concert will be given at 129, Harley-street, next Thursday afternoon, to complete the fund for the Queen's scholarship at the Female School of Art, 43, Queen-square, Bloomsbury.

The Sussex Daily News states that the Royal Counties Agricultural Society's Show, to be held in Brighton on June 22 to 26, promises to be a great success. The prizes amount to over £2000, and the entries number 610.

Major-General G. W. A. Higginson, C.B., commanding the Home District, held a field-day in Hyde Park on Monday of all the available troops of the brigade of Guards at present stationed in the metropolis.

The annual visitation of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, took place last Saturday afternoon, when there was a large attendance, the various instruments furnishing the usual amount of interest.

Mr. Christie, M.P. for Lewes, has informed the Mayor of that Borough that he intends presenting the Corporation with a gold chain and badge of office, together with a gold mace, of the value of about £500.

Mr. John Charles Day, Q.C., of the South-Eastern Circuit, has been appointed to the vacant judgeship in the Queen's Bench Division, caused by the recent elevation of Mr. Justice Bowen to the Court of Appeal.

The great bell of St. Paul's was last Saturday afternoon formally dedicated to the service of the church, and the first strokes of the bell have satisfied all who have heard it of the sweetness of its tone and the impressiveness of its effect.

There were 2176 births and 1304 deaths registered in London last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 383, and the deaths 172, below the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. Last week the fatal cases of smallpox in London were only six in number.

The massive obelisk of Anglesey marble, which has been erected on Tower-hill, Beaumaris, as a public memorial to the late Sir Richard Bulkeley, was unveiled, on the 1st inst., by his widow. The monument constitutes an important landmark to vessels navigating the Menai Straits.

The new Cunard steamer Pavia was successfully launched from Messrs. Thompson's yard, Clyde Bank, Glasgow, last Saturday afternoon. Her extreme length is 440 feet, breadth 46 feet, depth 36 feet, horse-power over 4000. She is designed for the Atlantic trade.

New colours were last week presented to the 3rd Battalion of the Lincolnshire Regiment at the barracks, Lincoln. The presentation was made by the Lord Lieutenant of the county, Earl Brownlow, Colonel Lord Monson being in command. Colonel Appleyard, C.B., was also present.

Mr. Walter, M.P., opened a new Townhall at Reading last week, one of the most complete groups of public buildings ever provided for a town by the munificence of its citizens. It includes a townhall, a public library and reading-room, established and supported under the Free Libraries' Acts, a museum, schools of science and art, and a school of cookery.

Lord Sandwich has been presented by the officers of the Hunts Militia with a handsome silver equestrian statue, the mounted figure being an exact representation of his Lordship. The occasion for the testimonial is the retirement of the Earl from the colonelcy of the regiment, a position which he has held about thirty years, and the gift was handed over to the recipient at a banquet held last week.

THE SILENT MEMBER.

The Egyptian riddle remains unsolved. But it is, at least, reassuring that each diplomatic explanation of Earl Granville and Sir Charles Dilke in Parliament has hitherto tended to allay the anxiety occasioned by the reports from Cairo and Constantinople. The Foreign Secretary and his colleague, for instance, were on Monday able to inform the Marquis of Salisbury and Mr. Bourke, respectively, that, although the Sultan did not think a Conference on the Egyptian question necessary, yet he had not refused his assent. Further satisfaction was afforded by the official statements of Monday and Tuesday. Thus, in a characteristically terse answer, Sir Charles Dilke explicitly said all the Great Powers except Turkey were favourable to the idea of a Conference, in proposing which the Government had closely followed the precedent of the late Administration in 1876, when it appears that the Porte, swearing it would not consent, consented at the eleventh hour. Meanwhile, Dervish Pasha has been sent by the Sultan as Special Commissioner to Egypt, with instructions to restore order and re-establish the authority of the Khedive; and before Dervish Pasha arrived, Arabi Pasha had been commanded by the Porte to discontinue the building and arming of earthworks near the harbour of Alexandria. English residents have in large numbers left that port, the British and French squadrons watching which had been strengthened. As for the correspondence on Egyptian affairs between England and France, copies of the despatches are promised by the close of the present week. It will then be open to Mr. Ashmead Bartlett (as Sir Charles Dilke pointed out) to formally challenge the Egyptian policy of her Majesty's Government, if he should think fit.

Mr. Gladstone is seldom to be seen among the group of Privy Counsellors who are accustomed to watch the proceedings of the House of Lords from the space in front of the Throne. The Prime Minister was, however, a conspicuous figure there on Monday evening during the Marquis of Waterford's earnest and vigorous, clear, and resonantly delivered attack on the Government for the alleged negotiations which led to the "Kilmainham Treaty" with Mr. Parnell. So thoroughly had the subject been threshed in the Lower House that there was nothing new left for the noble Marquis to say. But it was noticed that the Premier listened with interest to the arguments of his Lordship; and looked grave when Earl Cowper rose to express his disagreement with his late colleagues as to the expediency of the sudden release of Mr. Parnell and his fellow suspects. Lord Carlisle's neat reply restored Mr. Gladstone's equanimity. The Earl of Dunraven did not achieve success as an exponent of Mark Twain's accent and manner, though his captious criticism of the Ministry hugely delighted the Opposition, the ironic vein being particularly relished by that master of irony, the Marquis of Salisbury. It was but a sham fight, however. After Earl Granville's lively answer to Lord Salisbury's lucid summing up, the Marquis of Waterford dropped the topic; and the Earl of Rosebery had the field open to him to cultivate his little bill for the reform of entail in Scotland. Their Lordships made amends for the unwonted length of Monday's sitting by attending for an hour only on Tuesday, when they advanced a stage the London Union of Benefices Bill and the Imprisonment for Contumacy Bill.

There will be a general agreement with Mr. Newdegate's proposition on Tuesday that "the business of England and Scotland in Parliament" is "unduly postponed." But Mr. Gladstone was unable to accept the suggested remedy of a Ministerial recommendation of "urgency" for the consideration of the Repression of Crime in Ireland Bill. Not to dwell upon the exceptional instance of the use of violent language by Mr. O'Kelly in flinging a retort at Mr. Forster (an offence against good taste for which the hon. member expressed his regret), the Irish Home-Rule members generally have exhibited a certain degree of moderation in pressing their numerous amendments. But the Government cling firmly to the main features of their stringent measure, and continue to defeat each adverse proposition by large majorities, Sir William Harcourt's determination in the matter prompting Mr. MacFarlane to paraphrase some lines from "H.M.S. Pinafore" in honour of the Home Secretary:—

In spite of all temptation
To understand another nation,
He remains an Englishman.

We accidentally omitted, in our publication of the 27th ult., to acknowledge our obligations to Mr. E. Price Edwards, of the Trinity House, author of an instructive little book on the Eddystone Lighthouse, from which we copied the sectional drawings of the Old and New Lighthouse Towers, and those of the Douglass six-wick burner, and of the chandelier in the Old Lighthouse.

"Nobody's Fault," written by Mr. Arthur Law, and produced at St. George's Hall on Monday last, is a play without a plot. Mr. Law has contented himself with collecting some amusing character sketches and with writing some graceful lyrics, which are set to pretty airs by Mr. Hamilton Clarke, whose music, if not strictly original, is always tuneful. Miss Edith Brandon is a dainty Devonshire ingénue; Mr. North Home, a young collegian; Miss Fanny Holland, an old maid of Utopian views; Mr. Alfred Reed, a retired admiral; and Mr. Corney Grain, an old Army pensioner, devoting his declining days to potato culture. With a pretty scene representing the flower garden of a cosy house on the Devon coast, and with a company of clever actors and vocalists, who do full justice to the dialogue and music, the success of the piece was assured. Mr. Grain's new sketch, "Small and Early," gives evidence of having been hurriedly written, yet one is never weary when Mr. Grain takes his seat at the piano.

One of the possible effects of the all-absorbing Irish legislation of the Session will be the shelving of some measures of practical utility on which the differences of opinion are small. Among these is the Canal Boats Act (1877) Amendment Bill, which is simply designed to give vitality to an enactment that concerns the moral, religious, and social welfare of tens of thousands of canal children, who not only escape the meshes of our Sunday schools, but evade day-school education, and is also intended to prevent overcrowding on board canal boats and barges. Mr. George Smith, of Coalville, whose activity in respect of this question is equalled only by his philanthropy, is naturally disquieted at the position of the question, which, as our readers know, he has made a speciality. The bill referred to, which is just now in the Upper House, needs something more than general sympathy—viz., official help. We have seen it stated that, if the emergency should arise, the Home Secretary will take it under his wing as one obnoxious to no one in the House, and following in the lines of former legislation. We trust this is true. The passing of even this comparatively small measure—which, however, affects some 40,000 children and many thousands of women—would be something to signalise what at the best is likely to be but a barren Session, and we hope Sir W. Harcourt will see his way to push through Mr. Smith's measure till it has received the Royal assent.

THE COURT.

At Balmoral her Majesty celebrated her birthday with a ball to the servants, tenantry, and gillies of the several Royal Highland estates, the Queen being present, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and Princesses Elizabeth and Irene of Hesse. The Rev. Archibald and Mrs. Campbell, of Crathie, were also present. The next day her Majesty and Princess Elizabeth of Hesse drove to Alt-na-Guithasach. Lord Carlisle left yesterday week. The Royal family and the Queen were at Divine service on Sunday, performed at the castle by the Rev. A. Campbell. Her Majesty received news of the safe arrival of Princess Louise of Lorne at Quebec, where she was met by her husband; and received by the people with due honours. The Queen's excursions are varied every day to the principal points of interest in the neighbourhood, her Majesty being usually accompanied by Princess Beatrice and the two young Princesses of Hesse.

The second State ball at Buckingham Palace is fixed for the 21st, and the State concert for the 28th inst.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince returned to Marlborough House yesterday week after his various duties at Great Yarmouth. His Royal Highness went to the Gaiety Theatre in the evening, and also accompanied the Princess to a ball given by Lord and Lady Carrington at their residence in Whitehall-yard. The next morning his Royal Highness attended the annual guard-mounting parade at the Horse Guards in celebration of her Majesty's birthday, at which the Princess, with her daughters, and Prince Frederick William of Hesse were present. After the parade the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke and Duchess of Teck, Prince Frederick William of Hesse, and Countess Erbach lunched with their Royal Highnesses at Marlborough House. This day, being the anniversary of the Empress of Russia's death, the Duchess of Edinburgh remained at home. The Prince went to the afternoon performance at the Gaiety Theatre, and dined with the Premier in Downing-street, afterwards going to Countess Granville's birthday reception, at the Foreign Office. The Princess, with the Duchess of Teck, was at the Gaiety Theatre in the evening. Their Royal Highnesses went to Eton on Monday for the "Speech Day," when the Prince uncovered a screen which had been erected by old Etonians as a memorial to officers, formerly members of the school, who fell in the late campaigns in Afghanistan and South Africa; their Royal Highnesses afterwards luncheon with the Provost of the College. Subsequently the Princess unveiled a window which has been recently erected in Holy Trinity Church, Windsor, to commemorate the merciful escape of her Majesty from the late attempt on her life. Their Royal Highnesses went to Cowarth Park in the evening for the Ascot week; the usual semi-state being observed on the opening, and on the Cup days, in the progress of the Royal party to the course.

The Prince will preside at a festival dinner in aid of the funds of the London Fever Hospital, at Willis's Rooms, next Wednesday.

The Duke of Edinburgh presided at a meeting in connection with the Royal College of Music held at Maidstone yesterday week. His Royal Highness, who was warmly received, lunched with the Mayor. On Monday the Duke presided at a meeting of the general committee of the Great International Fisheries Exhibition, when it was stated that the United States Congress propose to vote 50,000 dols. for the expenses attending their share in the exhibition. It was resolved to apply to the Treasury for a grant in aid. In reply to a suggestion of Professor Leone Levi, his Royal Highness said that he was himself preparing a paper on the fishing population, containing information which he hoped would be of service.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught were present last Saturday at the annual athletic sports of members of the Civil Service, on the conclusion of which the Duchess of Connaught presented the prizes to the successful competitors.

The Duke of Albany has consented to open the new hospital in Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, on the 29th inst.

The Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz left St. James's Palace for Dover on Sunday evening en route for Germany.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

Miss Margaret Stafford Northcote, second daughter of Sir Stafford Northcote, was married on the 1st inst. at Upton Pyne parish church, to Mr. Frederick Shelley, of Shobrooke Park, second son of the late Rev. Sir Frederick Shelley. The bridegroom's brother, Sir Frederick Shelley, was best man; the ceremony being performed by the bride's brothers, the Rev. J. S. Northcote, Rector of Upton Pyne, and the Rev. A. F. Northcote, Rector of Dedbrooke. A hundred and fifty guests were at the wedding breakfast, including the principal tenantry. Others upon the estates—men, women, and children—were entertained at dinner in a marquee on the grounds, and the evening was wound up by a dance.

The marriage of the Hon. Patrick Greville-Nugent, fourth son of Lord Greville, of Clonyn, with Ermengarda, only daughter and heiress of the late Mr. Augustus Ogilvy, of Cove Dunfriesshire, was solemnised on Monday, at St. Paul's Church, Knightsbridge. The bridesmaids were Lady Maude and Lady Gwendolen Cecil, Miss Mary Beresford-Hope, the Hon. Edith Hill Trevor and the Hon. Rosa Hood (cousins of the bridegroom), Miss Katharine Stuart-Wortley, Miss Ruby Spencer Churchill, and the Hon. Hilda Sugden. The youthful son of Lord and Lady Trevor, the Hon. Marcus Hill Trevor, acted as page, carrying the bride's train.

Mr. F. E. G. Astley (Scots Guards), eldest son of Sir John Astley, Bart., was married also on Monday to Lady Gertrude Pelham, only daughter of the late Earl of Yarborough, at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, by the Rev. A. Aylmer Astley, uncle of the bridegroom, the bride being given away by her brother, the Earl of Yarborough, who entertained the wedding party at breakfast at his house in Arlington-street. The newly-married pair left for Eastleigh House, Mr. Hugo Astley's place in Wilts, for the honeymoon. The band of the Scots Guards was in attendance, and numerous non-commissioned officers and men of the bridegroom's company of the Scots Guards were at the church. The tenantry of the Elsham, Worlaby, and Brocklesby estates made valuable gifts in silver plate to the bridegroom.

Lord Rossmore's marriage with Miss Naylor is fixed to take place next Wednesday afternoon at All Saints' Church, Ennismore-gardens.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism shows that in the third week of May there were 87,875 paupers, of whom 40,080 were indoor and 38,795 outdoor. This shows a decrease of 692 as compared with the corresponding week of 1881, but an increase of 2459 and 5423 as compared with 1880 and 1879. The vagrants relieved in the metropolis on the last day of the third week of May numbered 830, of whom 621 were men, 181 women, and 28 children under sixteen years of age.

BENEVOLENCE AND SELF-HELP.

Several meetings for a charitable purpose have recently taken place in London, the following being the most important:—

Sir Thomas Brassey, M.P., presided last week at the anniversary festival of the Printers' Pension, Almshouse, and Orphan Asylum Corporation, held in the Freemasons' Tavern. The collection amounted to £800, including £100 from the chairman.

Sir Moses Montefiore gave on the 1st inst. an entertainment and tea in honour of her Majesty's birthday to the children of the Jews' Infant Schools, numbering 1000, also to the teachers, pupil-teachers, and staff.

The trustees of public charities at Faversham have accepted an offer of Mr. Richard Gibbs, son of the late Mr. W. Gibbs, of that town, to spend £2500 in erecting a second grade school for girls, to be called "The William Gibbs School," in memory of his father.

The Earl of Morley presided, at the Royal United Service Institution, at the thirty-first annual general court of the Royal Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows. It was stated that there were sixty widows in the institution, and that 169 had been elected since its opening.

Princess Frederica's Convalescent Home for Married Women and their Infants was opened May 27. Owing to Princess Frederica's absence from England for her health, there could be no public ceremony. Any subscriber, on application to the sister-in-charge, Corfe House, East Molesey, can obtain admission for a patient. Flowers, fruit, old linen, money, &c., will be gladly received.

A meeting of the committee of the fund for the relief of the Jewish sufferers by persecution in Russia was held on Monday at the Mansion House. It was stated that the fund amounts to £82,458 in all, and there remains in hand £25,000. Reports were given as to the work already done, and arrangements were made to advance more money to those engaged in the labour of relief.

The fourth annual Prison Conference was held on Tuesday at the Westminster Palace Hotel, Sir U. J. Kay-Shuttleworth presiding. Resolutions were adopted recommending that a discharged prisoners' aid society should be attached to every prison, and suggesting alterations in the dietary in a certain class of cases, as well as directing attention to the travelling charges of discharged prisoners.

Mr. Thomas Charrington took the chair at the annual meeting of the East London Hospital for Children, held at the Cannon-street Hotel. The new patients treated during the year numbered 11,286, and the attendances of out-patients and casualty cases were 27,767. The gross pecuniary receipts were £7633, as against £11,313 for the previous year, the falling off being in donations and legacies. The total expenditure was £8975, of which £1998 was for an extension of building, and £147 in respect to the Convalescent Home at Mellis.

The Rev. R. S. Jukes, 52, Albion-road, Dalston, E., pleads for funds to enable him to give a "pleasant day" in the Forest to his Sunday School Band of Hope children and aged people connected with St. James's Mission, 20, Rosoman-street, Clerkenwell, E.C.; and the committee of the Fox-court Ragged Schools, Gray's-inn-road, appeal for funds to enable them to take 400 children from their overcrowded and unhealthy dwellings for a day's recreation in the fresh air. Contributions will be received by the treasurer, Mr. H. W. Elcum, 13, Bedford-row, W.C.; and by Mr. Thomas Fagg, hon. sec., 136, Pentonville-road, N.—The help of the benevolent is also solicited to enable "a day in the country" to be given to about 350 children attending the Sunday schools of the Church of St. Andrew and St. Philip, Kensal Town. Donations may be sent to the Vicar, the Rev. R. Towers, St. Andrew's Vicarage, Harrow-road; or to Mr. J. H. Roberts (Churchwarden and Superintendent of the Boys' Sunday School), 96, Ladbroke-grove-road, Notting-hill, W.

The following events, among others, are announced:—The Charity Commissioners have given notice that, under the authority of the Charity Commissioners for England and Wales, they will next Monday, at the Vestry Hall, St. Martin-in-the-Fields, inquire into the foundations, endowments, and objects of the parochial charities, their present circumstances, and whether any and what improvements may be made in the management or application thereof. The inquiry will be public.—Lord Derby, the president, will open the extension building of the Brompton Hospital for Consumption next Tuesday afternoon.—The Prince of Wales will preside at a dinner in aid of the London Fever Hospital's funds, at Willis's Rooms, next Wednesday.—Under the patronage of the Duchess of Connaught, an amateur performance, in aid of the fund for the relief of ladies in distress from non-payment of rent in Ireland, will be given at the Savoy Theatre next Wednesday afternoon. The pieces selected for the occasion are Mr. Byron's comedy "Old Soldiers" and Mr. Gilbert's "Creatures of Impulse." Mr. C. H. Stephenson has been brought specially from the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, to stage-manage the performance, and the characters will be represented by Major Onslow (20th Hussars) and Mrs. Onslow, Captain Moore Lane (A.P.D.) and Mrs. Moore Lane, Mrs. Langley, Mrs. C. H. Stephenson, Mr. R. Martin, Mr. H. Stopford, A.D.C. (Coldstream Guards), Captain Somerset Maxwell, and Captain M'Calmont.—The Duke of Cambridge, supported by the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, will preside at the annual dinner, to be held at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, next Friday, in aid of the funds of the National Hospital for Diseases of the Heart and Paralysis, Soho-square.—Canon Farrar has consented to preside at a public dinner to be held at the Star and Garter, at Richmond, on Saturday, June 24, to celebrate the first anniversary of the opening of the Richmond free public library.—The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress will hold a rose show on June 30 (not 29th as previously stated), at the Mansion House, in aid of the proposed Scarlet Fever Convalescent Home and of the Royal Hospital for Women and Children, Waterloo Bridge-road. The exhibition will consist of 10,000 roses from the gardens of the principal growers, arranged with ferns and other accessories in an artistic manner. There will also be an exhibition by amateur growers, among them some of the leading citizens who have taken up the idea with great spirit. Mr. J. Forsyth Johnson, Horticultural Director of the Alexandra Palace, has been entrusted with the arrangements.—The Lord Mayor will preside at the twelfth annual meeting of the Cabdrivers' Benevolent Association, to be held at the Guildhall, City, on Friday evening, the 30th inst.—The Earl of Clarendon will preside at the annual prizegiving to the children of the London Orphan Asylum to take place on July 1.—Mr. Henry Irving and Miss Ellen Terry have consented to take part in a dramatic matinee in aid of the funds of the Royal Hospital for Children and Women, Waterloo Bridge-road, on Wednesday, July 5, at Willis's Rooms.—The Prince and Princess of Wales have fixed Saturday, July 8, for their visit to Strawberry-hill, Twickenham, to open the new wing of the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage.

At the Crystal Palace, on Thursday, the first great firework display of the season took place, with many splendid effects.

HAMILTON PALACE, SCOTLAND, THE SEAT OF THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

DEPARTURE OF THE ARCTIC YACHT KARA TO SEARCH FOR MR. LEIGH SMITH.

LEIGH SMITH SEARCH EXPEDITION.

It is some relief to the general feeling of anxiety respecting the position of Mr. Leigh Smith to know that of the two British vessels which will endeavour to relieve him, should he be unable to make his way out of the ice, one is actually on her way North at the present moment. This vessel is the Kara, a beautiful little ketch, which has been specially built for that purpose, at Harvey's yard, Wyvenhoe, for Sir Henry Gore-Booth, and is provided with every appliance which practical experience could suggest. It is Sir Henry's intention to reconnoitre the edge of the ice in the Barents Sea, search the coasts of Novaya Zemlya, and co-operate generally, according to circumstances, with the Hope, a powerful steam-whaler, which is expected to sail shortly on the same quest. Although only forty-five tons register, it is not too much to say that no better-equipped or stronger vessel for her size than the Kara has ever sailed for the Arctic seas; and, if fortune favours her gallant crew, they may be able to render valuable service. Sir Henry, who commands his own ship, is himself an experienced Arctic navigator, and he is accompanied by Mr. W. J. A. Grant, who was with Mr. Leigh Smith in his successful expedition of 1880, and whose long and continuous services in the Arctic regions render him a most valuable colleague. The sailing-master is Captain Bannerman, of the Dundee whaling fleet, in which the mate has also served; and Sir Henry's servant, and five able seamen, make up a crew of ten all told. The Kara left St. Katharine Dock on Saturday, the 27th ult., and was towed down to the Nore light-ship, whence she proceeded under sail with a fair wind and everything in her favour. Our illustration represents the moment when the brave little vessel was hoisting her mainsail, after parting from the tug, and exchanging hearty cheers with the friends who had accompanied her thus far in order to wish the gallant voyagers God-speed in their arduous and unselfish errand.

HAMILTON PALACE.

The English origin of the family of Hamilton is said to be "undoubted," and it has been traced back to that of Robert, third Earl of Leicester, who died in 1190. The heraldic bearings of three cinquefoils on a field gules, still on the Hamilton shield, belonged to that of Earl Robert. The name Hamilton is also supposed to have come from the south, and to be a variation of the word Hambleden, which is common to many old manors about Bucks, and in other English counties. But Cadzow would in all probability be the older name, for the stream which passes through the town of Hamilton, and runs underground close to the palace, is still known as "Cadzow Burn." Cadzow Castle, and the old forest of the same name, are on the Avon River, from which they ought to have derived their name, and are a mile or so away from the Cadzow Burn. The older legends of the country have the name of Cadzow connected with them. It was Rhydderch, the King of Strath Clyde, and his Queen Lanqueth, who lived at Cadzow in the time of St. Mungo, to which belongs the legend of the Fish and the Ring, forming part of the emblems in the Glasgow City Arms. King David I., of pious memory, is said to have hunted at Cadzow, and he made the grant of the church at Cadzow to the Cathedral of Glasgow. The Scottish Kings in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries held their Courts at Cadzow. In none of these instances is Hamilton mentioned.

The town of Hamilton stands on rising ground on the south, its lower edge being close to the palace; but this was evidently an extension of an older town which existed, and which surrounded the palace. The lower town was distinguished from the other by being called the Netherton. That this was the oldest part of the place there is evidence to be found in the existence of an ancient mote-hill; and near it is an old stone cross, with rude sculptures on it, said to have been the Cross of the Netherton. This is on the north-west of the palace; and the old collegiate church, where the Hamilton family were all buried previously to the erection of the new mausoleum, stood on the north, showing that in former times the residence of the Lord of this region was in the centre of the town. It is not many years since one side of the main street was taken down to give more space between the palace and the town. In this operation the old Tolbooth, or jail, was preserved, and now stands within the grounds as a relic of the past. Even with this clearing, the Palace is still too close to the houses of the town for that privacy which is desirable.

SIR J. B. LAWES, AGRICULTURAL CHEMIST.
SEE NEXT PAGE.

It was not till after the Battle of Bannockburn that the Barony of Cadzow was transferred to the ancestor of the present family of Hamilton. Walter Fitz-Gilbert of Hamilton, who in 1296 held lands in Lanarkshire, had acknowledged fealty to Edward I., as sovereign, or Liege Lord over Scotland. In 1314 he held the Castle of Bothwell for the English, but on the flight of the English nobles after Bannockburn, he surrendered the Castle to Bruce, and was rewarded by a grant of the lands and baronies of Cadzow, Machanshire, and Kinnell. He was also made a Knight for his services. His successors are all called Hamiltons of Cadzow. It was in 1445 that Sir James Hamilton of Cadzow was created Lord Hamilton and his residence, known as "The Orchard," received the name of Hamilton. In 1474, Lord Hamilton married Princess Mary, who was then a widow, the eldest daughter of James II. It was from this relationship that the Parliament made the declaration, on the death of James V., that if Mary Queen of Scots should die, the Hamiltons should be next heirs to the Crown; and on this account they have ever since been regarded as a branch of the Royal Family. Boetius puts it that it was this alliance by which the Hamiltons were "decorit in the King's Blood." It was this Lord Hamilton who founded the Glasgow University.

On April 12, 1643, James, third Marquis of Hamilton, was created Duke of Hamilton, Marquis of Clydesdale, Earl of Arran and Cambridge, Lord Avon and Innerdale. He had no sons, but three daughters, the second of whom, Anne, according to the patent of creation, became Duchess. She married Lord William Douglas, Earl of Selkirk, who was created Duke of Hamilton for his own life. When he died the Duchess Anne resigned her titles in favour of her eldest son, who was created Duke of Hamilton. He was also created, in 1711, Duke of Brandon in England. In 1712 he fought a duel in Hyde Park with Lord Mohun, and was killed. It was Alexander, the tenth Duke, who married the daughter of Mr. Beckford, of Fonthill, which afterwards led to the Beckford Library becoming a part of the ducal palace at Hamilton. William Beckford, son of Alderman Beckford, Lord Mayor of London, inherited a fortune of £100,000 a year, including the estate at Fonthill. He devoted himself to literature. His most celebrated work was "Vathek: an Arabian Tale;" which first appeared in French in 1784. Beckford purchased an estate at Cintra, in Portugal, where he built himself a magnificent palatial residence. On retiring from Cintra he raised another costly edifice at Fonthill Abbey, Wiltshire. Here he collected a vast quantity of valuable objects, including a splendid library. In 1822 Beckford sold everything except some family pictures and the principal books. These were removed to Hamilton Palace, where the Duke had a library constructed for them, which is known as the Beckford Library. The great and precious collection of books and manuscripts is now to be sold in London. Messrs. Sotheby and Wilkinson, at their rooms in Wellington-street, Strand, will begin the sale on Friday, the 30th inst., and it will go on for twelve days.

Beckford's son-in-law, Duke Alexander, enjoyed his wealth and titles thirty-three years. He was succeeded by his only son, who died in 1863, when the present Duke, who was born in 1845, came into the title. His name is William Alexander Louis Stephen Douglas Hamilton. His mother was the Princess Mary of Baden. She had a second son, Lord Charles, who was in the 11th Hussars, and served as aide-de-camp to Lord Napier of Magdala in the Abyssinian Campaign. Princess Mary of Baden was a cousin of the late Emperor Napoleon, and occupied a prominent position in the French Court. The Duke of Hamilton is not only a Duke in Scotland and England; he is also Duke of Châtellerault in France. The Abercorn family claim to be the descendants of the first Duke of Hamilton in the male line, being descended by the female line from Duchess Anne, and have laid claim at various times to the revenues of the Châtellerault Duchy, but have not succeeded. The Emperor Napoleon III., in April, 1864, granted a new patent of the title to the present Duke. The French Law Courts, two years afterwards, gave a final decision.

PYRENEAN GOATS IN LONDON: SELLING THE MILK.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

SIR J. B. LAWES, BART.

Her Majesty the Queen has lately conferred a baronetcy upon this eminently useful and practical scientific man, who is a Hertfordshire country gentleman of hereditary landed estate, as well as the head of a great chemical manure factory and commercial company, with their works at Deptford, Millwall, and Barking Creek. Sir John Bennett Lawes was born in 1814, eldest son of the Squire of Rothamsted Manor, near St. Albans, and succeeded to his father's property in 1822. He was educated at Eton, and at Brasenose College, Oxford, but showed a strong preference for the science of chemistry, which he regularly studied in London. In October, 1834, he began his experimental application to agriculture, on his own land at Rothamsted, which is about twenty-five miles from London, near the Harpenden station of the Midland Railway. The effect of bone-dust as a manure, varying in different soils, with different plants, and in combination with other substances, occupied Mr. Lawes' attention for some years. He took out a patent, in 1842, for his invention of the manufacture of super-phosphate of lime, and started an establishment for that business on the banks of the Thames below London. In 1843 he engaged the assistance of Dr. Gilbert, the present director of the Rothamsted farm, and undertook with him a systematic series of agricultural investigations in the field, the feeding-shed, and the laboratory. In 1854 a testimonial was subscribed for presentation to Mr. Lawes, for the services he had rendered to British agriculture. It took the form of building him a new laboratory. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1854, and in 1867 the Royal medal was awarded to him conjointly with Dr. Gilbert by the Council of the Society. Sir John Lawes has also received a gold medal from the Imperial Agricultural Society of Russia. Last June the Emperor of Germany by Imperial decree awarded the gold medal of merit for agriculture to him and Dr. Gilbert jointly. The results of the Rothamsted investigations are to be found in the "Journals of the Royal Agricultural Society of England," the "Reports of the British Association for the Advancement of Science," the "Journal of the Chemical Society of London," the "Proceedings and Transactions of the Royal Society of London," the "Journal of the Society of Arts," the "Journal of the Horticultural Society of London," the Edinburgh Veterinary Review, the "Reports of the Royal Dublin Society," the Philosophical Magazine, the Agricultural Gazette, the Chemical News, and many official reports, pamphlets, and newspaper letters.

PYRENEAN GOATS IN LONDON.

Among the novelties which this year's season has brought to the London population, we may notice the herds of goats, which, under the vigilant care of rustic Pyrenean mountaineers, are to be seen within the last few weeks in almost every West-End thoroughfare. Their purpose is to supply the public with real goat's milk, the purity of which cannot be doubted, as it is obtained from the animal in the presence of the buyer. The nutritive properties of goat's milk, and its suitability as a food for infants and convalescents, have frequently been observed. We only mention this new industry as lending a novel and agreeable feature to our street life, and as the subject of one of our illustrations. Every morning the eight or nine little bands, each composed of from six to ten goats, start on their rounds in different parts of town, each under the care of a robust driver, whose dark face and his attire, an azure blouse, with the Basque cap on his head, show his foreign nationality. The scene is very picturesque and original, as they go along the streets, driving their goats, often stopping for the distribution of their milk to the maid-servants or children. The animals are afterwards taken into the Parks, or to grazing places in the suburbs, where they remain for a part of the day, always surrounded by a crowd of spectators, amongst whom there are a great number of children, whose great delight is to approach the goats. These animals are very tame, and seem to take great pleasure in the presence of their juvenile admirers, who for a very modest sum can enjoy a cup full of thick and frothy milk. When they are met in some secluded spot of the Parks, whence the house-tops entirely disappear behind a thick curtain of summer foliage, anyone hearing the melodious, though plaintive, tunes played by the goatherd would think himself transported into some Arcadian land. The Pyrenean peasant has a musical instrument, half flute and half whistle, to the sound of which the goats will promptly rally. A long and very light whip is used to stimulate their march, and also when they show any tendency to give trouble; but this is very seldom used, and the animals are treated with the utmost kindness by their keepers. The people from that part of France, between the banks of the Garonne and the steep Pyrenees, have the reputation of being very peaceable, kind, and hospitable; they are very well known to English tourists, who, at the approach of the winter season, go to Biarritz or to Bagnères to seek more sunshine than our country can afford to give. In the evening all the herd is collected; the goats, sixty in number, find shelter and rest under a vast shed in some premises situated between Tottenham Court-road and Charlotte-street. After they have been well tended and secured for the night their keepers meet in an adjoining house. There, while partaking of a frugal meal, they give each other an account of their day's work; and relate the wonders and the surprises which our vast city can offer to those simple peasants, who are entirely ignorant of our language and customs, and whose eyes are more used to the majestic grandeur of the Pyrenean peaks and other sublime features of mountain scenery.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

POPULAR NEW NOVELS AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.
IN A CATHEDRAL CITY. By BERTHA THOMAS.
A PRODIGAL'S PROGRESS. By FRANK BARRETT.
CORRIE POOL. By SUSAN MORLEY.
MARIE DUMONT. By Lady POLLOCK. [Just ready.]

FOURTH EDITION OF MR. HERBERT RALLANTINE'S EXPERIENCES OF A BARRISTER'S LIFE.
RICHARD BENTLEY and Son, 5, New Burlington-street.

CHARLES READE'S NOVELS. Uniform Edition, crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.—
IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND.
HARD CASH.
PEG WOFFINGTON.
CHRISTIE JOHNSTONE.
GRIFFITH GAUNT.
THE DOUBLE MARRIAGE.
LOVE ME LITTLE, LOVE ME LONG.
FOUL PLAY.
THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH.
THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE.
THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A THIEF.
PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE.
A TERRIBLE TEMPTATION.
THE WANDERING HEIL.
A SIMPLETON.
A WOMAN-HATER.
CHATTO and WINDUS, Piccadilly, W.

MR. TROLLOPE'S NEW NOVEL.
MARION FAIRY.
By ANTHONY TROLLOPE.
3 vols., crown 8vo.
CHAPMAN and HALL, Limited, 11, Henrietta-street, W.C.

"WHICH WINS," BY AUTHOR OF "WHITEFRIARS."
Entirely New Edition, price 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.; postage, 4d.
WHICH WINS, LOVE OR MONEY?
A Novel. By the Author of "Whitefriars," &c.
London: J. and B. MAXWELL, Milton House, Shoe-lane.

LIFE.
THIS WELL-KNOWN WEEKLY JOURNAL
CONTAINS THIS WEEK, THURSDAY, JUNE 8,
CHAPTER I. OF A NEW NOVEL
BY CHARLES READE,
AUTHOR OF
"Never Too Late to Mend," "Hard Cash," "The Cloister and the Hearth," &c., ENTITLED
SINGLEHEART AND DOUBLEFACE.

The Proprietor of LIFE has great pleasure in announcing that he has made arrangements with Mr. Reade to publish a Series of Stories of deep and varied interest from his pen, to be continued in the columns of LIFE, from week to week, for the space of a year or more.

Back Numbers, containing Chapters of THE KNIGHTS-BRIDGE MYSTERY, to be had.

LIFE of April 27 contained, with other attractions, a double-page Wood Engraving of Michael Munkácsy's famous Picture, "CHRIST BEFORE PILATE."
With LIFE of May 4 was issued a Phototypic Portrait of Mrs. CORNWALLIS WEST.
With LIFE of MAY 18, a most successful Phototypic Portrait of Lady BRASSEY.
Phototypic Picture this week.
AN IMPROMPTU DANCE.
LIFE, every Thursday, price Sixpence.
Office, 136, Strand, W.C.

Every Friday, 2d.; post-free, 2d. 4d.; Yearly, post-free, 10s. 10d. Also Published in Monthly Parts. Just published, cloth, price 10s. 6d., Volume I., comprising numbers of "Knowledge" from the commencement (Nov. 4, 1881) to No. 30 (May 26, 1882).

KNOWLEDGE, for JUNE 9, contains:
The Grosvenor Gallery—English Seaside Health Resorts. By Alfred E. Bland. Classification—Antiquity of Man in Western Europe. By Edward Clodd. Part III.—Crystals. By William Jago, F.C.S., Assoc. Inst. Chem. No. III. (Illustrated)—Nights with a Three-Inch Telescope. By "A Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society" (Illustrated)—Photography for Amateurs. By A. Brothers, F.R.A.S. Part IX.—How to get strong. Introductory—Weather Diagram—Butterflies and Moths. By W. J. H. Clark—Easy Lessons in Blowpipe Chemistry. By Lieut.-Colonel W. A. Ross—Late R.A.—Lesson VI.—The Physics and Chemistry of the Tring (continued)—The Babylonian Calendar—Sentences on Solar Energy—Correspondence—Answers to Correspondents—Mathematics—Whist—Chess—"Knowledge" is the best and most useful magazine published.—Vanity Fair.
London: WYMAN and SONS, 74, 75, Great Queen-street, W.C.

THE NEW MONTHLY TECHNICAL SERIAL.
Part VII., price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

A MATEUR WORK. Illustrated. A new Practical Magazine of Constructive and Decorative Art and Manual Labour. Among the contents of Part VII. will be found:
1. Filters: Construction and Maintenance. 2. Practical Gas Fitting. 3. How to Join a Lead Pipe. 4. Boots and Shoes: Making and Mending. 5. How to make photographic Apparatus. 6. Restoration of Antique Furniture. 7. Violin Making. 8. Wood-working Machinery. 9. Stencilled Decoration. 10. Electric Bells. 11. Boat Building. 12. Household Clocks. 13. Notes on Novelties, &c.
With a LATEST SEVENTY ILLUSTRATIONS and a USEFUL SUPPLEMENT, containing Fifty-four Designs in Stencilling for the Decoration of Walls and Ceilings.
Post-free, 7d. Yearly Subscription, post-free, 7s.
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.,
WHOLESOME HOUSES. A Handbook of Domestic Sanitation and Ventilation. By E. GREGSON HANNER, C.E., Member Soc. Arts, &c. New and Revised Edition. With a Chapter on Ventilation of Rooms and Railway Carriages, and numerous Illustrations.
London: EDWARD STANFORD, 65, Charing-cross.

LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO.'S
1s. Handbooks, post-free 1s. 1d.
POTTERY PAINTING. By John C. Sparkes.
PAINTING ON CHINA. By Baronne Delamardelle.
FANS PAINTING. By Baronne Delamardelle.
LIVINGS ENAMELS. By L. Dalrymple.
MODELLING IN CLAY, &c. By Morton Edwards.
GOLDEN RULES FOR SKETCHING FROM NATURE.
London: 60, Regent-street, W.

MESSER'S BRITISH WILD FLOWERS.
A New and Rapid Method of Studying Wild Flowering Analytical Illustrations. "We cordially recommend it." Journal of Horticulture, Cloth, 10s. 6d.
D. BOUZE, St. Martin's-place, Trafalgar-square, W.C.

"The more Mr. Morgan's Guide is known, the wider we feel sure, will its popularity become."—Daily Chronicle.
Neatly bound in cloth, price 2s.; or, with gilt edges, price 2s. 6d.
WHIST PLAYER'S GUIDE. By H. F. MORGAN, late Captain 25th Regiment. To be obtained at all Booksellers and Stationers.
JACQUES WARD and Co., Publishers, London and Belfast.

NEW MUSIC.

AT THE PORCH. A. J. CALDICOTT.
Ad lib. Harmonium accompaniment. Is now being sung by Miss Annie Butterworth. Price 4s.

LITTLE TROTS. A. J. CALDICOTT.
"An extremely pretty and interesting song."—Orchestra.
"Young parents will be charmed with this domestic song."—Graphic. Price 4s.

THE SCENT OF THE LIMES. J. L. ROECKEL.
In E flat and F. Is being sung by Mesdames Mand Cameron, Fosselle, Bels Francis, Constance Herring, Thordike, Miss Rosa Trevor, Madame Florence Clare, and Mrs. Lansell-Sims, with considerable success. Price 4s.

AT THE WINDOW. J. L. ROECKEL.
"Easy to sing and difficult to forget."
"A very striking melody."
"A good concert song."
"Well suited for the drawing-room." Price 4s.

FALLING LEAVES.
COLLINGSWOOD BANKS.
"Is a song worth careful singing."—Musical Opinion.
"Exceedingly good."—Orchestra. Price 4s.

TIRED. In D flat and D.
Miss M. LINDSAY.
"The popularity of this song continues unabated." Price 4s.

DAILY VOCAL EXERCISES.
By CIRO PINSUTI.
"Indispensable to all who desire to keep their voices in training by a short and judicious daily practice." Price 3s.

LES CHEVALIERS. Marche Militaire.
J. DUVAL.
Supplies the oft-repeated demand for a good stirring, bright march. Price 3s.

DON'T FORGET ME. CIRO PINSUTI.
Admitted to be the best of this composer's many compositions. Price 4s.
Each post-free at half-price in stamps.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.,
NEW BURLINGTON-STREET.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS HALF PRICE.
In consequence of a change of partnership, the whole of this splendid stock of Pianos (perfected with all the improvements of the day—viz., steel frame, overstrung, trichord throughout, check action, &c., by the long-standing firm of T. D'Almaine and Co., of 101 years' reputation) will be sold, as stated above, at half price; and, in order to effect a speedy sale, the easiest terms will be arranged. Ten years' warranty with each instrument.
Trichord Cottages from hire, or taken in exchange, £10 to £12.
Class 0, £14 | Class 2, £20 | Class 4, £26 | Class 6, £32
Class 8, £38 | Class 10, £44 | Class 12, £50 | Class 14, £56
German steel frame, overstrung, check-action Pianos also, at half price; and on easy terms. American Organs by best makers from £5. Carriage paid to any station in the United Kingdom.
THOS. D'ALMAINE and CO., 21, Finsbury-pavement, Moorgate, E.C.

PLEYEL WOLFF and CO.'S PIANOS.
Every description of these celebrated instruments for SALE or HIRE.
Sole Agency, 150, New Bond-street, W.

BRUSSELS | TRELOAR and SONS,
CARPETS, | LUDGATE-HILL.
MATS, |
FLOORCLOTH, |
LINOLEUM. | Catalogues free.

CHUBB'S SAFES for JEWELS,
DEEDS, PLATE, BULLION, &c.

CHUBB'S LOCKS and LATCHES,
GUESTS, BOXES, &c.

CHUBB'S ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS
POST-FREE.

CHUBB and SON, 128, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; and 68, St. James's-street, London.

FOR BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operation of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk.
Sold only in Packets, labelled.
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMOPATHIC CHEMISTS.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMOPATHIC CHEMISTS.

TURKEY, | TRELOAR and SONS,
PERSIAN, | LUDGATE-HILL.
INDIAN, |
MOORISH |
CARPETS. | Catalogues free.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE.
PULVERMACHER'S "GALVANISM"
NATURAL CHIEF RESTORER OF IMPAIRED VITAL ENERGY.

In this Pamphlet the most reliable proofs are given of the vast and wonderful curative powers of Pulvermacher's Patent Galvanic Chain-Bands, Belts, &c., in Rheumatic, Nervous, and Functional Disorders. Sent post-free for three shillings application to
J. L. PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT,
14, Regent-street, London, W.

HAY FEVER or SUMMER CATARRH.
The most effective remedy for this distressing affection is EPPS'S ANTHOXANTHUM administered as spray. The relief to the excruciated membrane is almost instantaneous. In bottles, 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. (by post 3s. or 5s. stamps). Labelled JAMES EPPS and CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly; and 48, Threadneedle-street.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
For CONSTIPATION, BILE, HEADACHE.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE, UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON.
2s. 6d. per Box, stamp included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.
Wholesale—E. GRILLON, 90, Queen-street, London, E.C.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST AND WHAT

IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office, Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Great engraved on seals, rings, brooches, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 20s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 engravings, 3s. 9d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for 10s. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 8d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate, Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 13s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

FOR ARMS and CREST send Name and County to T. MORING, Inns of Court Heraldic Offices, 323, High Holborn, W.C. Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; Coloured, 7s. 6d. Seals, Dies, and Diplomas. Illustrated Price-List post-free.

ARMS and CRESTS FOUND, by Mr. HODGSON, late from Herald's College. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; Coloured, 7s. Monograms, Seals, Dies, Book Marks, Postcards, Illuminated Addresses, Engraving, Visiting Cards, Stationery, &c. MATTHEWS and HODGSON, 135, Oxford-street, W. Estd. 1810. Price Medals, 1851, 1882, 1876.

LARGE COLLECTION of VALUABLE WORKS on CHESS and DRAUGHTS ON SALE, by WINTER, DUNCAN, and Co., Booksellers, Dundee. Catalogues, 16 pp., free for two stamps.

THE LADY OF THE WOODS and THE LORD OF THE GLEN. These two remarkable Engravings, together with the Original Drawings by J. MacWhirter, A.R.A., are now being EXHIBITED by Messrs. GLADWELL BROTHERS, at the City of London Fine-Art Gallery, 20 and 21, Gracechurch-street. Admission by private card.

RHODODENDRONS.—JOHN WATERER and SONS, of Bagshot, Surrey, beg to announce their EXHIBITION of the above is NOW ON VIEW Daily at the Gardens of Cadogan-place, Sloane-street.

VITREMANIE, superseding Diaphanie. An easy and inexpensive method of decorating windows in churches, public buildings, and private houses, by which may be produced the rich coloured and beautiful designs equal in appearance to real stained glass. Handbook of designs and full instructions, 1s. 6d. Boxes, containing designs, 2s. and 2s. 6d. Particulars post-free. Sole inventors, J. BARNARD and SONS, 233 (late 239), Oxford-street, London, W.

CHROMOPHOTOGRAPHY. (KRAUS'S PROCESS.) The New Art (enabling any person without previous knowledge of either Painting or Drawing) to Colour Photographs on convex glass, in imitation of China and Enamel Painting. Boxes containing every requisite, 2s. and 2s. 6d. Particulars post-free. Specimens shown on application at the Sole Agents, J. BARNARD and SONS, 233, Oxford-street, London, W.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.
1878, PARIS, GOLD MEDAL.

SPECTACLES versus BLINDNESS.

ONE FOURTH of those suffering from dimness of sight or blindness can trace their calamity to the use of common spectacles or lenses imperfectly suited to the sight. Mr. HENRY LAURANCE, F.R.S., Oculist Optician, PERSONALLY adapts his Improved Spectacles at his residence, 3, Eudeleigh-gardens, Euston-square, daily (Saturdays excepted) ten to four. Sir Julius Benedict writes:—"I have tried the principal opticians in London without success, but your Spectacles suit me admirably. The clearness of your glasses, as compared with others, is really surprising." Dr. Bird, Chelmsford, late Surgeon-Major, W.R.M.S., writes:—"I could not have believed it possible that my sight could have been so much improved and relieved at my age—eighty-two. I can now read the smallest print, although suffering from cataract on the right eye." Mr. Laurance's Pamphlet, "Spectacles, their Use and Abuse," post-free.

PRATT'S LADIES' BELTS AND ABDOMINAL SUPPORTS ARE CONFIDENTLY RECOMMENDED AS THE MOST COMFORTABLE AND EFFICIENT EVER MADE. Apply to the Ladies' Attendant, J. F. PRATT, 43 (late 420), OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific: after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unequalled as a dressing: it causes growth, arrests falling, and its use defies detection. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free.—Agents, R. HOVENDE and SONS, London.

ROBARE'S AUREOLINE, or GOLDEN HAIR WASH. For producing the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.—Agents, R. HOVENDE and SONS, London.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.—An external Cure for Skin Diseases. There is scarcely any eruption but will yield to SULPHOLINE and fade away in a few days. Ordinary pimples, redness, blotches, scurf, roughness, vanish as if by magic; while old skin disorders, that have plagued sufferers for years, however deeply rooted, Sulpholine will successfully attack them. It destroys the animalcules which cause these unsightly, irritable affections, and always produces a clear skin. Sulpholine Lotion is sold by Chemists. Bottles, 2s. 6d.

THROW PHYSIC TO THE DOGS.

A correspondent writes to ask me which I consider the best medicine for a "confirmed dyspeptic subject" to "induce in." My dear Sir, or Madam (I don't know which it is, for only initials have been used as a signature), I am not a doctor, neither do I profess to know anything at all about the British Pharmacopoeia. When advised to take this or that nostrum for any little ailment, I always quote Shakespeare, "Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it." And I would say the same to my present interlocutor. ENO'S FRUIT SALT is the only thing in the way of medicine I induce in; and though it may sound something like a puff, yet I find that it is all I require to keep me in health, provided I also regulate my diet. Paul's advice to be temperate in all things.—Temperance World, Feb. 25, 1882. "Notes on Men and Things."
CAUTION.—Legal rights are protected in every civilized country. Examine each bottle, and see the capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists. Price 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. Directions in sixteen languages how to prevent disease. Protection in every country. Prepared only at Eno's Fruit Salt Works, Hatfield, London, S.E., by J. C. Eno's Patent.

HAY FEVER CURED BY DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Snuffing-Bottle.

ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.
ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.
ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.

IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 6d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

Just published, post-free, 2 stamps,
DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A small pamphlet on these distressing complaints and their complete cures. Published by the Author, RICHARD KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon R.N., 25, Warwick-st., Rugby.

ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL,
WESTGATE-ON-SEA
(One hour and three quarters from London).
ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL
(Furnished by Messrs. Shoolbred).
FOR TARIFF APPLY TO MANAGER.
ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL has recently been built, regardless of expense, to supply the demand of the increasing number of visitors to the most rising seaside resort on the East Coast.
WESTGATE-ON-SEA
is now recognised as the most healthy seaside residence in Great Britain, and, having been laid out by eminent surveyors and architects at an enormous outlay, may now claim to be the most picturesque spot in the South of England. Visitors will find at
ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL
Magnificent Sea Views,
Splendid Apartments, and Moderate Charges.

MONACO.—The SUMMER BATHING SEASON is NOW OPEN.
The Sea Baths of Monaco are completely protected from the north winds, and the most healthful and enjoyable on the Mediterranean Coast.
The Grand Hôtel des Bains, upon the seashore, contains most comfortable and luxurious apartments for families at moderate prices.
Hot and Cold Salt and Fresh Water Baths, and Hydropathic Establishment. Tropical vegetation, alouads, yet the temperature is always tempered by the cool sea breezes.
MONACO is situated about 35 minutes from Nice, and 20 minutes from Mentone, and vies with either town for its sanitary arrangements and healthful climate.

NAPLES-BY-THE-SEA.—See Naples as it should be seen, from the Balconies of the HOTEL ROYAL DES ETRANGERS. Patronised by High Life. Always open. Views and Prices of Mr. CAPRANI, Sole Proprietor.

NAPLES.—HOTEL TRAMONTANO, on the Corso V. Emanuele. Highest and healthiest part. Magnificent view of the Bay and Islands. Desirable homely family Hotel. Kept by an English Lady.

MESSINA.—HOTEL VICTORIA. First Class house. Specially recommended for comfort and price. W. Mowler, Proprietor. TAORMINA.—Hotel Bellevue. First Class. Grandest scenery in Italy. G. KELLERMANN, Proprietor.

MILAN, Pallanza, Locarno, Bellagio, Venice.
Grand Hotel at Milan. First class Extra.
Grand Hotel at Pallanza. Best and most comfortably regulated Hotels on the Continent.
Grand Hotel at Locarno.
Grand Hotel at Bellagio.
Grand Hotel at Venice.

MALTA, Corsica, Egypt, Constantinople, Italy, Greece, and Danube, by Fraissinet and Co.'s steamers. Prospectus and tariff of Smith, Sundin, and Co., Gracechurch-street; or Fraissinet and Co., 6, Place de la Bourse, Marseilles.

TOULOUSE.—Grand Hôtel du Midi.
Patronised by the Duke of Norfolk and English nobility and gentry. First-class hotel. English nobility and visitors specially studied. E. POUQUET, Proprietor.

BIARRITZ PREFERABLE TO PAU or RIVIERA. No frost or snow, no typhoid or other fever. Pure air. Splendid sands. Sea warmed by the Gulf Stream, and no sewage discharges.

BORDEAUX.—Grand Exhibition, General Productions; Agriculture, Industry, Ancient Art; Universal Exposition of Wines, Spirits, Liqueurs, Fermented Drinks. Interesting to English Trade. Catalogues, apply to PRESIDENT.

DAX, near Pau and Biarritz; same climate.
Thermal Establishment with MUD Baths, 130 deg. Fahr. efficacious in affections, Throat, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, &c. Superior Pension.—Address, SECRETARY, DAX-Landes.

CAUTERETS.—Grand Hôtel Continental.
Most comfortable of the Pyrenean Stations. 200 Chambers. Conversation Saloons, Table-d'Hôte, Lift, Grand Theatre, Casino, Club—Same property. Madame BALLY, Proprietor.

CAUTERETS.—Grand Hôtel d'Angleterre.
300 Chambers; Lift, with every recent comfort; 100 Balconies, commanding beautiful views of the surrounding mountains, 700 ft. above sea level.—A. MAILLOX, Proprietor.

MENTON.—Royal Grocery Stores.—Thomas WILLOUGHBY, Furveyor to Queen Victoria and Royal family. The only English House and Estate Agent. Lists of Houses and Apartments on application. Established 1858.

LUCHON.—Grand Hôtel Richelieu, opposite the Thermal Establishment. Frequented by Royalty and the highest nobility and gentry. Splendid scenery. First-class arrangements. L. ESTRADE, Proprietor.

LUCHON.—Hôtel Cantou.—Excellent situation near the Thermal Establishment and Casino. Very comfortable Apartments and Chambers. Good table. Reading-Room. Arrangements made. M. CANTOU, Proprietor.

LOURDES.—Grand Hôtel de la Grotte.
First-class, recommended to families for its great comfort, careful direction, and excellent position. Fine view of the Basque. Omnibus and landaus to trains. A. ANDRÉ, Proprietor.

VICHY.—Hamam Turkish Baths. New system. Electric and Vapour Baths; Inhalation, Pulverisation, Hamam Vaporisère, approved by Academy of Medicine, Paris. Mr. FERRIS, Director, Rue Burnol, Vichy.

VICHY.—English Club, Grand Cirque.
Concerts, Balls, Reading, Drawing-rooms, Cards, Billiards. Restaurant à la Carte. Choice Wines. Telegraphic despatches, Paris, London. English rendezvous.

SLEEPING-CARS on all Continental main lines. Apply for Berths at the Agencies of the International Sleeping-Car Company, Paris, London, Berlin, Brussels, Cologne, Frankfurt, Vienna, Madrid, and Rome.

FRENCH LECTURES will be Delivered by Dr. DE PRESSE, at WILLIS'S ROOMS, King-street, St. James's, on JUNE 12, 17, and 19, at 2.30 p.m., on "L'ORIGINE DE L'HOMME, au Point de Vue des Questions Actuelles." His Grace the Duke of Argyll, his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, and his Excellency the French Ambassador will preside. Tickets, 1s. each; Reserved Seats, 2s. 6d.; for the course of three lectures, 6s. To be obtained at Austin's, St. James's Hall, Piccadilly; Hatchard's, 187, Piccadilly; Mitchell's, 38, Old Bond-street; Nisbet's, 21, Berners-street, Oxford-street; Hodder and Stoughton's, 47, Paternoster-row; Hays, 28, Old Bond-street, and 4, Royal Exchange Buildings, E.C.; and at the Office of the Society. Dr. De Presse will also give a Conference Religieuse in St. Andrew's Hall, 14, Newmarket-street, Old Bond-street, on Sunday, June 18, at 3.0 p.m. Christian Evidence Society, 13, Buckingham-street, Strand, W.C.

GERMAN FEMALE SERVANTS are arriving at HETHERINGTON'S ENGLISH and FOREIGN DOMESTIC EXCHANGE, 32, Strand, London, opposite Somerset House, in great numbers. These servants may be relied upon, as their "Dienst Büche" are examined and inquired into before a pass to England is handed to them. Numerous testimonials from the ladies who have had servants may be seen. Families residing in any part of Great Britain can be supplied.

STERLING SILVER.
THE PUBLIC SUPPLIED AT PRICES HITHERTO CHARGED THE TRADE, SAVING PURCHASERS from 25 to 50 per cent.
SILVER.
THE MANUFACTURING GOLD SMITHS' and SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,
112, REGENT-STREET, London, W.
CATALOGUES FREE.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

NEW FASHION-BOOK and PRICE-LIST
now ready. Sent free.

NEW SPRING SILKS.

PATTERNS FREE.

100 pieces of Rich Moire Française, all new Colours 7s. 11d. per yard.
100 pieces do. .. Black, from 4s. 6d.
100 pieces of the New Moire and Satin Stripes 5s. 11d.
300 pieces of Rich Brocade Satins, including every variety of Colouring, from 4s. 6d.
Coloured and Black Brocade Satins, from 2s. 11d.
200 pieces Rich Black Satin Brocade 4s. 11d.
Black Satin Duchesse, 6s. 6d., 6s. 6d., and 7s. 6d.
200 pieces Coloured Satin Duchesse 5s. 11d.
Black Satins, from 1s. 9d.

NOW READY, A MAGNIFICENT COLLECTION OF THE NEW DUCHESSE SATIN COSTUMES
at 43. 18s. 6d.

Can be had in every New Colour; also in Black; also richly trimmed with Moire and Brocade, 5s. guineas. Fashion-shoots and patterns free.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

SPRING and SUMMER DRESSES.

PATTERNS FREE.

Angola Cashmere, per yard, 1s. to 1s. 9d.
Vigogne Cashmere, 1s. 6d.
Angola Beige, 1s. to 1s. 2d.
Cachemire de la Reine, 4s. 11d. wide, 5s. 6d.
Satin Cashmere, 1s. 6d.
Nuns' cloth (very fashionable), 1s. 4d.
The above in all the New Shades.

Cashmere Merino, all shades, 4s. to 4s. 11d. wide, per yard, 1s. 11 to 2s. 9d.
Cachemire de la Reine, 4s. 11d. to 5s. 6d.
Cachemire de la Reine, 4s. 11d. to 5s. 6d.
Estamene Serges, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d.
Bective Serges, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d.
Printed Satines, choice designs, per yard, 9d. to 1s. 9d.
Plain Satins, new shades, 9d. to 1s. 2d.
New Striped Skirtings, 1s. to 2s. 9d.
Velvet-Finished Velveteens, all new shades, including Pale Blue, Pale Green, White, Cream, Old Gold, Pink, 2s. 9d. to 3s. 9d.
Black ditto, 1s. 11d. to 5s. 6d.

NEW COSTUMES.

Costumes, with material for bodices, with pretty pouffings and guingues, 21s.
Stylish costumes, trimmed with Satin or the New Striped Silk, with material for bodices, 21 guineas.
The NOVELTY of the SEASON—Costumes trimmed with the New Embroidery, in all leading shades, with material for bodices, 3 guineas.
Costumes of the New Satin Cashmere and Nuns' Cloth, in all New Shades, with ample material for bodices, 30s. 6d.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

FURTHER EXTENSION of PREMISES.

SILKS, DRESSES, MANTLES, COSTUMES, DRESSING, HOSIERY, GLOVES, LACE, RIBBONS, &c.
In consequence of considerable additions to my premises, including a portion of the BOYS' CLOTHING DEPARTMENT is removed to 5 and 7, Great Portland-street (in communication with my other premises), during the alterations, which, when completed, will comprehend additional premises in the rear of my Oxford-street establishment, extending from Regent-street into Great Portland-street.

THE LONDON CRYSTAL PALACE

The progress of the work in the newly-added premises will not in any way interfere with the arrangements for the SPRING and SUMMER SEASON, for which preparations on an unprecedented scale have been made, which it is confidently hoped will be found adequate to the requirements of every Customer.
The MOURNING BUSINESS is carried on at 256, 258, 260, 262, Regent-street.

PETER ROBINSON,
216, 218, 220, 222, 224, OXFORD-STREET.
1, 3, 5, 7, GREAT PORTLAND-STREET.
278, REGENT-STREET.

THE LOUIS VELVETEEN.

The best make of the season.
JONES BROS., 38 to 39, Holloway-road, N., supply all qualities, Black and Colours, of this celebrated Velveteen at cheapest possible rates.
Patterns post-free.
The wear of every yard guaranteed.

CHAPMAN'S, NOTTING-HILL, W., SILK MERCHANT.

SILKS.—GOOD SOFT GROS GRAIN,
12 yards, 30s.

SILKS.—RICH CORDED, 12 yards, 47s.

A GOOD BLACK SATIN DRESS of 12 yards, 24 in. wide, 41 10s.

A RICH BLACK LYONS SATIN DRESS of 12 yards, 24 in. wide, all pure Silk, for 42.

RHAMPOOR LLAMA, 1s. 11d., Thirty Artistic shades.

CHAPMAN'S ANGLO-INDIAN SPECIALTY.

22s. 6d. the Dress of 8 yards, 44 in. wide.

CHAMELEON CLOTH, One Shilling per yard.

SPECIAL LOUIS VELVETEEN,
In Black and all Colours, from 1s. 9d. to 5s. 6d. per yard.

Patterns free.

CHAPMAN'S, NOTTING-HILL, W.

CHAPMAN, NOTTING-HILL, W.,
supplies all qualities of the

LOUIS VELVETEEN,
in Blacks and all Colours, at specially cheap prices.
The wear of every yard guaranteed.

ÆGIDIUS.—The only substitute for the old-fashioned and ever-shrinking flannel over-shirt, perfectly elastic, shrinkless, and durable. Three for 3s. 6d. Self-measure and Patterns free.—B. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, E.C.

JAY'S.—MOURNING.

MESSRS. JAY'S experienced Assistants travel to any part of the Kingdom, free of expense to purchasers. They take with them Dresses and Millinery, besides patterns of Materials, all marked in plain figures, and at the same price as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street. Funerals, at stated charges, conducted in London or Country.

PLAIN BLACK SILKS.

MESSRS. JAY have purchased a large quantity of the very best Grosgrain Poult de Sole, Satin Surah, Satin Duchesse, Rhodames, Mervellieux, and Damask SILKS that are manufactured in Lyons. All these SILKS have been selected with special regard to brilliancy of shade, durability, and freedom from defect in composition.

The prices are most reasonable.
COSTUMES trimmed with Jet, Lace, Crape, and every other Fashionable Ornamentation, and in all the latest Modes of Paris, are made up from these SILKS at JAY'S.
243, 245, 247, 249, 251, and 253, REGENT-STREET, W.

PETER ROBINSON'S
COURT and GENERAL MOURNING
WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET.

ON RECEIPT of LETTER or TELEGRAM.

MOURNING GOODS will be forwarded to all parts of England, on application (no matter the distance), with an excellent fitting dressmaker (if required), without extra charge.

PETER ROBINSON, 256, 258, 260, 262, Regent-street, London.

INEXPENSIVE MOURNING, as well as the Richest Qualities, can be supplied by

PETER ROBINSON
upon the most advantageous terms to Families.

THE COURT and FAMILY MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
256, 258, 260, 262, Regent-street, London.

850 PIECES of Rich Quality PLAIN

BLACK SILK at 2s. 11d., 3s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d.

RICK PEKIN MOIRE, 2s. 11d., 3s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d.

RICH BLACK SATIN (all SILK), 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 3d.

BLACK BROCADE VELVETS, 4s. 6d., 5s. 11d., 7s. 11d., 8s. 6d.

EVENING and DINNER DRESSES.

A VERY NEW and CHOICE COLLECTION.

BRUSSELS NET, handsomely trimmed, from 20s. 6d.

TARLATANS, from 18s. 6d.

BLACK SPANISH LACE, also in Cream White, from 2s. 6d.

FOR YOUNG LADIES, NUNS' CLOTH, in Cream White, trimmed Lace, 3s. 6d. Skirtes free.

PETER ROBINSON,
256 to 262, REGENT-STREET, LONDON.

CHARLES MEEKING and CO.,
Holborn,

supply all qualities of the celebrated "LOUIS VELVETEEN."

In Black and all Colours, at most moderate prices.

Patterns post-free.

The wear of every yard guaranteed.

D. NICHOLSON and CO.,
50, 51, 52, and 53, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD, LONDON.

CHOICE NEW SUMMER GOODS.

French Cashmeres, French Satens, French Belges, French Cambrics, New Serges, New Galates, Cashmerettes, Oatmeal Cloth, Velour Cloths, Zephyr Cloth, Cashmere Serges, Plain and Pompadour, Batistette Cloths, Satens.

Patterns free.

ILLUSTRATIONS of the NEWEST COSTUMES and MANTLES.—Post-free.

DRESS LENGTHS.

Good soft Lyons Gros Grains, 16 yards for 45s. 6d.

Rich quality ditto, 16 yards for 45s. 6d.

Extra rich, 16 yards for 65s. 6d.

Nicholson's Celebrated Make, very rich cord, 10 yards for 75s. 6d.

Good Black Satins, 14 yards for 6 Guineas.

Ditto, rich quality, 14 yards for 42s. 6d.

Ditto, extra rich, 14 yards for 55s. 6d.

Very rich quality, 14 yards for 84s. 6d.

Patterns free.

D. NICHOLSON and CO.,
50, 51, 52, and 53, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD, LONDON.

LOUIS VELVETEEN.

Black and all Colours.

Patterns Post-free.

GOODE, GAINSFORD and CO.,
161 to 167, High-street, Borough, S.E.

The wear of every yard guaranteed.

HENRY GLAVE'S
ENGLISH and FOREIGN

FANCY SILKS and DRESSES.

Black Brocade Silks .. 2s. 11d., 4s. 11d. yard.

Black Mantle Brocades .. 5s. 11d., 6s. 11d. yard.

Black Moire Silks .. 3s. 11d., 4s. 11d. yard.

Coloured Moire Silks .. 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d. yard.

Duchesse Satins .. 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d. yard.

Chintz Brocade Silks .. 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d. yard.

Bradford Belges .. 6s. 6d., 6s. 10d. yard.

Cachemire Poulx .. 1s. 9d., 1s. 4d. yard.

Nuns' Veil Cloth .. 1s. 9d., 1s. 4d. yard.

Cashmere Merino .. 1s. 9d., 1s. 4d. yard.

Mourning Goods of every description.

Patterns post-free.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Our New Spring and Summer Fashion Book is now ready.

Sent post-free for one stamp.

HENRY GLAVE,
80, 82, 84, 86, 88, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

THE LOUIS VELVETEEN.

For every purpose the best manufactured.

The wear of every yard guaranteed.

The genuine bears the name "LOUIS" on every yard.

Patterns post-free.

HENRY GLAVE,
80, 82, 84, 86, 88, New Oxford-street.

CHOCOLAT MENIER

Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in 1/2 lb. and 1/4 lb. PACKETS.

For BREAKFAST and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-Eight

PRIZE MEDALS. Consumption annually exceeds 25,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Paris, London, New York.

Sold Everywhere.

Gold Medal, Paris, 1878. First Award and Medal, Sydney, 1880; Melbourne, 1881.

FRY'S FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.

"A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

PURE COCOA ONLY.

FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT.

"Strictly pure."—W. W. STODDART, F.I.C., F.C.S., City Analyst, Bristol.

FIFTEEN PRIZE MEDALS.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA.

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.

Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted.

Four times the strength of Cocoa thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c.

The faculty pronounces it the most nutritious, perfectly digestible Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER."

Keeps in all climates. Requires no cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast Cup costing less than a halfpenny. Samples gratis.

In Air-Tight Tins at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, London, W.C.

HORNIMAN'S TEA for Forty Years has commanded a large sale, because it can always be relied on for strength, flavour, and cheapness. It is the best tea imported. Sold only in packets.

TO MAKE a JELLY or BLANC-MANGE,

Buy a Sixpenny Packet of CANNON'S GELATIN POWDER. This preparation is simple in its use and perfectly pure. Directions included in each packet. Sold by all Grocers and Oilmen.—B. CANNON and Co., Manufacturers, Lincoln, England.

GENUINE DUBLIN WHISKY.

THE MOST WHOLESOME OF ALL SPIRITS.

DUBLIN WHISKY, Distilled by Messrs.

JOHN JAMESON and SON, WILLIAM JAMESON and CO., GEORGE ROE and CO., and JOHN POWER and SON, can be obtained in Wood by wholesale merchants and dealers, direct from their respective distilleries.

INGHAM'S MARSALA WINES maintain their unrivalled and world-famed reputation for extreme purity and delicacy, and are recommended by the Faculty.

Ask for "Ingham's Marsala." Of all Wine Merchants.

L. TAMPPIER and CO.

World-famed Châtrés, BOURGEOIS.

London: 97, Jermyn-street

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW DANCE

MUSIC.
 Gee Up! Polka .. D'Albert.
 Waldeck Waltz .. D'Albert.
 Nearest and Dearest Waltz .. D'Albert.
 Patience Waltz and Quadrille .. D'Albert.
 Patience Lancers and Polka .. D'Albert.
 Olivette Waltz and Quadrille .. D'Albert.
 Olivette Lancers and Polka .. D'Albert.
 Drink, Paddy, Drink, Polka .. D'Albert.
 Visions of Amour Valse .. G. and A. Delbrück.
 Loyauté Waltz .. Luke Wheeler.
 (Dedicated by permission to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.)
 Played at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
 Grenade Waltz .. Mrs. Smith Bridges.
 Venetia Waltz .. Caroline Lowthian.
 Je T'Aime Valse .. Waldteufel.
 Played at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
 Mother Hubbard Polka .. Caroline Lowthian.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW SONGS.

An Old-Fashioned Garden .. Lady Benedict.
 Thine Alone .. A. H. Behrend.
 'Tis for the Best .. Madame Sainton-Dolby.
 Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd.
 AEI (Evermore) .. A. H. Behrend.
 In the twilight of our love .. A. Sullivan.
 (Drawing-room version of "Silver is the raven hair," from "Patience.")
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW PIANOFORTE

PIECES.
 Viscount Dupplin .. Three Album Leaves.
 Janotha .. Moment Musical.
 Janotha .. Valse Brillante.
 Janotha .. Gavotte.
 Viscount Dupplin .. Gavotte, Solo or Duet.
 Jules de Sival .. Handelian Dance.
 G. J. Hubert .. Odeon.
 G. F. Kendall .. Margery, Old English Dance.
 G. F. Kendall .. Phyllis, Old English Dance.
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

PATIENCE. An Aesthetic Opera. By

W. S. GILBERT and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed at the Savoy Theatre with enormous success.
 Libretto .. 1s.
 Vocal Score .. 2s.
 Piano-forte Solo .. 2s.
 All the following sent post-free for half price.

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
 Boyton Smith's Fantasia .. 4 0
 Dido, Duet .. 4 0
 Kith's Fantasia .. 4 0
 Smallwood's Easy Fantasia, 1, 2, 3 .. each 3 0
 Fred. Godfrey's Grand Selection. (As played by all the Military Bands) .. 4 0
 Dido, as a Duet .. 4 0
 CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

MRS. L. MONCRIEFF'S NEW SONGS.

"T'WAS ONLY A YEAR AGO, LOVE."
 A CHORUS OF LOVE SONGS.
 THOUGHTS AT SUNRISE.
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street, W.; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS'

SYSTEM OF HIRE OF PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, AND AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the instrument becomes the property of the HIRER at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2s. Harmoniums, from 1s. 6d.; and American Organs, from 1s. 10d. a Quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from

30 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S YACHT PIANINOS,

with folding keyboards, from 30 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IRON-FRAMED

COTTAGE PIANOFORTES for Ocean Steamers and Extreme Climats, from 35 to 45 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S Early English

PIANOFORTES, artistically designed Ebonyed Cases, from 45 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S Iron Double

Overstrung PIANOFORTES. Check Actions, &c., from 60 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from

120 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE

HARMONIUMS, for Church, Schools, or Drawing-Rooms, from 6 to 150 guineas; or, on the "Three-Years' System, from 15s. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED

AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. A large variety on view from 15 to 250 guineas. Price-List on application to CHAPPELL and CO.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PET ORGAN,

Seven Stops, including Sub-bass and Octave Coupler. Elegant Carved Walnut Case. 15 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite

ORGAN. Five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two knee swell, elegant carved Canadian walnut case, price 25 guineas. With thirteen stops, octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 30 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S NEW STYLE

VICTORIA CASE. Twelve stops, five sets of reeds, sub-bass and Octave Coupler. 37 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S CENTENNIAL

GRAND ORGAN, 15 Stops, 9 Sets of Reeds, and Combination Tubes, 85 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PIPE and REED

ORGAN, Style 115. Organ Pipe Front, handsomely diapered, seventeen stops, thirteen sets of reeds, 135 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S GRAND

ORGAN MODEL. Two claviers, two and a half octave of pedals, twenty-three stops, seventeen sets of reeds, elegant diapered pipes, solid walnut case. 225 guineas. The most perfect American organ manufactured. Illustrated List free.

INSTRUMENTS by ALL MAKERS may be

HIRE or PURCHASED on the "Three-Years' System." CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS

FOR CASH.
 CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

B. WILLIAMS'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PRINCESS HELEN OF WALDECK
 PYRMONT. Suite de Valses. Par GEORGES LAMOTHE. 2s. net.

AUF IMMER (For Ever). Walzer. By OSCAR SEYDEL. The favour with which this waltz has been already received bids fair to outstrip the celebrated "Weit von Dir" in popularity. 2s. net.

THE OLD and the YOUNG MARIE.
 By Weatherly and COWEN. Sung by Miss Clara Samuel. 2s. net.

LOVE ABIDES. By Weatherly and ROBEKEL. 2s. net.

THRO' THE GOLDEN GATE. Words by Frederick Wood; Music by GEORGE FOX. Sung by Miss Emilie Lloyd. 2s. net.

London: B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row.

NEW MUSIC.

BOCCACCIO.—The universally popular

Opera by VON SUPPÉ. The only complete authentic edition, as performed at the Comedy Theatre. Vocal Score, with English Words, by Farnie and Recco. Price 6s. net.

BOCCACCIO for Pianoforte. Complete, 2s.

BOCCACCIO and MASCOTTE ALBUM.

Containing "Boccaccio" Quadrille, Waltz, Galop, March, and Polka; and "Mascotte" Quadrille and Waltz. Complete (32 pages), price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.

BOCCACCIO QUADRILLE. Coote. 2s.

BOCCACCIO POLKA. Van Biene. 2s.

BOCCACCIO VALSE. Van Biene. 2s.

BOCCACCIO MARCH. Von Suppé. 2s.

BOCCACCIO.—Popular Songs, &c. 2s. each

FORGET NOT TO FORGET. SUNLIGHT IS BEAMING.
 FLIRTATION. Vocal Waltz. (Drawing-room words).
 COOPER'S SONG. O MOUNTAINS BLUE. Tyroler Duet.
 OBERY, TWOERY.
 YOKEL'S SONG.
 Boosey and Co., 205, Regent-street.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS' LIST OF NEW

AND POPULAR MUSIC.

BILLEE TAYLOR. COMIC OPERA.

STEPHENS and SOLOMON.
 Vocal Score, 6s. net; Piano Score, 2s. 6d. net.

VOCAL.

The Self-Made Knight. All on Account of Eliza.
 The Virtuous Gardener. Charity Girls' Chorus. 8d.

PIANO PIECES.

Quadrilles by Coote. Valse by Chas. Godfrey.
 Lancers by Grenville. Phoebe Polka by Grenville.
 Selection of Airs. Godfrey. Fantasia by Ch. Tourville.
 Price 2s. net each.

CLAUDE DUVAL. Comic Opera.

STEPHENS and SOLOMON.
 Quadrilles by Coote. 4s. Valse by Tourville. 3s.
 Polka by Grenville. 2s. Coranto by Tourville. 3s.
 Vocal Score. 6s. net.

LORD BATEMAN. Comic Opera.

STEPHENS and SOLOMON. In the Press.

NEW SONGS by FREDERIC H. COWEN.

The night has a thousand eyes.
 Rondel (Kiss me, Sweetheart, the Spring is here).
 If thou wilt remember. I think of all thou art to me.
 Good Night.
 In Keys to suit all voices. Price 2s. net each.

NEW SONGS by FLORIAN PASCAL.

MORE THAN ALL, in D, for Soprano or Baritone.
 THE CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER, in A minor, for Baritone.
 MAY MOON, in B flat, for Soprano or M.-B.
 Price 2s. net each.

By J. L. HATTON.

STARS. For Contralto or Baritone. Price 2s. net.

ARTHUR GRENVILLE. NEW DANCE

MUSIC.
 Secret of Love Valses. 2s. net; Suzanne Valses. 2s. net.
 Babble Lancers. 2s. net; Babble Galop. 1s. 6d. net.

WESTMINSTER BELLS. Piano.

TOURVILLE. A charming reverie, in which the well-known chiming of "Big Ben" are cleverly reproduced. Price 1s. 6d. net.

PHILLIS. Gavotte-Pastorale. Piano.

TOURVILLE. Founded on an old English ballad. Quaint and effective. Price 1s. 6d. net.

SÉRÉNADÉ HONGROISE. By V.

JONCIERES. A great favourite at all Parisian Concerts. Piano Solo. 1s. 6d. net. Piano duet, 2s. net. Violin and Piano, 2s. net.

LOVE'S SECRET. Song. Sung by Mrs.

Lantry at Theatre Royal, Haymarket, in "Our."
 Price 2s. net.

ENTRACTE SEVILLANA.

J. MASSENET. Piano Solo. Price 1s. 6d. net.
 London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
 24, Berners-street, W.; and 125, Chesapeake, E.C.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for JUNE

contains: Wagner's "Parsifal"—The Mendelssohn Family—The Great Composers: Chopin—Musical Activity of the Year—The Nibelung's Ring—25 Bar Majesty's Theatre. German Opera at Drury Lane, Sacred Harmonic Society, Crystal Palace, Richter Concerts, Symphony Concerts, &c.—Music in Birmingham, Bristol, Manchester, and Yorkshire—Occasional Notes, Correspondence, Foreign and Country News, Reviews, &c. Price 3d.; post-free, 4d. Annual Subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for JUNE contains: An Analysis of Wagner's Festival Drama, "Parsifal," by F. Corder.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for JUNE contains: "The Radiant Moon hath passed away." Anthem. By the Rev. H. H. WOODWARD. Price, separately, 1d.

 London: NOVELLO, EWER, and CO., 1, Berners-street, W.; and 80 and 81, Queen-street, E.C.

NEW DANCE MUSIC, performed at Her

Majesty's State Ball, Buckingham Palace, May 17, by Coote and Tinsley's Band.
 Valse .. La Source .. Waldteufel.
 Valse .. La Barcarolle .. Waldteufel.
 Valse .. Naples .. Waldteufel.
 Polka .. L'Esprit Français .. Waldteufel.
 Polka .. The Flower Show .. Coote.
 Polka .. Rousset's Air .. Coote.
 Valse .. Vom Rhein zur Donau .. Kéler Béla.
 Valse .. The Colonel .. Buczowski.
 Lancers .. Aboulin .. Lutz.
 Post-free 24 stamps fresh.
 Horwood and Crew, 42, New Bond-street, W.

GRANDS and SEMI-GRANDS

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and CRAMER, EBARD,

on Cramer's Three-Years System (originated by them), from 23s. per quarter; the easiest and most satisfactory mode of acquiring a thoroughly reliable instrument of the highest quality as regards both tone and construction. Any instrument may be exchanged within three months without loss. The hiring may be discontinued, or an exchange made on special terms, at any time during the currency of the agreement. Pianofortes tuned by the year in town or country. Regent-street, W.; Moorgate-street, E.C.

95, NEW BOND-STREET.

J. and J. HOPKINSON beg to announce that they have opened the above extensive premises with an entirely new stock of their celebrated Grand and Cottage Pianofortes.
 For Sale, Hire, or on the "Three-Years' System." Illustrated Lists, with original designs in the Chippendale, Queen Anne, Early English, and other styles on application to 95, New Bond-street, London, W.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'

SOSTENENTE PIANOS gained the Highest Distinctions, Legion of Honour, and Gold Medals at the principal Exhibitions. Illustrated Lists free.—18, 20, and 22, Wigmore-st., W.; and the Brinsmead Pianoforte Works, Kentish Town, N.W.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 21 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Poultry-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

MAPLE and CO.,

TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD, LONDON.

UPHOLSTERERS by Appointment to

HER MAJESTY.

THE LARGEST FURNISHING

ESTABLISHMENT IN THE WORLD.

DECORATIONS.

ARTISTIC DECORATIONS.

ARTISTIC PAPERHANGINGS.

NEW DESIGNS for this SEASON.

LINCUSTA-WALTON,

THE NEW MATERIAL for WALLS.

DECORATIONS, Artistic Wall Papers.

Messrs. MAPLE and Co. undertake every description of ARTISTIC HOUSE DECORATION, including gasolining, repainting, papering, &c. The head of this department is a thoroughly qualified architect, assisted by a large staff of artists and skilled workmen. Coloured Drawings and Estimates furnished.—145, 146, 147, 148, 149, Tottenham-court-road; 1 to 15, Tottenham-place, London.

MAPLE and CO., Manufacturers of BED-ROOM SUITES by MACHINERY.

500 BED-ROOM SUITES, from 4 guineas to 200 guineas.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Pine, 5½ guineas.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Ash, plate-glass door to Wardrobe, Washstand fitted with Minton's Tiles, £10 10s.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Walnut,

plate-glass door to Wardrobe, Washstand fitted with Minton's Tiles, £11 10s.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Walnut,

plate-glass door to Wardrobe, Washstand fitted with Minton's Tiles, and Chest of Drawers, £15 10s.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Ash or

Walnut, with large plate-glass to Wardrobe, Washstand fitted with Minton's Tiles, £18 10s.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Walnut, beautifully inlaid, 20 guineas.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Ash, with

6-ft. Wardrobe, complete, £22 10s.

BED-ROOM SUITES, pure Chippendale, in design, and solid rosewood, walnut, or dark mahogany, large Wardrobes (two wings for hanging), with raised centre; Duchesse Toilet-Table fitted with jewel-drawers, Washstand with Minton's Tiles, pedestal cupboard, towel-horn, and three chairs. These Suites are very richly carved out of the solid wood, with bevel plates. 35 to 50 guineas.

BED-ROOM SUITES.—Chippendale,

Adams, Louis XVI., and Sheraton designs; large Wardrobes, very handsome, in rosewood, richly inlaid; also Salinwood inlaid with different woods. 35 to 200 guineas.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE free. The largest Furnishing Establishment in the World.

MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road.

THE LARGEST ASSORTMENT of

BEDSTEADS.

Brass.

BEDSTEADS.

Iron.

BEDSTEADS.

Wood.

TEN THOUSAND BEDSTEADS in Stock to select from.

MAPLE and CO.—Bedsteads in Wood,

Iron, and Brass, fitted with furniture and bedding complete. The bedsteads are fitted in stock, ready for choice. Over 10,000 iron and brass bedsteads now in stock to select from. From 8s. 9d. to 30 guineas each. Very strong, useful brass bedsteads, 6 guineas. Bedding of every description manufactured on the premises, and all warranted pure. The trade supplied.

MAPLE and CO. BEDDING.

MAPLE and CO. Spring Mattresses.

SPRING MATTRESSES.—The Patent

Wire-woven Spring Mattress.—We have made such advantageous arrangements that we are enabled to forward the above much-admired Spring Mattresses at the following low prices:—
 3ft. 3ft. 6in. 4ft. 4ft. 6in. 5ft.
 21s. 25s. 28s. 30s. 35s.

MAPLE and CO., IMPORTERS of

TURKEY CARPETS.

TURKEY CARPETS, as made in the Seventeenth Century.

TURKEY CARPETS.

TURKEY CARPETS. 3000 to Select from.

THE LARGEST ASSORTMENT of

INDIAN, PERSIAN, and TURKEY CARPETS always in stock. Superior qualities. Purchasers must beware of inferior Turkey Carpets, which are now being manufactured and sold as best quality at so much per square yard.—MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road.

MAPLE and CO. have correspondents and buyers in India and Persia (who act solely for them) from whom they receive direct consignments of superior and first-class CARPETS of guaranteed qualities. Purchasers are cautioned against large quantities which are coming forward of inferior quality, these having been made to suit the demand for cheap foreign carpets, especially Turkey. The trade supplied.

THE LARGEST STOCK of

ORIENTAL CARPETS in EUROPE.

Antique Persian Rugs.—5000 of these in stock, some being really wonderfully curious, well worth the attention of art-collectors, especially when it is considered what great value is attached to these artistic rarities, and which are sold at commercial prices.

A PERSIAN CARPET for Thirty Shillings, measuring about 10 feet long by 5 feet wide. 3000 to select from. The goods are regularly imported by MAPLE and CO., and are very durable, being the best of this make.—145 to 149, Tottenham-court-road, London.

FIFTY MILES of

BEST BRUSSELS

CARPETS at 3s. 9d. per yard.

THESE GOODS, by some of the first

Manufacturers, are of superior quality, the designs and colourings new and artistic. They are 1s. per yard under the usual price asked at the West-End for the same quality.

POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT.

Messrs. MAPLE and CO. beg respectfully to state that this department is now so organized that they are fully prepared to execute and supply any article that can possibly be required in furnishing at the same price, if not less than any other house in England. Patterns sent and quotations given free of charge.

ORDERS for EXPORTATION to any part of the World packed carefully on the premises, and forwarded on receipt of a remittance or London remittance.

MAPLE and CO., LONDON.

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL SUNDAY

FUND. Patron—Her Majesty the Queen. HOSPITAL SUNDAY, JUNE 11, 1882. Cheques crossed Bank of England, and Post-Office Orders payable to the Secretary, Mr. HENRY N. CUSTANCE, should be sent to the Mansion House.

THE OPENING of the NEW EXTENSION

BUILDING of the HOSPITAL for CONSUMPTION and DISEASES of the CHEST, by the Right Hon. the EARL of DUNDEE, President of the Corporation, will take place on TUESDAY, JUNE 13, at Three o'clock p.m. The maintenance of the Extension, containing 137 ADDITIONAL BEDS, in a separate building, will ADD SEVERAL THOUSANDS to the Hospital accommodation, which must be ENTIRELY PROVIDED by public benevolence. The Committee will thankfully receive the names of donors and subscribers to the special list of contributions in connection with the opening. New Annual Subscriptions are earnestly solicited. PHILIP ROSE, Hon. Sec. HENRY DUBOIS, Sec.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND

(Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 29, 1861.) Bankers to the New Zealand Government. Capital subscribed and paid up, £1,000,000. Reserve Fund, £250,000. Head Office—Auckland.

BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.

In Australia—Melbourne, Sydney, and Newcastle. In Fiji—Lekuka, Suva. In New Zealand—Auckland, Blenheim, Christchurch, Dunedin, Inver

THE ROYAL VISIT TO LEICESTER: THE PRINCESS OF WALES PLANTING AN OAK IN THE ABBEY PARK.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT YARMOUTH.

The sojourn of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at Great Yarmouth, where he was accommodated in the seaside mansion called Shadingfield Lodge, ended last week on the Friday afternoon, when he returned to London, having been at Yarmouth from the Tuesday evening. It was on the Wednesday that he performed the ceremony of opening the New Municipal Buildings, an illustration of which handsome edifice, with a series of Sketches of the town and neighbourhood, appeared in our last publication. The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of London, and the Mayors of several boroughs, were present to do honour to this occasion, which now supplies our Journal with the subjects of several additional Illustrations, occupying two pages of the Supplement for the present week. His Royal Highness, who was accompanied by Lord Suffield, the Hon. T. Wilson, and others, went about to look at the singular features of that district, the Denes of the seashore, the river Yare and its inland tidal basin, Breydon Water, the Bure, and Gorleston, which were described by us before. He also reviewed the Norfolk Artillery Volunteers, and saw their gunnery practice and the erection of a battery, which will be observed among the Sketches of our Special Artist.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO LEICESTER.

We have already described the festive proceedings at Leicester on Monday week, the day when their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales visited that town and opened the new Abbey Park. Our series of Illustrations, now completed, includes that of the Princess, assisted by his Royal Highness, planting a young oak-tree in the Park, and using a silver spade, presented to her Royal Highness by the Mayoress of Leicester, to cast some earth around the roots of the sapling. The procession through the streets of the town, the triumphal arches, the assemblage of 6000 school-children singing loyal and national hymns in the Market-place, the pavilion fitted up in the Park for the accommodation of those Royal visitors, and the luncheon, under a large marquee, where they were entertained, with the Lord Chancellor and Lady Selborne, the Bishop of Peterborough, and other distinguished guests, by his Worship the Mayor of Leicester (Alderman Chambers) have been mentioned in a former account of this well-managed and successful affair. There was but one incident of a slightly disagreeable character; a tipsy fellow thrust himself close up to the carriage of their Royal Highnesses, and insisted upon asking the Princess to shake hands with him. He was instantly hustled away, and consigned to the police, who next day brought him before the Mayor and magistrates; they inflicted a sentence of twenty-one days' imprisonment. But when the Prince and Princess read of this in the daily newspaper, they graciously telegraphed to the Mayor of Leicester, begging that the foolish man should be forgiven; and he was accordingly released.

GARIBALDI.

The man of our age who represented the antique ideal type of heroism, who personified the faith and courage of a nation in arms for its rightful liberty, has ceased to live in his worn-out mortal body; Giuseppe Garibaldi died at Caprera on the Friday evening of last week.

Italy, the land of romance, of grace, of genius displayed since the Middle Ages in the richest variety of mental achievements, in her early civilisation, her old civic and republican freedom, her commanding ecclesiastical system, her industrial, maritime, and commercial success, her countless and priceless works of Art, her vivid and adventurous History, her passionate or sportive but ever musical Poetry, that of a language in which every word is Music—Italy had fallen, three and a half centuries since, into a political servitude that well-nigh quenched the spirit of patriotism for ever. The Spaniard, the Austrian, the Frenchman were in turns her master; the last surviving Italian Republics, Genoa and Venice, were crushed in the wars of the First Napoleon; and the reconstruction of Europe, after his overthrow, left the several petty Italian States, Naples, Sardinia, Tuscany, the Lombard Duchies, and the Papal dominion, mere dependents upon the Austrian Empire. Their Princes, one and all, had sold the nation's rights and hopes for a base consideration of dynastic security, content to reign by the support of foreign armies, and to serve the general interest of Continental despotism by crushing every popular movement towards a national and liberal policy. They were truly noble men who strove, from 1820 to 1860, against the combined forces of the great European Monarchies, with their servile instruments, the little Italian Principalities, and the ubiquitous influence of the Church and Court of Rome, to vindicate the Unity and Independence of Italy. There were true heroes among them, worthy to have lived in the classic ages of Greek patriotism and heroism, or of Republican Rome; and martyrs of a true political religion, who died in the faith, who died for the faith that was in them, as truly as ever the martyrs of Christianity sacrificed their lives to the faith of the Cross. It is one of the sublimest chapters of modern history, the record of Italian political biography during those forty years of arduous and perilous struggles, of repeated failures and defeats, of personal sufferings meekly and bravely endured by scores of utterly disinterested men, who for the love of their native country willingly risked and lost their private fortunes, their homes and families, all that they had in the world, sometimes languishing in prison through many years of youth and manhood, sometimes dying on the scaffold, or in the field of desperate fight, sometimes escaping to a long and dreary exile, in Paris or in London, where they never ceased to labour and to pray for the cause of Italian freedom.

There is no space here for the briefest mention of those events, the Neapolitan, Sicilian, and Piedmontese movements of 1820 and 1821, those of Lombardy and Romagna in 1844, the Reforms announced by Pius IX. in 1847, the insurrections of Milan and Venice against the Austrian dominion in 1848, those of the Two Sicilies and of Central Italy, and the advance of Piedmont, under King Charles Albert, taking up the military championship of Italy, with very bad success. The disaster of Novara was followed, in 1849, by the gallant but unavailing defence of Rome, headed by Garibaldi, who had already performed brilliant feats of guerrilla soldiering. He was born on July 22, 1807, at Nice, then part of the Kingdom of Sardinia, but he was of a Genoese family, from Chiavari. He had been a common sailor, had taken part in one of Mazzini's plots to seize a frigate and a fort in the harbour of Genoa, and had fled to South America, where he fought among the volunteers of Rio Grande and Monte Video, in their conflicts with the more powerful of the neighbouring States. In the Italian Revolutionary War of 1848 and 1849, Garibaldi was again the associate of Mazzini; for little trust could then be put in the fidelity of the Sardinian Monarchy to the liberal and national cause. The capture of Rome by the French army, and the restoration of the Papal Government, with the Austrian reconquest of Venice, put a stop to the hopes of Italy for ten years to come. Garibaldi went to the United States, and lived at New York till 1855, in business as a tallow-chandler. He had lost his first wife, a Spanish American, named Anita, who died from the fatigues of the Italian Campaign.

But, in the ten years preceding the great Italian War of 1859, Piedmont, the Italian part of the Sardinian Kingdom, made rapid progress towards political competency under the enlightened Government of Cavour and the gallant reign of Victor Emmanuel, for the leadership of the whole nation. Count Cavour was a Bismarck in ability and fortunate audacity, in knowledge of mankind and resolute fidelity to the service of his country, while he had more generosity than Bismarck, more confidence in the popular spirit, and a higher appreciation of moral and political justice. He worked on, to the admiration of Europe, in the task of internal reforms, passing the most liberal measures, improving the financial, social, and administrative conditions of Piedmont, reorganising its military forces, cultivating an intimate alliance with France and England, sending the Sardinian army to fight in the Crimea, and welcoming, in the Parliament at Turin and in the Sardinian public service, many of the ablest men from other States of Italy, with a view to the coming national emancipation. In 1859, all was ready, and the French Emperor, Napoleon III., had been persuaded, by mixed motives of vainglory, of ambition, and of sentimental interest in the Italian cause, to lend his great military power to the expulsion of Austria from Lombardy. While the allied French and Italian forces advanced to the victories of Magenta and Solferino, Garibaldi, with an active band of volunteers, seized the passes of the Italian Alps above the Lago Maggiore, Como, Bergamo, and Brescia, co-operating to good purpose with the general movement of the campaign. The Emperor, however, did not intend, or was perhaps afraid, to attempt more than the liberation of Milan; he stopped short after the battle of Solferino, leaving the fortresses of the Quadrilateral intact. By the Peace of Villafranca and Treaty of Zurich, the Kingdom of Victor Emmanuel was augmented in Italy, while parting, on the other hand, with Savoy and Nice, which were annexed to France. The Central Italian States, Tuscany, Parma, Modena, and Romagna, instantly rose and cast off their Grand Dukes, their Bourbon Duchies, and the Papal Governors, voting for annexation to Piedmont, which became, in substance though not in style, a new Kingdom of Upper Italy. It is certain that this was as much as Cavour and King Victor Emmanuel were then prepared to undertake; more especially that Cavour did not at all wish to attack the Neapolitan Kingdom (the Two Sicilies) or the Pope's temporal sovereignty in Rome, but would have preferred devoting himself to the consolidation of Northern Italy, trusting to bring the other Governments into a strict defensive alliance, possibly a Federal League, for the general independence of the Peninsula. But the national spirit, chiefly aroused by the eloquent appeals of Mazzini, with which Garibaldi enthusiastically sympathised, was intent upon the complete triumph of Italian unity. This occasioned, in the next year, 1860, the extraordinary revolutions of Sicily and Naples, where Garibaldi's most amazing victories in warfare speedily took place, leading presently to direct military action by Victor Emmanuel's Government, to the complete defeat of the Papal and Neapolitan forces, and to the establishment of the Kingdom of United Italy in 1861.

The Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, under the Neapolitan Bourbons, had long been the scene of the most infamous tyranny, corruption, and cruelty, that had disgraced modern Europe. Mr. Gladstone's letters to Lord Aberdeen in 1851, exposing the horrors of Neapolitan criminal trials and island prisons, in which many innocent men, the most loyal and honourable citizens, were chained with the vilest felons, simply for having protested against the violation of the Constitution, were never refuted. There had been no redress, and the Government of the Two Sicilies was condemned by general opinion. The time for its overthrow came in 1860, and the hand of Garibaldi was employed to strike this blow for the deliverance of humanity from one of its most inveterate enemies. It was he who then, with the assistance of Bertani, Bixio, and Crispi, organised the expedition to Sicily; Rosolino Pilo, in accordance with both Garibaldi and Mazzini, preceding it, and paying his life as a forfeit. On the night of May 5, 1860, embarking a thousand volunteers on board two steamers, the Piemonte and Lombardia, Garibaldi, raising the cry of Italy and Victor Emmanuel, steamed out of Genoa, and helped himself to 100,000 cartridges and four small cannon at Talamone. There he divided his corps into seven companies, leaving one to invade the Papal States, and landed with the rest at Marsala. Palermo was liberated, despite the 20,000 soldiers and the Neapolitan fleet. From Palermo Garibaldi prepared for the liberation of the rest of the island, which, after a fierce fight at Milazzo and the surrender of Messina, was accomplished. From Messina Garibaldi proceeded to the mainland. He sent 200 chosen pioneers across the Straits, recalled to his own command all the other volunteers whom Bertani, by his orders, had organised for an expedition to the Marches, and, with 3500 men on board two steamers, despite the broadsides of the Neapolitan fleet, landed at Melito on Aug. 19. After a combat at Reggio, a triumphal march brought him to Naples, where, notwithstanding the cannon pointed at the city from the Fort of St. Elmo, the entire populace proclaimed him Liberator and Dictator. An army of 60,000 men, who had remained faithful to the King of Naples, encamped between the fortresses of Capua and Gaeta. These once disposed of, Garibaldi's intention was to march on to Rome, then still occupied by the French troops. Napoleon III. gave Cavour clearly to understand that this would on no account be permitted, on which the King decided upon the expedition through Umbria and the Marches. This was promptly carried into execution by General Fanti and General Cialdini, dispersing the Pontifical forces commanded by General Lamoriciere. The friendly meeting between King Victor Emmanuel and Garibaldi, and the battle of Volturno and siege of Gaeta, having settled the fate of Neapolitan Royalty, it remained to provide for the incorporation of Southern Italy with the new national kingdom. In order to preclude Garibaldi from passing to Rome, Cavour insisted on the immediate annexation of the Two Sicilies, to which, at last, Garibaldi consented. On Oct. 15, from St. Angelo, he signed the decree for the plebiscite, by which "the Two Sicilies, who owe their liberation to their Italian brethren, form part of Italy one and indivisible under her constitutional King, Victor Emmanuel, and his descendants." Although Garibaldi's chief opponents were sent to take possession, General Fanti for the military part, and Farinasi governor, all Garibaldi's proclamations breathed harmony and patriotism. "To-morrow Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy, the elect of the nation, will cross that frontier which for so many centuries has divided you from the rest of the nation, and, fulfilling the unanimous desire of these brave populations, will appear in our midst. We shall welcome worthily the man sent by Providence, and along his path, as pledge of our freedom and our affection, we will strew the flowers of concord, to him so welcome, to Italy so necessary." In all his letters and speeches to the King he simply asked that his volunteers and the patriots who had contributed to the unification and independence of Italy should meet with trust and kindness from the Royal Government.

On Oct. 9 Garibaldi returned to his island home at Caprera, and steadfastly refused, then and till long afterwards, to accept honours, titles, or pecuniary rewards for his great services to the nation. He had a seat in the Italian Parliament, but did not much occupy it, being offended with the Government for its refusal of equal military rank to his volunteers of the Sicilian expedition. Cavour died in June, 1861, and was succeeded by Ricasoli as Prime Minister, who soon afterwards gave way to Rattazzi. The intriguing and vacillating conduct of that Minister led to a rash attempt, made by the Mazzinian and Garibaldian party, to force the Government into hostilities with France by driving out the French garrison of Rome. In August, 1862, Garibaldi headed a band of volunteers landing on the southern coast for this purpose, which was opposed by the Royal forces, and he was unhappily wounded in the foot, at Aspromonte, by a chance bullet of the volley they fired when he refused to surrender. Great sympathy for the brave though mistaken hero of Italian liberty was felt by people of all classes and parties in Italy, and in every country of Europe. The King and the Ministry expressed their sincere regret, but felt it was their duty to preserve order, and to forbid a proceeding which would only have drawn the country into a ruinous conflict with the overwhelming power of the French Empire.

Garibaldi, wounded and a prisoner, was conveyed by sea to the Gulf of Spezia, and lodged in the Fort of Varigiano, where the bullet was extracted from his ankle by Mr. Partridge, the eminent London surgeon, who was sent for the purpose by Garibaldi's English friends. In 1864, Garibaldi came to England for two or three weeks, and was received in London with the most enthusiastic popular admiration. He did not look like a man of the city. His picturesque figure, dressed in a red flannel shirt, grey trousers, and cape of white serge lined with crimson, agreed with the notion that had been formed of his romantic character. The extreme simplicity of his manners, the unassuming, manly dignity of his bearing, the frankness and gentleness of his address, with the confidence in his perfect integrity and generosity which was felt by every person who ever met him, had a powerful charm even over those who had gravely disapproved his political conduct. It must be acknowledged that he was not a man of prudence and discretion, and that he was utterly ignorant of the necessary conditions of practical statesmanship, and the credulous dupe of impostors, or the victim of wild fanaticism, in several of his later proceedings. These errors on the part of Garibaldi, as well as the more persistent Republican fanaticism of Mazzini, did not finally prevent the success of the cause of Italian independence, but it was repeatedly endangered by them. The mind of that nation, however, possesses a vast amount of common sense and shrewd perception of actual possibilities, which saved Italy from such disastrous blunders.

The war of Prussia against Austria, in 1866, gave the Italians a fresh opportunity of allying themselves with another great military Power for the liberation of Venice and of Eastern Lombardy, Mantua, and Verona. Garibaldi was again employed in leading a force of volunteer riflemen over the mountain roads at the head of the Lombard Lakes, but not much success was obtained in that campaign. Venice was liberated, nevertheless, and was annexed to Italy, by the diplomatic efforts of the Emperor Napoleon, and as a result of the defeat of the Austrian armies in Germany. The Austrian Government had in fact arrived at the just conclusion, that its Italian dominion was more troublesome and perilous than could be longer retained with advantage; it was ready enough to part with Venice, and Italy was at length set free, as Napoleon III. had said, "from the Alps to the Adriatic"—with one capital exception.

This capital exception was the world-famous city of Rome, which a large force of French soldiers continued to hold for Pope Pius IX., as they had done since Garibaldi's brave defence of the city in 1849 was overcome. In 1867, chafing at the further postponement of the national desire for Rome, and resenting the perfidy and hypocrisy of the Emperor Napoleon, Garibaldi made another rash and desperate attempt, landing at Leghorn and taking the lead of a volunteer force, to snatch the Roman territory and the capital before the French army could be reinforced. The brief story of his actions in the Campagna, at Monte Rotondo and Mentana, where he was quickly defeated by the French and Pontifical troops, is well remembered. Its romantic incidents are given in Lord Beaconsfield's novel of "Lothair." The Italian Government, as before, had to save Garibaldi from himself, by taking him in charge as a prisoner of State, but he was only confined to a guarded residence in his own rustic dwelling at Caprera. There, on a little rocky islet, in the strait between Maddalena and the large island of Sardinia, he had purchased a farm, with a herd of cows and goats, and lived in a plain homely cottage, with his second wife, his daughter Teresita, and his younger children, in a wholesome idyllic life, worthy of the unselfish hero. In 1876, having suffered private losses, he consented reluctantly to accept a national grant of £40,000 and a life pension of £2000 a year, with a view to providing for his family. There was one more occasion, the war between France and Germany in 1870, which again drew him forth into the field of martial exploits, but which failed to add to his renown. His services were frankly offered to the French Republic, after the fall of Napoleon III., and were formally accepted by M. Gambetta; the command of a volunteer legion in the Vosges was allowed him; but he proved no match for the German strategists, and he was ill supported by the French Generals in that region. He was, however, elected a member of the French National Assembly, and contracted a sentimental friendship with Victor Hugo, but soon returned to his own country. At Rome, where he once or twice appeared in the Italian Parliament, and undertook the patronage of a grand engineering scheme for the embankment of the Tiber, he was always hailed with public honours and popular worship. Rome had been released from Papal misrule, upon the withdrawal of the French troops in 1870, by the forcible entry of the Italian army under the standard of the National Monarchy; the unity and independence of Italy were thus completely achieved, and there was no chance left to the Republican or Mazzinian party of an opening for their revolutionary projects. Garibaldi's last public appearance was at Palermo, in the recent historical celebration of the six hundredth anniversary of the Sicilian Vespers. His health, for some years past, had been gradually failing; and his death, at the age of seventy-four, cannot be a surprise, though it has called forth a general expression of regret and personal esteem. His elder sons, Menotti and Ricciotti, are well-known members of the Italian Democratic party; his eldest daughter is the wife of Signor Canzio, and he has left several other children.

ROYAL NATIONAL LIFE-BOAT INSTITUTION.

A meeting of this institution was held last week at its house, John-street, Adelphi. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read, rewards were granted to the crews of life-boats for recent services, and to the crews of shore-boats for saving life from wrecks on our coast. Payments amounting to nearly £2000 were likewise made on some of the 271 life-boat establishments of the institution. A contribution of £1000 has been received from Mr. A. P. Heywood-Lonsdale to defray the cost of a life-boat establishment. The late Mr. Brian Bates, of Buxton, has bequeathed to the institution £1000; and the late Mrs. Lockwood, of Kensington, £200. New life-boats have recently been forwarded to Palling, Norfolk, and Littlehaven, St. Bride's Bay. The Palling boat is named the Heyland, having been presented to the institution by the friends of the late Lieutenant Heyland, R.N., who lost his life while saving a seaman who had fallen overboard from H.M.S. Minotaur, during a gale, on Nov. 25, 1880. A new life-boat station is to be formed at Weston-super-Mare.

A YEAR OF LIFE-BOAT WORK.

The National Life-Boat Institution contributed last year to the saving of 1121 lives from various wrecks, while the Board of Trade and the Coastguard, by means of the rocket apparatus, rescued upwards of 500 lives. Last year eleven new life-boats were placed at various stations. On four occasions during the year the life-boats upset and four lives were lost. The number of life-boats now under the management of the institution is 271. The number of lives saved during the fifty-eight years from the establishment of the institution to the end of the year 1881, either by its life-boats or by special exertions for which it has granted rewards, is 28,724. It has expended on life-boat stations and other means for saving life from shipwreck on the coasts of the United Kingdom upwards of £570,000, and has voted ninety-five gold medals, 948 silver medals, and £70,200 in pecuniary rewards for saving life from shipwreck. During the year 1881 the receipts of the institution amounted to £36,419, while the expenditure was £37,781.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

Twelve months (including Christmas Number), £1 9s. 3d.
Six months, 14s. Christmas Half-Year, 15s. 3d.
Three months, 7s. Christmas Quarter, 8s. 3d.

Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6d. for each Number, paid in advance.

ABROAD.

The yearly subscription abroad is 36s. 4d. (on thin paper, 32s.), with the following exceptions:—

To Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Mozambique Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, 41s. (thin paper, 34s.) To Madagascar (except St. Mary), 45s. (on thin paper, 36s. 4d.)

Subscribers are specially advised to order the thick paper edition, the appearance of the engravings in the thin paper copies being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publishing Office, 198 Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London; or by Post-Office Order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, to George C. Leighton, of 198, Strand, London.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

DIGESTION—THE STOMACH.

Professor Arthur Gamgee, M.D., F.R.S., in his third lecture, given on Tuesday, May 30, began by describing the minute structure of the stomach, including the mucous membrane, the so-called pyloric glands, and those of the fundus. The pyloric glands (formerly considered as simply mucous glands), with those of the fundus, furnish the chief ferment of the stomach, termed pepsin, though the cylindrical epithelium lining the neck of these glands, with that covering the inner surface of the stomach, co-operates in the formation of mucus. The glands of the fundus and the cylindrical epithelium lining the neck present two kinds of cells, of which some, the central, are pepsin-forming cells, and others, larger, and oval, are called border cells. The glands of the fundus are acid formers. As in the case of the salivary glands, the epithelium lining the gastric glands undergoes changes corresponding to different states of functional activity. In the chemical action of the gastric juice, the ferment pepsin and the free acid are specially eminent. Pepsin is a non-albuminous body which has not yet been isolated in a state of purity; but it can be dissolved in various liquids, which then acquire the property of the ferment. Its essential property is that, when mixed with a dilute watery solution of acids, especially of hydrochloric acid, it dissolves and digests insoluble proteid bodies, such as albumen, fibrin, &c., and converts them into soluble and diffusible bodies named peptones. The Professor then examined the free acids of the gastric juice, noticing recent researches, which had confirmed the idea that the acid is free hydrochloric acid. In conclusion, he commented on the "curdling" or rennet ferment of the stomach, which possesses the power, at a suitable temperature, and the action is neutral or alkaline, of coagulating the casein of milk and converting it into a body, which is unlike casein coagulation produced by acids, and which is essentially cheese. Finally, brief reference was made to the absorption going on in the stomach.

PROPERTIES OF THE METALS.

Professor Dewar, M.A., F.R.S., in his seventh lecture, given on Thursday, the 1st inst., illustrated the production and properties of aluminium, chromium, manganese, and iron. Aluminium, one of the most widely diffused metals, is obtained from the earth alumina, which is combined with silica in clay and other rocks. This process was effected by Wöhler in 1827, and simplified by H. Ste.-Claire Deville in 1856. It is very light, sonorous, and malleable; it resists the action of oxygen and most acids; its alloy with copper, aluminium-bronze, resembles gold, and has been used for watch-cases and jewellery. Its salts, iron, ammonia, and soda alums are valuable as mordants, and for other purposes in the arts. Chromium is found combined with iron and lead; it is highly prized for its brilliant coloured compounds. With oxygen it forms chromic acid. The black oxide of manganese is widely diffused. The metal is obtained generally in combination with carbon, and a globule was obtained by Professor Dewar in an electrical crucible. This metal, as well as chromium, is very hard, and scratches glass, from its oxide large quantities of oxygen are obtained, and it is the chief ingredient of Condy's disinfecting fluid. It is a highly valuable agent in the manufacture of chloride of lime or bleaching-powder, which has been greatly improved by the Weldon process. The latter part of the lecture was devoted to iron, of which many specimens were exhibited. Various processes of producing steel were explained, including the Bessemer process, and also the Gilchrist process, in which (by the use of what is termed the alkali brick) phosphorus is removed, and thereby Cleveland iron largely utilised. Curious specimens of steel, manufactured by Faraday at the Institution, were exhibited; and the use of colour as a test in tempering steel was explained. Iron has the property of occluding gases, and Graham obtained hydrogen from meteorites. Some iron salts have the property of disassociation. In conclusion, the spectra of these metals were described as exceedingly complex and inexplicable, and illustrated by examples. The spectrum of iron contains above a thousand lines.

THE INTELLECTUAL BASIS OF MUSIC.

Mr. H. H. Statham, who gave the discourse at the evening meeting on Friday, the 2nd inst., began by observing that music is a metaphysical art, which does not imitate nature, and which has no counterpart in it, except in the abstract qualities of extension and proportion—in time and tone. It is also closely connected with the actual movements of our own organism and with our nervous excitability, and, in a certain way, is related to our speech. He gave reasons for dissenting from Herbert Spencer's view that "vocal music is the most perfect," and quoted Matthew Arnold's beautiful lines on the great power of Beethoven in dealing with human emotions. Instrumental music, without words, thus combines expression with construction. In relation to the material, Mr. Statham commented on the peculiarities of the diatonic and chromatic scales, and illustrated the origin of the two styles of instrumental music, and the progress from harmony with varying melodies to rhythmic structure, in which the idea of one predominant subject or design is adhered to throughout, whereby the composition becomes an organised whole. Repetition and monotony are thus prevented, and a new interest is produced; and every part has its own value. Of this, beautiful examples were given from Beethoven's works on the pianoforte. It was remarked that even his most poetic movements are purely intellectual, without a definition. Mr. Statham commented on the weakness of "programme music," and censured imitating natural sounds. He then characterised two kinds of ornamental treatment—variation of form, and the addition of ornamental background, and described vertical harmony, referring to the effect of twelve instrumentations in Haydn's "Complaint." He then pointed out two fallacies of modern criticism: that what was once good is not so now, and that there is a necessary progress in art, which latter is true in science, as it is based upon the discovery of facts. Wagner's method, he said, is new and interesting, but is defective as limiting extension of form and neglecting rhythm. This may lead to the ghastly result that music may be as ugly as you like, provided it has a meaning. The discourse was closed with a warm defence of Mozart against the charges of some modern critics.

FORMS OF POETRY.

Professor David Masson, in his third lecture, given on Saturday last, the 3rd inst., resumed his comments on poetry in its fullest and most deliberate form, as ideal history or invented story, and its pre-eminence in the traditions of the world. He next considered poetry in its connection with real history, first noticing what he termed commemorative and paragraph poetry, mostly of an ephemeral character, but of which noble specimens exist—such as Milton's "Lycidas," the "Adonais" of Shelley, Cowper's verses on the Loss of the Royal George, Campbell's "Hohenlinden," and Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade" and "In Memoriam." In poems such as Wordsworth's "Excursion" facts are interspersed. In the Waverley novels, Scott skilfully interweaves his own creations with events of the past, especially in relation to his own country. His method was distinctly that of teaching history through the medium of fiction. Verging on the historical are Dickens's "Barnaby Rudge" and Thackeray's "Esmond," and in the same category may be placed Shakespeare's English historical plays. The Professor next explained the distinction between prose and verse. The ancients termed verse "oratio vincta" (speech bound) and prose "oratio soluta" (speech unshackled); verse, therefore, is speech regulated by definite rules. Rhythm is measured movement, and may be perceived apart from speech, and is often observable in prose. Out of this arose verses in metre composed of feet. A full account was given of the feet employed by the ancients, depending on quantity, with examples, the iambic, trochee, dactyl, anapaest, &c., and their use by the moderns, who are guided by accent. In English poetry iambic verse largely prevails. In conclusion, the Professor commented on the advantage of the skilful use of rhyme, although termed by Milton "the jingling sound of like endings."

ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

CONCLUDING NOTICE.

A few pictures, which were either intentionally reserved or escaped observation in our preceding survey of this exhibition, still claim review.

Again some Continental, and also some American, artists come to the fore. It would, for instance, be hard to match for character and perfect sufficiency of all technical qualities Signor Andreotti's "Village Maestro" (36) about to accompany his smiling young lady pupil. Fagerlin's picture (416) of a girl seeking a deserted lover at the cottage of a rival, or pretended rival, who conceals him behind her skirts, has likewise great though more modest merit, and deserves a better place. The expressions are exactly suited to the humorous situation. Signor A. Glisenti's "Maize Harvest" (253)—a man cutting, and a woman bearing on her head a great basketful of grantsurco—is powerfully painted. There are four strong, full-toned pictures of Oriental subjects by A. Melville. F. A. Bridgman's "Interior at Briska, Algeria" (288), with women weaving the burnous, deserves respectful mention. And so does Adrien Stokes's very solidly painted "Winter Afternoon: South of France" (320); and P. Bigland's "Sunday Morning" (40), a peasant reading his bible, which is fine in character though needlessly low in tone; and A. G. Bell's "Feeding Time" (135), a girl feeding turkeys in an inclosure, in the outskirts, apparently, of a Belgian town—remarkable for the just relations of the tones; and E. B. de Sutter's little picture, called "Members of the Commons" (171)—i.e., geese and donkeys; and G. Costa's small refined landscape, "Sunrise on the Carrara Hills" (172).

Mr. Nicholas Chevalier sends—fruit of his world-wide travel—"The Convalescent" (688), which is one of the most original pictures in the exhibition, at least in point of subject. The scene is the interior of a Buddhist monastery in China; some of the yellow-froked monks are grouped in what corresponds to our cloisters; the convalescent reclines in front, sipping his tea, while a brother monk reads to him. The quaint costumes and architecture, the strange luxuriant vegetation of the monastery garden, and the peaceful seclusion of these pious celibate Celestials seem to afford a peep into a new world. The sunlight that irradiates the view is finely rendered and the painting throughout excellent. E. Parton's best landscape is entitled "Silver and Gold" (858)—an autumnal scene in a wood, with grey rising mists—and is a decided advance upon last year's work. C. Baurle's group of female portraits is artistic in colour and treatment; and H. T. Shafer's "Treasures" (775), a young girl looking at a jewel-casket, is a charming piece of refined execution of decorative character.

We should have noticed earlier Mr. Marcus Stone's "Bad News" (222)—a scene in the court-yard of a cavalier mansion, with its mistress swooning, at the return of one of her lord's troopers alone with evil tidings of his master. Mr. Stone also contributes a smaller picture, of a young lady seated in a garden-chair, turning from a suitor, with a pained expression, the reason for which is indicated in the French proverb that serves for title—"Il y en a toujours un autre" (5). This picture, which has been purchased by the Academicians from the funds of the Chantrey bequest, presents (like the other) a pretty female face; the drawing and modelling are very careful; the colouring has been sedulously toned and harmonised—unhappily, to the verge of dullness; the execution is minute, smooth, equable—to the point of tameness, certainly to the sacrifice of animation. It has affinity to the kind of French art on which the impressionists have made war. While we gladly recognise a degree of painstaking far too rare in our school we discover in the result the outcome not of genius, but of mere talent, rendered fastidious by a "Book of Beauty" kind of taste. In short, we conceive that the picture is not one that the Royal Academy should have chosen from the handsome fund at its disposal; if that fund was intended to encourage high aims in art, truth to nature, and serious studies, and to aid struggling artists of ability, not popular conventional painters who need no assistance. The picture is better fitted for a lady's boudoir than a public and quasi-educational collection. Mr. Hook's great though familiar power as a colourist appears in full measure in the picture of a Scotch creek, with buxom lasses lading themselves with baskets of "Caller Herrin" (303) as they are landed from the boats. Equally excellent is the "Devon Harvest Cart" (308), bearing home the last handful of wheat, as it nears a ford below a tiny cascade beneath an undulating bank of field and hedgerow. W. J. Shaw is as successful in painting the effects of a gale off "The Great Orme's Head" (477) as in his seapieces of last year, though he has not been accorded so good a place. "The Last Days of Sir Philip Sidney" (845) by R. Hillingford, an historical work of apparently considerable merit, is hung too high for fair inspection; and so is Dendy Sadler's "Friday" (784), a row of monks at their maigre repast, which, judging from previous works, should be, and, as well as we could see, is, full of character and humour.

The limited extent of the wall-space at Burlington House (which is probably less than one third of that available in the Paris Salon) is attended with a double disadvantage—it not only compels the exclusion of hundreds of works deserving to be submitted to the public judgment, but it necessitates the placing about half of those actually hung so far above the productions of R.A.'s and A.R.A.'s, and a favoured few, that their position can but be injurious instead of beneficial to the contributors. Miss Clara Montalba's "Riva degli Schiavoni" (54) is similarly "skied." The picture is, however, of less importance than her recently exhibited works, and the lady appears to be reposing on her laurels. Miss Hilda Montalba's "A Misty Day, Venice" (679), is original in effect and artistic in colour; and a third member of this gifted family, Miss Ellen Montalba, puts in a highly creditable appearance with a full-length of Princess Louise (124). Exigencies of space compel us to be content with commending the following as well worthy the visitor's attention—viz., "The Ferry Inn"

(93), by R. W. Macbeth; "The Course of True Love" (111), by G. C. Hindley; "Waifs and Strays" (151), by Joseph Clark; "The End of the Game" (152), by Frank Dadd; "Autumn" (250), by J. E. Grace; "Home Again" (671), by E. A. Waterlow; "Eve of the Battle of Salamis" (692), by Percy Macquoid; illustrations of the "Arabian Nights," by A. Goodwin; "A Shady Lane" (785), with cleverly rendered effect of glints of sunlight, by Miss M. Hickson; "To the Rescue: Norfolk Coast" (806), a large, very spirited picture of horses dragging a life-boat to the launching place in a storm, by S. Carter; "Lake Leman" (829), a small picture, by J. H. Inchbold, in which the emerald green of the water, and the azure tints of the mountains are rendered with a truth as well as courage not often seen; "Sonning: about midday" (1449), by A. W. Hunt, "Palladio's Palace, Vicenza" (1450), by J. O'Connor; and "The Port of London" (1506), a very striking representation of the always impressive scene below bridge, by W. L. Wyllie.

The Water-Colour Room contains little of consequence that is not by artists who are equally well or better represented in other of the annual exhibitions elsewhere. Among the novelties are two large drawings by A. Croft. One of these, "The Valley of the Lledr" (906), is immense for water colours, and evinces much power and perfect command of the material, though its capabilities are certainly overtaxed. Two drawings by Galofre, the Spanish painter, two by Jules Trayer, the French artist, and others by Madame de l'Aubinière, G. Q. P. Talbot, J. T. Watts, A. F. Grace, and A. Melville, likewise deserve notice. Among the architectural drawings is a large model to scale of a segment of the dome of St. Paul's, with studies of the corresponding decorations, part of those proposed to be executed in mosaic from designs by Sir Frederick Leighton and Mr. Poynter. The decorations consist of thrones or architectural seats with figures thereon, and subjects for the most part in round panels and medallions of different sizes, which are distributed in the interspaces of the ribs of the dome. We must at once say that this scheme of decoration will, if carried out, assuredly prove a huge mistake. The great fault of the design as a whole is the patchy appearance of the medallions (like cuttings in a scrap-book) arising from the blankness of the spaces between them, and the absence of a complete framework of painted architecture or architectonic figures (the ribs being insufficient) such as gives connection and unity to the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. The every-varying scale of the figures, and the smallness of those of the upper cycles (which will render them almost invisible) will further add to the inevitably confused, discordant effect. Better have recourse to simple ornament—say a coffered dome, as at St. Peter's and the Pantheon—than adopt so incoherent a jumble of figure-subjects as this, which sins against the first canon of architectural decoration in having scarcely any relation to the structural forms. The somewhat arabesque motive might serve on a perpendicular wall, or even on a flat ceiling, with a proper ground, but, partially pendant and foreshortened, in a dome will prove painfully discordant. The architectural drawings include some fine good designs, or restorations, by Messrs. Pearson, Fergusson, Waterhouse, Norman Shaw, G. Aitchison, R. P. Pullan, E. R. Robson, J. J. Burnet, and others; but on these we must not dwell. The engravings and etchings comprise several works already reviewed by us and known to the public—the rule which forbade the admission at Burlington House of works previously published having been set aside. Among works not so known there is nothing of high importance.

Lady John Manners on Wednesday distributed the prizes, medals, and awards in connection with the International Competitive Exhibition of Shipwrights.

Mr. T. Sidney Cooper, R.A., has handed to the Mayor and Dean in trust the documents in connection with the Art Gallery which he has presented to Canterbury. The building occupies the site of the house in which Mr. Cooper was born, and is to be carried on as a school of art in connection with South Kensington.

The picture of "Napoleon I. in the Campaign of Paris," which was painted, in 1862, by Meissonier, and was sold a few years ago for 1000 guineas to Mr. Ruskin, was bought back at the sale-rooms of Messrs. Christie, Manson, and Woods, last Saturday, by the original vender, Mr. Henry Wallis, for 5800 guineas, amid a scene of the utmost excitement.

The New Free Library which has been erected in Birmingham to replace the building destroyed by fire a few years ago was opened on the 1st inst. by Mr. Bright. The right hon. gentleman dwelt upon the interest and value of libraries, related several anecdotes illustrating the advantage of a love of books, and spoke of the contributions to English poetry by American writers. A dinner was given in the evening.

The sixth exhibition of the Yorkshire Fine-Art Society at Leeds is now open with a fine collection of over 1000 oil and water-colour paintings. The artists include Sir Frederick Leighton, President of the Royal Academy; Messrs. E. Armitage, P. H. Calderon, Briton Rivière, J. Tissot, H. Herkomer, E. J. Gregory, H. Woods, J. Charlton, J. R. Reid, W. Hughes, J. White, E. Hayes, and J. Peel.

A loan picture exhibition, promoted by the Literary and Scientific Institute at High Wycombe, is now open. The collection, arranged in the Central Board School, is an extensive and valuable one, consisting of nearly 700 oil-paintings, water-colour drawings, and miniatures, lent by noblemen and gentlemen in the neighbourhood. The opening ceremony, last week, was largely attended. A soirée of the members of the institute and a concert afterwards took place.

MR. RUSKIN'S MUSEUM AT SHEFFIELD.

At a special meeting of St. George's Guild, held at Sheffield, yesterday week, Mr. Ruskin communicated through his curator, his views as to a projected model museum, to take the place of the present limited building at Walkley, Sheffield. He intends to have special attention paid to painting; to have libraries and reading-rooms, and mineralogical specimens; and to exclude zoology and botany at present; valuable pictures and copies of great works will be added as the funds will permit. He does not mean to aim at immense collections of miscellaneous objects, but to teach by means of specimens the various branches of history and art to which the museum will be devoted. He expects Sheffield to build the museum, and now appeals to the public for assistance to purchase valuable manuscripts which he expects will shortly be offered for sale at the forthcoming dispersion of the Hamilton Palace collection. Works of great value and beauty are being received at Walkley every day, and the present building being already filled, a temporary storehouse is about to be erected for their reception. In answer to the frequent question why he chose Sheffield for the museum, Mr. Ruskin says one reason is because Sheffield is in Yorkshire, and Yorkshire yet, in the main temper of its inhabitants, is old English, and capable therefore yet of the ideas of honesty and piety by which old England lived.

1. The Prince passing up the Drive to the Townhall.

2. The Prince opening the New Municipal Buildings.

3. Declaring the New Buildings open.

4. The Prince

VISIT OF THE PRINCE OF WALES

SEE PAGE

1. In the Townhall. 2. The Prince witnessing the Artillery Practice. 3. Review of the Norfolk Artillery Militia. 4. Interior of the Artillery Battery.

TO GREAT YARMOUTH.

OBITUARY.

THE MARQUIS CONYNHAM.

The Most Honourable George Henry, third Marquis Conynham, Lieut.-General (retired), formerly Major and Lieut.-Colonel 1st Life Guards, previously 2nd Dragoons (Scots Greys), Extra Equerry to the Queen, Lieut.-Colonel Commanding Royal East Kent Yeomanry Mounted Rifles, and Vice-Admiral of the Coast of Ulster, died at his town residence, 36, Belgrave-square, on the 2nd ult. He was born Feb. 3, 1825, the eldest son of Francis Nathaniel, second Marquis of Conynham, K.P., G.C.H., by Jane, his wife, daughter of Field-Marshal the first Marquis of Anglesey, K.G.; and grandson of Henry Lord Conynham, created a Marquis in 1816. He succeeded his father, as third Marquis, July 17, 1876. His Lordship married, June 17, 1854, Lady Jane St. Maur Blanche Stanhope, only child of Charles, fourth Earl of Harrington, and leaves issue two sons and five daughters. Of the latter, the second, Lady Constance, was married, Oct. 20, 1881, to Mr. Richard Combe, of Pierpoint, Surrey; and of the former, the elder, Henry Francis, Earl of Mountcharles, Lieutenant Scots Guards, born Oct. 1, 1857, becomes fourth Marquis Conynham; his Lordship married very recently the Hon. Frances Elizabeth Sarah Eveleigh de Moleyns, eldest daughter of Lord Ventry. During the Viceroyalties of the Earls of Bessborough and Clarendon, the late Marquis, then Earl of Mountcharles, filled the office of State Steward.

THE COUNTESS OF CHARLEMONT.

The Right Honourable Elizabeth Jane, Countess of Charlemont, died on the 31st ult., at Roxborough Castle, Moy, county Tyrone. Her Ladyship was born June 21, 1834, the eldest daughter of the Right Honourable Sir William Meredith Somerville, the distinguished statesman and orator, M.P. successively for Drogheda and Canterbury (created Lord Athlumney in 1863), by his first wife, Lady Maria Harriet Conynham, youngest daughter of Henry, first Marquis Conynham, K.P. Lady Charlemont was married, Dec. 18, 1856, to James Molyneux, Earl of Charlemont, K.P., but leaves no issue.

COLONEL J. L. CHESTER.

Colonel Joseph Lemuel Chester, D.C.L., a well-known genealogist, died on the 26th ult., at his residence in Southwark Park-road, aged sixty-one. He was a distinguished American antiquary, and came to this country some twenty-five years ago, his object being to trace the pedigrees of the "Pilgrim Fathers." In this and kindred pursuits he was indefatigable. In 1876 he published his great work, "The Westminster Abbey Registers," replete with most accurate information, historical and biographical. Dean Stanley took especial interest in these researches of Colonel Chester, and the University of Oxford conferred on him the honorary degree of D.C.L. Colonel Chester was a Fellow of the Historical Society and one of the founders of the Harleian Society.

MR. JAMES O'HEA.

Mr. James O'Hea, of the Irish Bar, the political associate of Daniel O'Connell in the Repeal agitation, died a few days since, aged seventy-three. He was called to the Bar in 1838, and for a long period held the office of Crown Prosecutor for the County of Cork, and the County and City of Limerick. Mr. O'Hea took a prominent part in the agitation for Repeal, was a fluent speaker, and a sound lawyer.

MR. R. P. NISBET.

Mr. Robert Parry Nisbet, of Southbroome House, Wilts, J.P. and D.L., High Sheriff 1849, M.P. for Chippenham, as a Conservative, from 1856 to 1859, died on the 31st ult., in his eighty-ninth year. He was third son of Mr. Walter Nisbet, by Anne, his wife, daughter of Mr. Robert Parry, of Plasnewydd and Ilwryn-on, and derived his descent from a scion of Nisbet, of Carfin, in the county of Lanark. He was educated at Haileybury College, and entered the Indian Civil Service. For some time he acted as a Judge in the Bengal Presidency, but retired in 1839.

We have also to record the deaths of—

The Rev. John Perkins Clark, M.A., Minor Canon and Precentor of Gloucester Cathedral, aged seventy.

The Very Rev. John Brownlow, Dean of Clonmacnois, for thirty-nine years Rector of Ardbraccan, on the 24th ult., at his Rectory, near Navan.

Mr. Thomas Steuart Gladstone, J.P., on the 25th ult., at Nice, aged seventy-seven. He was eldest son of Mr. Robert Gladstone, of Liverpool, where he was formerly a merchant.

Mr. John George Shephard, of Ashe High-house, Campsey Ash, Suffolk, J.P. and D.L., High Sheriff 1859, on the 28th ult., at 81, Eaton-place, aged fifty-eight. He served as foreman of the jury on the Tichborne trial.

Mr. Nicholas Duncombe, of King William's Town, in the county of Cork, J.P., on the 30th ult., aged seventy-eight. He was eldest son of Mr. Parker Duncombe, by Jane, his wife, sister of William Waggett, Recorder of Cork.

Dr. Thomas Bevil Peacock, of Finsbury-crescent, the distinguished physician, suddenly, aged sixty-eight. He was author of several learned works and contributed to medical journals. He was Consulting Physician at St. Thomas's Hospital.

Mr. Thomas Cuthbert Kearney, of Garretstown, Kinsale, in the county of Cork, on the 24th ult. He was eldest and last surviving son of Mr. Thomas Cuthbert Kearney, by Agnes, his wife, daughter of the Rev. Thomas Gibbings.

Mr. Anthony Ormsby, of Ballinamore, Swinford, in the county of Mayo, J.P. and D.L., High Sheriff 1849, on the 25th ult., at Sackville-street Club, Dublin. He was son of Lieutenant-Colonel Anthony Ormsby, of Ballinamore, by his second wife, Anne, daughter of Mr. John Lloyd, of Lisadurn, in the county of Roscommon.

Mr. Edward Jodrell, of Bayfield Hall, Norfolk, J.P., formerly of the 37th Regiment, on March 17, while on the voyage home from Australia, in his thirty-seventh year. He was eldest son of Captain Edward Jodrell, 16th Foot, by Adela Monckton, his wife, daughter of Sir Edward Bowyer Smyth, Bart., of Hill Hall, Essex, and was heir-presumptive to the Jodrell baronetcy.

Mr. William de Blaquiere, heir-presumptive to the title of de Blaquiere, on the 23rd ult., at 18, Macaulay Buildings, Bath, aged seventy-one. He was eldest surviving son of the Hon. Peter Boyle de Blaquiere (son of the first Lord de Blaquiere), by his first wife, Eliza, daughter of Mr. Denis O'Brien, of Newcastle, in the county of Limerick. In 1814, he was Sheriff of Bombay, and Equity Registrar and Prothonotary of H.M. Supreme Court there. He married, in 1816, Rebecca, daughter of Mr. Cannon, of Reading, and leaves a daughter.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

F. J. W. (Newcastle).—We are obliged for the trouble you have taken, but we reprint only problems possessing some special interest.
A. S. (Naples).—Solution of your problem received. It shall now be examined.
W. W. N. (Temple).—It is not necessary to send a full analysis, but there should be sufficient to indicate that the problem has been completely solved.
SENEX SOLITARIUS.—In your proposed solution of Problem No. 1908, you have overlooked the action of the Black Pawn at Q Kt 4th.
W. L. G. (Not up to our standard, we regret to say.)
J. M. S. (Liverpool).—See answer to W. L. G.
HERWARD.—Thanks for the news and for the corrected diagram of your problem.
BLACK KNIGHT.—Suitable answers for this column except on special occasions. Your other problem shall appear shortly.
PILOTRUM.—We should describe the square whereon the piece is captured from its side of the board.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF HERCULES' FOUR-MOVE PRIZE PROBLEM received from E. L. G. of M. Lepellet's Prize Problem from Norman Rumbelow and E. L. G. of Dr. Gold's Problem from Pilgrim, Pierce Jones, and E. L. G. of No. 1902 from H. N. Van Dyke, of Princeton (U.S.A.); and of No. 1904 from Bosworth, Pilgrim, E. L. G. and Junior (New London, U.S.A.).

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1905 received from W. W. Nicholson, J. A. B. Pierce Jones, Indagator, and F. F. (Brussels).
CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1906 received from W. W. Nicholson, Wogtepelli (Cannes), Alpha, F. F. (Brussels), Adolphus Schroeder (Naples), Pierce Jones, Emile Frau, E. L. G. Jumbo, Carlskale W. Wood, and Black Knight.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1907 received from H. B. Hereward, W. Biddle, James Dobson, Cant. No Name (Canterbury), Emile Frau, F. E. Page, Donald Mackay, Shalforth, Shrapnel, J. B. (Blyth), W. W. Nicholson, Sudbury (Suffolk), Alice A. Lawton, Chirgusius Ruria, O. W. Crookley, A. Chapman, Senex Solitarius, B. H. C. (Salisbury), Pierce Jones, No Name (South Kensington), F. F. (Brussels), C. S. Wood, J. M. (Dublin), Major Sole (Torquay), J. A. H. O. Nixon, Anna M. Kilner, Jumbo, Cryptotype, Pierna, Dr. F. S. R. H. Brooks, Bosworth, E. L. G. Rumbelow, Rumbelow, F. J. Velle, Alpha, E. J. Winter Wood, J. Hall, A. P. Mosley, Rev. R. Gibbings, E. L. G. J. B. Gyp, E. E. H. Pilgrim, Black Knight, W. Dewse, A. C. Hunt, G. Huskisson, Jupiter Junior, J. G. Anstee, G. W. Law, Harry Springthorpe, G. Seymour, H. Blacklock, A. Harper, N. S. Harris, A. W. Scrutton, Otto Fudler (Ghent), T. H. Holdron, R. T. Kemp, W. Hillier, J. L. Greenaway, H. K. Adwary, A. M. Porter, G. S. Oldfield, E. Casella (Paris), F. Ferris, S. Bullen, L. Falcon (Antwerp), R. Jessop, Ben Nevis, B. L. Southwell, Thomas Waters, S. Lowndes, L. Sharwood, and Ernest Sharwood.

PROBLEM No. 1909.

By J. J. WATTS.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

THE VIENNA TOURNAMENT.

The following Game, between Messrs. BLACKBURNE and STEINITZ, was played in the nineteenth round of the above Tourney.

(Ruy Lopez.)

WHITE (Mr. B.)	BLACK (Herr S.)	WHITE (Mr. B.)	BLACK (Herr S.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	17. Kt to Kt 8rd	B to Q sq
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd	18. Kt to B 5th	P to B 3rd
3. B to Kt 4th	P to Q B 3rd	19. P to Q R 4th	P to Q 4th
4. B to R 4th	K Kt to K 2nd
5. P to Q 4th
This effectively prevents Black developing his game by way of P to K Kt 3rd.
6.	P takes P	20. P takes Kt P	R P takes P
6. Kt takes P	Kt takes Kt	21. B to K 3rd	P takes P
7. Q takes Kt	P to Q Kt 4th	22. K R to Q sq	Q to Q B 2nd
8. B to Kt 3rd	P to Q 3rd	23. Q to B 3rd	R to K 4th
9. P to Q B 3rd	P to Q B 4th
10. Q to Q sq	B to Kt 2nd
11. Castles	Q to Q 2nd
Obviously, it would have been imprudent to have captured the Pawn.
12. R to K sq	P to B 5th	24. R to Q 7th
13. B to B 2nd	Kt to Kt 3rd
14. Kt to Q 2nd	B to K 2nd
15. Kt to B sq	Castles (K R)
16. Q to R 5th	Q R to K sq

The first series of matches in this tourney was brought to a conclusion on the 31st ult., the pairing and result of the sixteenth and seventeenth rounds being as follows:—

SIXTEENTH ROUND.	SEVENTEENTH ROUND.
Blackburne ... 0½	Englisch ... 0½
Bruby ... 1	Fleissig ... 0½
Meitner ... 0	Mackenzie ... 1
Paulsen ... 1	Paulsen ... 0½
Steinitz ... 1	Schwarz ... 0
Ware ... 0	Winawer ... 1
Weiss ... 0	Winawer ... 0½
Wittek ... 0½	Englisch ... 0½
Zukertort ... 1	Bruby ... 1
	Ware ... 0
	Weiss ... 1
	Blackburne ... 0
	Mason ... 0

The total score of each competitor in the one-game tourney was, therefore:—

Mackenzie ... 12½	Englisch ... 9½	Schwarz ... 8½	Fleissig ... 6
Winawer ... 12	Bruby ... 9½	Paulsen ... 7	Tschigorin ... 6
Steinitz ... 11½	Zukertort ... 9½	Bird ... 6½	Meitner ... 5½
Blackburne ... 10	Noa ... 9	Weiss ... 6½	Ware ... 4½
Mason ... 10	Wittek ... 9

British and American amateurs will be equally pleased to observe that Captain Mackenzie has kept the first place in the score list throughout the first series of matches. He has had strokes of luck, as well as a share of ill-fortune; but, in a tourney of players amongst whom there can hardly be said to be one of second-rate force, his performance must be ranked as one of great brilliancy, fully justifying the high opinion of his powers entertained by his friends in England and America.

The second series of matches was commenced on the 1st inst., and appended is the result of the play down to Saturday last. Dr. Noa retired from the competition after the seventeenth round; and, according to the regulations of the tourney, each of the other competitors score a game against him, precisely as if he had played and lost it:—

EIGHTEENTH ROUND.	NINETEENTH ROUND.
Bird ... 0	Tschigorin ... 1
Fleissig ... 0	Englisch ... 1
Meitner ... 1	Noa ... 0
Paulsen ... 1	Paulsen ... 0
Steinitz ... 0	Schwarz ... 0½
Ware ... 1	Winawer ... 1
Weiss ... 0	Ware ... 0
Wittek ... 0	Weiss ... 0
Winawer ... 0½	Mackenzie ... 0½
Zukertort ... 1	Bruby ... 0

TWENTIETH ROUND.
Bird ... 0	Englisch ... 1
Blackburne ... 0	Bruby ... 1
Paulsen ... 0	Mason ... 1
Schwarz ... 0	Meitner ... 1
Steinitz ... 1	Mackenzie ... 0

The score on Saturday, the 3rd inst., on the conclusion of the twentieth round stood as follows:—Mackenzie and Steinitz, 13½; Mason and Winawer, 13; Englisch, 12½; Blackburne, 12; Zukertort, 11½; Bruby, 11; Wittek, 9½; Noa and Schwarz, 9; Meitner, 8½; Paulsen and Weiss, 8; Bird, 7½; Fleissig and Tschigorin, 7; Ware, 6½.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated Feb. 23, 1882) of Mr. Henry Charles Newton, late of Rathbone-place, who died on April 7 last, at No. 12, Brunswick-square, was proved on the 22nd ult. by Arthur Henry Newton, the son, Arthur Anderson West, and George Saugster Green, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £125,000. The testator bequeaths £1500 to the Royal Academy of Arts of London, upon trust, to pay the interest annually in one sum, to some person of good repute, but in indigent circumstances, being the widow of a painter in oil or water-colours, a native of Great Britain or Ireland, such widow to be resident in England, Wales, Scotland, or Ireland, to be selected by the President and four senior members of the council of the Academy; and to his wife, Mrs. Ellen Newton, an annuity of £500. Having already given shares to a large amount in Winsor and Newton (Limited) to his son Arthur Henry, to his daughter Mrs. Ellen Carter West, and to her husband, he now bequeaths the remainder of his shares in the said company to his daughters Mrs. Eliza Caroline Rogers, Miss Julia Newton, and Mrs. Caroline Green, and to his son, Charles Carter Newton. There are specific bequests of books and pictures to children, sons-in-law, and grandchildren, and pecuniary legacies to two grandsons, and to certain of the employees of his late firm and also of the present company. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held upon trust for his six children.

The will (dated March 4, 1871), with two codicils (dated June 28, 1875, and Sept. 5, 1876), of Miss Mercy Elizabeth Terry, late of Odiham, in the county of Southampton, who died on Feb. 9 last, was proved on the 18th ult. by William Brooks and John Terry, the surviving executors, the value of the personal estate being upwards of £91,000. The testatrix gives £1000 to the Church Missionary Society; £100 to the National Benevolent Institution, Bloomsbury-place; certain freehold and leasehold property and £3333 6s. 8d., Consols, to her nephew, Michael Terry; and legacies to relatives, friends, executors, and servants. The residue of her real and personal estate is to be divided between her nieces, Ann Ellen Terry and Augusta Terry, in equal moieties.

The will (dated Nov. 16, 1880) of Mr. William Burr, late of Croft House, Keighley, Yorkshire, solicitor, who died on March 27 last, was proved on the 9th inst. by Henry John Hope, and George Burr, the nephews, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to more than £59,000. Subject to legacies to nephews, nieces, and housekeeper, the testator leaves all his real and personal estate, upon trust, for his daughter, Mrs. Catherine Fanny Hope.

The will (dated Feb. 11, 1875), with a codicil (dated Feb. 12, 1879), of Mr. William Sergeant Roden, J.P., D.L., formerly of Etruria Hall, near Stoke-on-Trent, but late of No. 12, St. Mary's-square, Paddington, who died on April 25 last, was proved on the 19th ult. by Richard Fothergill, and Richard Brown Roden, the brother, the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £28,000. The testator leaves to his sisters, Emily, Ada, and Alice, £1000 each; to George William Roden, £500; to his executors, £100 each; and all his real estate and the residue of the personality to his son, William Theodore Roden. The deceased was formerly M.P. for Stoke-upon-Trent.

The will (dated Nov. 17, 1877), with a codicil (dated Aug. 4, 1880), of Mr. George Hammond, Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, who died on April 6 last at 15, Suffolk-street, Pall-mall East, was proved on the 12th ult. by the Right Hon. Edmund, Baron Hammond, the brother and sole executor, the personal estate amounting to over £25,000. The testator bequeaths £2000 to the Warden and scholars of the College of Scholars of Merton, as a small mark of the gratitude he feels for the many benefits he has received from the College; £100 of the legacy is directed to be laid out in the purchase of plate, to be inscribed with his arms, for the use of the College. There are some legacies to nephews and nieces; and the residue of his property is divided between his brother, Lord Hammond, and his sister, Mrs. Margaret Chetwynd Stapleton.

The will (dated June 13, 1881) of Sir John Nodes Dickinson, formerly of No. 5, Marlborough Buildings, Bath, and of No. 33, York-street, Portman-square, but late of No. 93, Piazza di Spagna, Rome, who died on March 16 last, was proved on the 16th ult. by Dame Helen Dickinson, the widow, and Miss Helen Mary Dickinson, the daughter, the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £21,000. The only persons interested under the will, which is confined to the disposal of his personal property, are testator's wife and daughter.

The will (dated May 9, 1881), with a codicil (dated March 17 following), of Mr. William Coles, late of Mount House, Dorking, who died on March 30 last, was proved on the 19th ult. by the Rev. Thomas Sterling Coles, the brother, and the Rev. Richard Edward Coles, the nephew, the executors, the value of the personal estate being over £9000. The testator leaves to his brother George £300; and the residue of his estate and effects, real and personal, upon trust, to pay the income to his sisters, Anna Maria, Sarah Ann, and Mary Caroline, for their lives, with benefit of survivorship, and on the death of the survivor he gives £2000 each to the British and Foreign Bible Society and the Church Missionary Society; £1000 to the Church Pastoral Aid Society; £500 to the London Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews; £300 to the Moravian Society; £200 to the London Society and Domestic Bible Mission; and the ultimate residue to the British and Foreign Bible Society.

The will (dated July 16, 1867) of the Right Hon. John Cadwalader, Baron Eskine, formerly of No. 48, Upper Seymour-street, but late of Ettenham, Torquay, who died on March 28 last, was proved on the 25th ult. by the Right Hon. Mary Louisa Cullen, Dowager Baroness Eskine, the widow and sole executrix, to whom he devises and bequeaths all his real and personal estate.

The will (dated Oct. 8, 1877) of Rosina, Dowager Lady Lytton, late of Glenômera, Upper Sydenham, who died on March 12 last, was proved on the 26th ult. by Miss Louisa Devey, the acting executrix. The testatrix wills and bequeaths to her good and more than valued friends, Louisa Devey and Rose Devey, absolutely all that she may die possessed of, including the manuscript of her autobiography.

Lord Derby laid the foundation-stone of the new county sessions house at Liverpool on the 1st inst.

Lord Lucan returned 15 per cent to his tenants at the half-yearly rent audit recently held at Macclesfield.

In excavating clay on Lord Normanton's estate, near Crowland, the workmen have exposed about three acres of a subterranean forest 10 ft. below the surface. Some of the trees are in an admirable state of preservation, and one gigantic oak measures eighteen yards in length. The trees are in such a condition that the oak can be distinguished from the elm. A kind of fir seems to be most abundant, the wood of which is so hard that the trees can be drawn out of the clay in their entirety.

ADVANCED PHARMACY.

LACTOPEPTINE, AN ABSOLUTE CURE

FOR DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION.

NOT A SECRET REMEDY—FORMULA STATED ON EACH BOTTLE.

ITS GENUINENESS AND PURITY CERTIFIED BY THE HIGHEST CHEMICAL AND MEDICAL AUTHORITY.

The most serious outcome of modern social life is the prevalence of Dyspepsia and Indigestion. No one is altogether free from one or other of the manifold forms in which this scourge attacks the human body, and no dietetic rules can be framed which would insure deliverance from the insidious attacks of this foe. There is no age and no condition of life exempt from its assaults. Its tortures are as certain to get hold of us as that we live. The extended use and adoption of Lactopeptine by the Medical Profession affords indisputable evidence that its therapeutic value has been thoroughly established in cases of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Impoverished Blood, General Debility, Intestinal and Wasting Diseases of Children, Chronic Diarrhoea, Constipation, Headache, Nausea, and in every description of stomach ailment or disease, and even where all other known remedies have failed and proved ineffectual. One of the chief features of Lactopeptine (and the one which must gain it a preference over all digestive remedies) is, that it precisely represents in composition the natural digestive juices of the stomach, pancreas, and salivary glands, and will therefore readily dissolve all foods.

From "Retrospect of Practical Medicine and Surgery," July, 1877.

"A glance at the formula of Lactopeptine would convince even the most sceptical of the valuable results that must ensue through its administration."

From "The British Medical Journal."

"We have submitted the Lactopeptine to trial, and can confidently recommend it."

From "The London Medical Times and Gazette."

"Where we have had an opportunity of presenting it, its employment has been decidedly satisfactory."

From the "London Medical Press and Circular."

"Such a formula is a desideratum, considering that the preparations of Pepsin now in use have disappointed the expectations of many practitioners."

From the "Physician and Pharmacist."

"We have no hesitation in affirming that Lactopeptine has proved itself to be the most important addition ever made to our Pharmacopoeia."

From the "Physician's Monitor."

"We have in this preparation, we believe, the only perfect dyspeptic remedy that can be produced, for it supplies those deficient natural elements that are required to perfectly digest food, and the digestive organs are soon restored to their normal condition."

Professor ATTFIELD, Ph.D., F.R.S., F.I.C., F.C.S.,

PROFESSOR OF PRACTICAL CHEMISTRY TO THE PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN, REPORTS AS FOLLOWS:—

"London, May 3, 1882.

"Lactopeptine having been prescribed for some of my friends, during the past five years—apparently with very satisfactory results—its formula, which is stated on the bottles, and its general characters, have become well known to me. But recently the Manufacturer of this article has asked me to witness its preparation on the large scale, to take samples of its ingredients from large bulks and examine them and also mix them myself, and to prepare Lactopeptine from ingredients made under my own direction; doing all this with the object of certifying that Lactopeptine is what its maker professes it to be, and that its ingredients are in quality the best that can be obtained. This I have done, and I now report that the almost inodorous and tasteless pulverulent substance termed Lactopeptine is a mixture of the three chief agents which enable ourselves and all animals to digest food—that is to say, Lactopeptine is a skilfully-prepared combination of MEAT-CONVERTING, FAT-CONVERTING, and STARCH-CONVERTING materials, acidified with those small proportions of the acids that are always present in the healthy stomach; all being disseminated in an appropriate vehicle—namely, powdered sugar of milk. The acids used at the factory—lactic and hydrochloric—are the best to be met with, and are perfectly combined to form a permanent preparation; the milk sugar is absolutely pure; the powder known as 'diastase' or starch-digesting (bread, potato, and pastry-digesting) material, as well as the 'pancreatin,' or fat-digesting ingredients, are as good as any I can prepare; while the pepsin is much superior to that ordinarily used in medicine. Indeed, as regards this chief ingredient—pepsin—I have only met with one European or American specimen equal to that made and used by the manufacturer of Lactopeptine. A perfectly parallel series of experiments showed that

Of the many complaints in which Lactopeptine has shown most prompt and decided success none have been more quickly relieved than the various forms of headache, including nervous and sick headache; and it is safe to say, that nine cases out of ten of this distressing complaint are due to inactive or sluggish liver, with constipated bowels. A few doses of Lactopeptine soon restore these organs to their proper functions, and the headache ceases. In the same manner they relieve all forms of biliousness, such as dizziness, nausea, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, loss of appetite, pain in the side, sallow skin, &c. A dose taken immediately after eating causes the process of digestion to begin at once, prevents dyspepsia and indigestion, with sour rising of food from the stomach, and relieves the distress caused by too hearty eating.

Every person suffering from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, or any symptom of a "Stomach out of Order" should send for a Pamphlet respecting the positive cure by the use of Lactopeptine, and read the cases and letters from Medical Men in every part of the world, showing results in practice. More than 1000 Doctors, 10,000 Chemists, the entire Medical Press have certified as to the remarkable efficacy of Lactopeptine. It is rational in the theory of its action, and cures all disorders of the Digestive Organs.

Lactopeptine can be obtained of all Chemists, and may also be sent by post to any address on receipt of 4s. 6d. Each Bottle contains forty-eight 10-grain doses. It is agreeable to the taste, and may be taken in either wine or water, after meals.

Copy of Letter signed by leading Chemists and Druggists, throughout the country:—"The undersigned, Wholesale Druggists and Dealers in Medicines, have pleasure in stating that we have sold the Lactopeptine since its introduction, and find it to be an article of increasing sale and reputation."

FOR WANT OF SPACE A FEW ONLY ARE GIVEN.

James Wooley, Sons, and Co.; William Mather, Manchester; Goodall, Backhouse, and Co., Hirst, Brook, Hamilton, Long, and Co. (Lim.), Dublin; Anderson and Adams, Dublin; Boileau and Boyd, Dublin; W. Webb, Manager, Apothecaries' Hall, Dublin; W. and H. Hattrick and Co., Glasgow; Brown Brothers and Co., Glasgow; Glasgow Apothecary Company, Glasgow; Glasgow New Apothecary Company, Glasgow; Michael Rogerson and Son, Bradford; Wm. King, Huddersfield; Bradly and Bliss, Reading; Wyleys and Co., Coventry and London; Natl. Smith and Co., Cheltenham; Evans, Gadd, and Co., Exeter; Francis Earle, Hull; Davies and Hughes, Bath; Fredk. Clifton, Derby; W. Procter and Son, Newcastle-on-Tyne; Glaisyer and Kemp, Brighton; Thomas H. Cruise, Southsea; Thomas R. Lester, Cork; John Thompson, Liverpool; Fleming and Son, Wolverhampton; Jno. Johns and Co., Southampton; Gratatou and Co., Belfast; W. and H. M. Goulding, Cork; Hempstead and Co., St. Leonard's; Clark and Pinkerton, Edinburgh; Raimes and Co., Edinburgh, York, and Liverpool; Jas. Sim and Co., Aberdeen; Wm. Foggett, Thirsk; John McGuffie and Co., Liverpool; Jas. McCormick, Castlederg, Ireland; John Saville, York; Saml. Jas. Coley, Stroud, &c., &c.

We have also the pleasure to refer to any of the London Wholesale Druggists and Medicine Houses, among whom may be mentioned—

Apothecaries' Hall; General Apothecaries' Company; Allen and Habburys; Ashton and Parsons; J. Bell and Co.; Barron, Harvey, and Co.; Barclay and Sons; Burgoyne and Co.; Basse Brothers and Co.; Barron, Squire, and Co.; Hattley and Watts; Burgess, Willow, and Francis; Curling and Co.; Corbyn and Co.; Davy, Yates, and Routledge; W. Edwards and Son; Evans, Lescher, and Webb; Herrings and Co.; Hodgkinsons, Preston, and King; Hearon, Squire, and Francis; Hopkin and Williams; Horner and Sons; C. J. Hewlett and Sons; A. S. Hill and Son; R. Hovenden and Sons; Langton, Edden, Hicks, and Clark; Lynch and Co.; Maw, Son, and Thompson; R. H. Millard and Sons; May, Roberts, and Co.; Newbery and Sons; Sanger and Sons; Savory and Moore; W. Sutton and Co.; J. C. Thompson (Lim.); Wright, Layman, and Umney; C. H. Warner and Co.; &c., &c.

And to the principal Continental, Colonial, and Indian Firms, all of whom supply the genuine Lactopeptine.

Lactopeptine is prepared only by JOHN M. RICHARDS, Manufacturing Chemist, Laboratory, Great Russell-street, London.

any given weight of acidified pepsin alone at first acts somewhat more rapidly than Lactopeptine containing the same weight of the same pepsin. Sooner or later, however, the action of the Lactopeptine overtakes and outstrips that of pepsin alone—due, no doubt, to the meat-digesting, as well as fat-digesting, power of the pancreatin contained in the Lactopeptine. My conclusion is that Lactopeptine is a most valuable digesting agent, and superior to pepsin alone.

JOHN ATTFIELD.

Lactopeptine wholly supersedes the administration of purgatives—salts, cathartic or aerated waters. It reduces the labour required from the stomach; gives it, when weak, the necessary period for repose and recuperation; and enables it to carry out its natural operations without impairing any function. Lactopeptine never fails to bring about the digestion of food in a manner perfectly identical to that obtained under the influence of the natural gastric juices, and enable the process of digestion to be completed without straining the power of the stomach. It also restores the deranged and torpid liver to its normal condition and healthful action; removes and prevents Constipation by securing a natural and regular action of the bowels, and relieves those unpleasant symptoms which attend a diseased or morbid condition of the Liver, Stomach, and Bowels.

Lactopeptine is not purgative or relaxing in its effect. Many persons have a wrong idea of this medicine, and suppose it has not had its proper result unless a violent purge and action of the bowels immediately follow a dose. Medicines which violently purge, simply pass out of the system, usually leave the bowels constipated, seldom remove the cause of trouble, or improve the general health.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES AT LEICESTER.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2250.—VOL. LXXX.

SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1882.

WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE.
By Post, 6d.

FUNERAL OF GARIBALDI AT CAPRERA:—PLACE WHERE THE BODY WAS TO HAVE BEEN CREMATED. THE BODY LYING IN STATE.—SEE PAGE 589.

BIRTH.

On the 7th inst., at Yeo Vale, Bideford, the Lady Ruthven, of a son.

MARRIAGE.

On the 8th inst., at the Presbyterian Church of England, Regent-square, London, by the Rev. J. Oswald Dykes, D.D., assisted by the Rev. R. A. Mitchell, M.A., of the Free Church of Scotland, Aberdeen, brother-in-law of the bride, William Duncan White, fourth son of the late Thomas White, Tayport, Fifeshire, and nephew of George Duncan of Coldrey, Hants, to Jessie Campbell, third daughter of Adam Young, C.B., deputy chairman of Inland Revenue.

DEATHS.

On the 11th inst., suddenly, at his residence, 23, Craven-hill-gardens, Vice-Admiral Robert Hall, C.B., late Naval Secretary, aged 64.
On the 2nd inst., at Brighton, William Leverton Donaldson, barrister-at-law, and late deputy Coroner for East Middlesex, aged 43.

* The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 24, 1882.

SUNDAY, JUNE 18.
Second Sunday after Trinity.	Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m., 3 p.m., 7 p.m.
Battle of Waterloo, 1815.	St. James's, noon.
Morning Lessons: Judges iv.; Acts ii. 22. Evening Lessons: Judges v. or vi. 11; 1 Peter iii. 8-iv. 7.	Whitehall, 11 a.m. Rev. F. Paget; 3 p.m., Rev. Dr. Thornton. Boyle Lecture V.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev. II. W. Tucker; 3.15 p.m., Archdeacon Hessey; 7 p.m., Rev. H. B. Otley.	Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Henry White, the Chaplain; 7 p.m., Rev. A. G. Meugens, Vicar of Burton Joyce.
MONDAY, JUNE 19.
Asiatic Society, 4 p.m.	British Architects' Institute, 8 p.m.
Grand Ball to Mayors, &c., Guildhall.	Caledonian Ball, Willis's Rooms.
TUESDAY, JUNE 20.
The Queen's Accession, 1837.	Statistical Society 7.45 p.m. Mr. W. A. Guy on 250 Years of Smallpox in London.
Cambridge Commencement.	Zoological Society, 8.30 p.m.
Humane Society, 3.30 p.m.
French Musical Festival, Albert Hall.
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21.
Longest day.	National Society, anniversary, 3 p.m.
Botanic Society, special promenade.	Dialectical Society, 8 p.m., Mr. E. Vansittart Neal on Associated or Meteorological Society, 8 p.m.
Geological Society, 8 p.m.	Unitarian Homes.
Meteorological Society, 7 p.m., Papers by Rev. F. W. Stow, and Messrs. D. Gill, C. S. Hudson, and R. H. Twigg.	State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
THURSDAY, JUNE 22.
Botanic Society, evening fête, 8 to 12.	Society of Antiquaries, 8.30 p.m.
Sixth Symphony Concert (for Royal Coll. of Music), St. James's Hall, 8.	Norfolk Agricultural Society, Norwich (two days).
FRIDAY, JUNE 23.
Moon's first quarter, 6.1 p.m.	Quekett Microscopical Club, 8 p.m.
Cambridge Easter Term ends.	United Service Institution, 8 p.m.
Bradford Technical School to be opened by the Prince of Wales.	Major J. C. Arlath on the New Greek Frontier.
SATURDAY, JUNE 24.
Nativity of St. John the Baptist.	Botanic Society, 3.45 p.m.
Midsummer Day.	Wanstead Orphan Asylum, anniversary—the Duke of Connaught in the chair.
Newspaper Press Fund, anniversary dinner—Prince Leopold chairman.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.
Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF					THERMOM.		WIND.
	Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum.	Minimum.	Direction.	Force.	Direction.	Force.
May	Inches.	°	°	%	0-16	°	°	Miles.
23	30.150	60.0	49.5	70	7	69.6	49.0	SSW.	167	0.000
24	30.150	59.0	47.1	67	7	70.1	48.3	SSW. W.	91	0.000
25	30.220	59.2	43.5	55	7	67.8	51.6	NW. N.	309	0.000
26	30.229	58.2	42.3	54	6	64.9	47.3	NNE. NE.	315	0.000
27	30.245	58.8	41.3	58	6	60.8	45.0	N. NNE.	457	0.000
28	30.018	55.4	47.4	76	10	60.5	50.3	NNE. E.	514	0.020
29	29.716	59.4	54.3	84	8	68.5	53.0	E. N. SW.	102	0.130
30	29.674	67.4	50.5	79	8	67.3	62.1	SW. SSW.	304	0.075
June	29.779	56.5	50.3	81	10	62.5	49.8	SW. SSW.	543	0.120
1	29.691	56.6	52.3	87	9	60.5	55.5	SW. SSW.	314	0.045
2	29.754	57.4	43.9	69	7	65.6	51.8	SSW. W. SSW.	229	0.015
3	29.741	55.0	48.1	78	10	63.0	49.2	WSW. SSW.	258	0.330
4	29.417	52.3	45.2	79	8	59.9	49.5	WNW. WSW.	310	0.275
5	29.679	54.3	53.1	96	9	59.0	51.7	WSW. WSW.	285	0.045

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m. :-

FROM MAY 23 TO JUNE 3.
Barometer (in inches) corrected	..	30.148	30.237	30.225	30.224	30.278	30.101	29.787
Temperature of Air	..	61.5	62.0	62.0	62.0	62.0	62.0	62.0
Temperature of Evaporation	..	57.0	56.0	56.0	56.0	56.0	56.0	56.0
Direction of Wind	..	W.	N.	N.	N.	N.	N.	N.
FROM JUNE 3 TO JUNE 10.
Barometer (in inches) corrected	..	29.692	29.770	29.694	29.722	29.630	29.415	29.554
Temperature of Air	..	60.1	60.7	60.3	60.6	57.5	53.2	53.2
Temperature of Evaporation	..	57.3	56.0	56.0	56.0	53.7	49.9	52.0
Direction of Wind	..	SSW.	SSW.	W.	W.	WSW.	WSW.	WSW.

BRIGHTON.—THE NEW PULLMAN LIMITED
EXPRESS, Lighted by Electricity, and fitted with the Westinghouse Automatic Brake, now runs between Victoria and Brighton.

From VICTORIA, WEEKDAYS, at 10.0 a.m. and 3.50 p.m.
From BRIGHTON, WEEKDAYS, at 1.20 p.m. and 5.45 p.m.
This new Train, specially constructed and elegantly fitted up by the Pullman Car Company, consists of four Cars, each over 56 ft. in length.

The Car "Beatrice" (Drawing-room) contains also a Ladies' Boudoir and Dressing-room.
The Car "Louise" (Parlour) contains also a separate compartment for a private party.
The Car "Victoria" contains a Buffet for Tea, Coffee, and other Light Refreshments, also a Newspaper Counter.
The Car "Maid" is appropriated for Smoking.
The whole Train is lighted by Electricity, the system being that of Edison's Incandescent Lamps in connection with Faure's system of Accumulators.
Lavatories are provided in each Car, and a separate compartment for servants is also provided in one of the Cars.
The staff attached to this Train consists of a Chief Conductor, Assistant Conductor, a Page Boy, and Two Guards.
There is Electrical communication between the several Cars and the Conductors; a passenger travelling in any one of the Cars can therefore call the attention of the Conductor by pressing one of the small Electric discs.
There is a covered gangway communication between each Car, thereby enabling the Conductors to pass from Car to Car.

BRIGHTON.—EVERY SUNDAY.—A Cheap First-Class
Train from Victoria at 10.45 a.m., calling at Clapham Junction and Croydon. Day Return Tickets, 10s.

A Pullman Drawing-room Car is run on the 10.45 a.m. Train from Victoria to Brighton, returning from Brighton by the 4.30 p.m. Train. Special Cheap Fare from Victoria, including Pullman Car, 15s. Available by these Trains only.
Tickets and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Office, 24, Regent-circus, Piccadilly, and 8, Grand Hotel-buildings, Trafalgar-square; City Office, Hays' Agency, Cornhill; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By order) J. P. KNOTT, General Manager.

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.—SEASIDE.—TWO
MONTHS, FORTNIGHTLY, and FRIDAY or SATURDAY to MONDAY (First, Second, and Third Class) TICKETS are ISSUED by all Trains at REDUCED FARES to YALMOUTH, LONDON, WELTON, WALTON-ON-THE-NAZE, WEELEY (for CLACKFORD-ON-SEA), HARWICH, DOVERCOURT, ALDBURGH, FELIXSTOWE, SOUTHWOLD, HUNSTANTON, and CROMER.
For full Particulars see Handbills and Time Tables.
London, April, 1882. WILLIAM HRET, General Manager.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
BRILLIANT SUCCESS OF THE

MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS'
SUMMER ENTERTAINMENT.

Houses crowded to repletion at every performance.
HERR EMILE VAUPEL,
the great Baritone, of the Imperial Opera, Berlin,
HAS ACHIEVED AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH ALMOST WITHOUT PRECEDENT.

His engagement can only be continued until September, when he has to return to Berlin.
The New Bill EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, SATURDAY, at Three and Eight.
Tickets and places at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall. No fees.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT.
Managers, Messrs. Alfred Reed and Corney Grain.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place, NORTHOY'S BUILDINGS, by Arthur Law; Music by Hamilton Clarke, and SMALL AND EARLY, and New Musical Sketch by Mr. Corney Grain. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight; Thursday and Saturday at Three. Admission, 1s. and 2s.; Stalls, 3s. and 5s. No fees.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.
The FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN from Nine till Seven. Admission, One Shilling; Catalogue, 6d.—GALLERY, 83, Pall-Mall.
H. F. PHILLIPS, Secretary.

THE EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of
PICTURES, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket.—Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER
COLOURS.—The NINETEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, 5, Pall-mall East, from Ten till Six. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d.; Illustrated do., 1s. ALFRED D. FAIR, Secretary.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.—SUMMER
EXHIBITION NOW OPEN, from Nine till Seven. Admission, 1s. Season Tickets, 5s.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity.")—The Times and "THE ASCENSION." "CHRIST LEAVING THE PILATUM." "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM." with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

UNDER the SPECIAL PATRONAGE of her Most Gracious Majesty the QUEEN, H.R.H. the Prince of WALES, H.R.H. the Prince of EDINBURGH, H.R.H. the Duke of EDINBURGH, H.R.H. the Duchess of EDINBURGH, H.R.H. the Duke of CAMBRIDGE, H.R.H. the Duchess of CAMBRIDGE, H.R.H. the Duke of YORK, the Very Rev. the Master of the TEMPLE.

Madame CHRISTINE NILSSON begs to announce that she will give a CONCERT in aid of the FUNDS of the ENGLISH CHURCH in PARIS (Rue d'Agnesseau), in ST. JAMES'S HALL, on FRIDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, JUNE 23, to commence at Three o'clock. Madame Christine Nilsson will be assisted by the following artists, who have most kindly volunteered their services:—Madame Trebelli, Signor Bonetti, Herr Von Zur Muhlen, Mr. Barrington Cooke, and Mr. Mass. Pianoforte, Mr. V. G. Goring, Violin, Mr. Mush. The Bijou Drawing-room Orchestra. Conductors, Signor Bevilacqua and Mr. Sidney Naylor. Solo stalls and front row balcony, one guinea; reserved seats, 10s. 6d.; unreserved balcony, 5s. Tickets to be obtained of Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street; of all the usual Concert Agents; and at Austin's Ticket Office, 28, Piccadilly. Subscriptions may be forwarded to Madame Christine Nilsson, 116, Belgrave-road, S.W.

LYCEUM.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.
Every Evening, at Eight, ROMEO AND JULIET. Romeo, Mr. Irving; Juliet, Miss Ellen Terry; Nurse, Mrs. Stirling; Messrs. Fernandez, Terrias, Howe, &c. Box-office (Mr. Hurst) open from Ten to Five. Benefit of Miss Ellen Terry and 100th Performance of "Romeo and Juliet." Saturday, June 24.

OUR HOLIDAY NUMBER.

AN ORIGINAL NOVEL,
THEY WERE MARRIED!

By Messrs. BESANT and RICE,
Will be Published June 27.

This complete Novel has a special interest in having been the last work in which the late Mr. Rice was engaged with his collaborator, Mr. Besant.

A COLOURED PICTURE,
MARRIED FOR LOVE,

By MARCUS STONE, R.A.,

Painted especially for this Holiday Number, has been admirably reproduced by Messrs. Leighton Brothers, and a copy will be presented gratis to every purchaser of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS HOLIDAY NUMBER.

One Shilling. Postage, Threepence-Halfpenny.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1882.

The news from Egypt is not only in itself very sad, and ominous of the future, but all the more exasperating because the outbreak at Alexandria might have been avoided. It pleased the Sultan, instead of complying with the wishes of the Western Powers to dispatch a small but adequate force to support the authority of the Khedive, to send Dervish Pasha with an imposing retinue to Cairo. Up to Sunday afternoon the Imperial Commissioner appeared to carry all before him. No Grand Vizier ever assumed more lofty airs, or found more obedient vassals. Arabi and his creatures, the Ulemas and their dependants, prostrated themselves before Dervish, who appeared to hold the fate of Egypt in his hands. His smiles and oracular utterances reassured the Khedive and the European Consuls; his frowns and peremptory mandates awed and depressed the malcontent officers and functionaries. If the imperious Turkish representative was enacting a comedy, he played his part well, for he telegraphed to Constantinople that everything was in train for a speedy settlement, and that the idea of holding a Conference was an absurdity. By Sunday night the pleasing illusions of Dervish and his Imperial master vanished in the stern realities of a terrible catastrophe at Alexandria. How the outbreak commenced is not precisely known. The signal for the rising of the fanatical Arab population was given in the great square, where Europeans abroad were attacked by an ever-increasing mob, all armed with bludgeons or crowbars. From three o'clock till sundown the riots went on, all Europeans in the main streets being assailed, struck down, or beaten to death by the furious mob continually reinforced from the Arab quarters, while the police passively looked on. One or two streets were completely wrecked, many shops and houses were pillaged, and the English Consul-General was dragged from his carriage and severely wounded, as were also the Greek Consul and the Italian Vice-Consul. When all the mischief was done, and more than a hundred Europeans had been killed and wounded, the military were at length called out, and order was restored. Throughout this trying crisis some twenty men-of-war lay at anchor within cannon shot of the city, but—such was the irony of events—they were unable to render any assistance to the European population, being destitute of troops.

Arabi Pasha, so obsequious to the Sultan's Envoy a few days ago, is now apparently master of the situation. The Khedive and Dervish Pasha, who for greater security have removed to Alexandria, alike depend upon that army, which has created all the difficulties, to shield European residents from the wild vengeance of Arab fanaticism. The outlook is deplorable. If, three months ago, M. Gambetta had accepted the proposal of Lord Granville, Turkish intervention might have easily prevented the ascendancy of the army, and have suppressed the crusade which has been continuously preached against Europeans, the fatal results of which were seen in the savage outbreak at Alexandria. British interests in Egypt have been sacrificed to French policy, and the Joint Control is virtually at an end. It is difficult to see how a conference of Ambassadors will mend matters; for, in respect to the Egyptian enigma, there can be as little European concert as there has been a common aim on the part of the two Western Powers. Whether or not Turkish troops are sent to occupy the country, it is only too probable that there will in the end be a covert, if not an open, alliance between the Sultan and Arabi, the supreme object of which will be to curtail, if not to undermine, European influence in Egypt. Neither has ought to fear from two Powers that cannot act together, nor from all the Powers whose divergent interests preclude cordial co-operation.

The funeral of Garibaldi at Caprera was not less romantic than his chequered life. Never was hero buried under such novel circumstances. Practical difficulties combined with the expression of Italian opinion to prevent his body being cremated, as provided by the General's will. Amid a furious storm, and in the presence of the Duke of Genoa, representing King Humbert, and Delegates from the Ministry, the Legislature, and other public bodies, the remains of the lamented Liberator, borne by some of the survivors of the Thousand of Marsala, were consigned to a temporary tomb, the eulogiums at the grave side being cut short by the boisterous weather. Very few of the hundreds of visitors who had come across from the mainland to pay their last tribute of respect to their illustrious countryman were able at once to get away from the rock-bound island, and for a day and a half they had to put up with scanty shelter and little food. The vault in which Garibaldi's coffin is deposited is not, apparently, destined to be its last resting-place. Palermo and other cities claim his remains; but it is probable, should his family consent, that they will eventually be transferred to Rome to be buried with imposing rites in the hall of the Capitol, or on the summit of the Janiculum, where Garibaldi was encamped during his desperate defence of the Eternal City in 1849. Meanwhile there have been demonstrations of reverential regard for Garibaldi's memory in the chief cities of Italy, which indicate that the man who, as appears from King Humbert's earnest message to Menotti Garibaldi, enjoyed the affection, gratitude, and admiration of his Sovereign, was not the less a popular idol. Last Sunday's processions in Rome, where a great multitude escorted a colossal bust to the Capitol, and at Naples, where a marble tablet on a funeral car was conveyed by masses of the population to the Palace, testify to the depth of the people's regret at the national loss.

The cold-blooded murder of Mr. Walter M. Bourke, a resident landowner and magistrate near Gort, and his escort, a Royal Dragoon, who were shot dead by six ruffians in broad daylight from behind a stone wall, has excited a hardly less painful sensation than the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke in Phoenix Park. The ominous significance of this crime was emphasised by cruel agrarian outrages on the same day in counties so far apart as Roscommon, Kerry, and Mayo. All were, no doubt, the work of secret societies, and probably directed, as Colonel Brackenbury suggests, by some central organisation. For months past, the unfortunate Mr. Bourke had been a doomed man, but his brave spirit could not brook precautions, the neglect of which exposed him to the bullets of his skulking murderers. Though many persons must have been privy to the crime, no arrests have been made, nor is it likely that the large rewards offered for the arrest of the assassins will avail to bring them to justice. In the eyes of the Irish peasantry killing is no murder when the moving impulse is agrarian, and we have now too evident proof that, notwithstanding temporary lulls in criminal outrages, the population of whole districts is terrorised by secret societies that bid defiance to the law and are secure against detection.

It remains to be seen whether the Irish Executive, armed with the tremendous powers intrusted to it by the Prevention of Crime Bill, will be able to cope with this lawless spirit. This measure, however, makes very slow progress in the House of Commons. A week was consumed in discussing the fourth clause, which aims at the suppression of intimidation—a weapon familiar to us under the name of "boycotting," and that enabled the Land League to secure its ascendancy throughout the greater part of Ireland. The pertinacious efforts of Mr. Parnell and his colleagues failed to obtain any material modification of this elastic clause, which was finally passed on Monday night by a majority of 258 to 33. The bill consists of thirty clauses; but most of those yet to be discussed will, perhaps, excite less antagonism than the fourth. The failure to adopt new Rules of Procedure leaves the House of Commons, to a great extent, at the mercy of the Land Leaguers, who would be able to waste much time before "urgency" could possibly be voted. The Prime Minister, therefore, hesitates to have recourse to an expedient that might not eventually expedite business. Possibly before the dawn of July and genial weather—if such should be vouchsafed to us—the Crime Bill will have emerged from the House of Commons.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Not in a "peaceful urn"—at least, yet awhile—are the ashes of Giuseppe Garibaldi to rest. Nothing could have been simpler or plainer than the directions which he left for the incineration of his mortal coil. There is among non-clericals in Italy no kind of prejudice against cremation; and the members of Garibaldi's family were ostensibly not at all averse from carrying out the injunctions of their illustrious chief; while in so sequestered a spot as Caprera the burning of the hero's body could surely have been carried out without any difficulty. I cannot help thinking that there was something or somebody behind the scenes to suggest the precipitate abandonment of the cremation scheme; and it would not be in the least surprising if, within a few months, there arose throughout the Peninsula a popular cry of "Garibaldi in Rotonda!" There are, I doubt it not, a vast number of Italians who hold that the only fitting place for Garibaldi's bones is at Rome, in the Pantheon of Agrippa, in the Best of all Good Company, by the side of Victor Emmanuel of Savoy, and Raffaele Sanzio of Urbino.

With the ashes of the Prince and the Painter those of the Patriot might well mingle. Of the sometime leader of the Thousand of Marsala and Dictator of Naples it may indeed be said:—

He might have been a King,
But that he understood
How much it is a meaner thing
To be unjustly great than honourably good.

I have no remembrance of where the lines which I have quoted occur; and I fancy that I have not quoted them correctly; but they have been running in my head ever since I heard of Garibaldi's death. I think that they refer to Cromwell. Are they by Andrew Marvell? I am ashamed to say that I know nothing poetical of A. M.'s writing beyond "Where the remote Bermudas Ride." "The Wanton Troopers riding by, Have shot my Fawn, and it will Die" (an exquisitely pathetic lyric), and the magnificent lines on the execution of Charles I., ending—

And while the armed Bands
Did clap their bloody hands,
He nothing common did, nor mean,
Upon that memorable scene;
Nor called the gods, in vulgar spite,
To vindicate his helpless might;
But with his eager eye
The axe's edge did try;
Then bowed his comely head
Down, as upon a bed.

Eager, I am nearly sure, is wrong: there is some other epithet. Is it piercing? But I never learned the lines out of a book. They were taught to me nearly five-and-forty years ago by a dear sister, when I was a child and blind.

Recorders of omens, forget not to tabulate the terrible storm that swept over the sea at Caprera while Garibaldi was being buried. Such a storm raged in England on the day that Oliver died. Such another storm, rooting up tall trees and hurling huge masses of rock adown the valleys, desolated St. Helena while the unquiet spirit of Napoleon the Great was passing away; and Tacitus relates that the insurrection of the Britons under Boadicea against the Romans was presaged by an awful tempest. "Strange noises were heard in the house of assembly, and loud howlings in the theatre. In the estuary of the Thames there was an appearance like that of a sunken town. The sea assumed the colour of blood, and human forms appeared to be left on the shore by the ebbing tide." The other day, it is stated, the superstitious people of La Maddalena attributed the storm to the anger of the Eternals at the disobedience of the family of Garibaldi to his last wishes.

Is it not nearly time that, in the interest of the "well of English," not "pure and undefiled"—in view of about one third of our speech being of Latin, or of Norman-French derivation, there is no such thing—but tolerably pellucid, we made a stand against the use of the word "prestige" as a significant of political power and influence? I read in a daily paper as follows:—

Jealousy of the Porte is the word of the enigma, the secret of the amazing muddle which has been made in this matter from first to last. It is natural enough on the part of France. Face to face with fanaticism in North Africa, a feeling provoked by the Tunisian scandal, our ally is bitterly opposed to any increase of Mohammedan prestige in that part of the world.

"The word of the enigma," by-the-way, is a literal translation of a French idiom, "le mot de l'enigme." It is as French as Horace Walpole's "She is dead, rich." Now the times have been so hard lately, and the attentions to my knocker on the part of the collectors of the Queen's Taxes, parochial, gas, and water rates, so pressing, that I have not been able to purchase a Littré, a Spiers, or a Napoléon Landais. But I have a good store of French dictionaries; and I hope that there is no grievous error in assuming that "prestige" is a comparatively new French word. It is not in Ménage's "Origines de la Langue Française" (1650); it is not in Guy Miège (1699). I find it in the French section of M. de Sejourant's "Nouveau Dictionnaire François-Espagnol" (1775); and what are its Spanish equivalents? Why, "engaño," "ilusión"—deceit, deception. Next door to it comes "prestidigitateur," in Spanish "embaucador," "impostor."

In Professor Roubaud's "French and English Dictionary" (Cassell, 1882) "prestige" is rendered "enchantment," "fascination," "deception," "illusion;" and Ogilvie's "Imperial Dictionary" (Blackie, 1850) gives "prestiges" (Lat. "prestigia"), "juggling tricks," "impostures." What right have we to use the word "prestige" in the sense of power or influence? I am well aware that in some very modern English dictionaries "prestige" is defined as meaning reputation arising from past deeds or conduct; but I want to know on what authority we have perverted the word "prestige" from its original meaning of deluding or cheating folks. If I were to write in a leading article—"The locuspocus of England should be felt in every bazar from Bogglywallah to the Hindoo Koosh;" or, "the Bamboozling of Britain is no longer preponderant in the Mediterranean"; or, "how are we to restore the hanky-panky of the British Empire in South Africa?" the critics would raise the cry of "hæro!" after me; yet I contend that I should be quite as fully justified in using any one of the terms I have cited as in talking about "prestige," according to the original meaning of the word.

"Atlas," my friend, that which I wrote about a "bâton sinister" to the contrary notwithstanding, there is such a thing as a "bar-sinister." But it is in French, not in English heraldry, and it does not in the least imply illegitimacy. In the Third Edition, just published, of Mr. J. E. Cussan's instructive "Handbook of Heraldry" (London: Chatto and Windus), I find, under the head of "barre," "bend sinister," and, furthermore, "The bar (the horizontal band across the escutcheon) is unknown to French armorists; with them the fess has no diminutive (our fess is a broader bar); that which they designate a barre is with us a bend sinister."

To verify Mr. Cassan's plain statement I looked out the article "Blason," in D'Alembert and Diderot's great French Encyclopædia, and therein I found the shield of a Monsieur Verteuil, of Bordeaux, figured as "tiercé (divided into three parts) en barre d'argent." Verteuil's "barre" is a bend sinister.

It happens that this Handbook of Heraldry has been productive in my mind of a very curious association of ideas. The tasteful cover of Mr. Cassan's volume is adorned with a crowned shield, "charged" with fifteen "roundles," "or," which, I suppose, are "besants." They are arranged in pyramidal form. Where, I asked, had I seen something resembling that cognizance before? Why, in the engraved works of Stefano della Bella (the artist who, they say, always began his figures at the feet, and so worked upwards, among whose "Capricci," etched for the Grand Duke of Tuscany, I find a magnificent achievement of the arms of the Medici family, a crowned shield charged with six golden balls in high relief, arranged as two pyramids, the bases of which are parallel. The ball forming the apex of the topmost pyramid is charged with three fleurs de lys.

But in the "Blason" of the Encyclopædia the six roundles, so the perpendicular lines of the etching show, are of the tincture gules, and are consequently not "besants" but "tortaux"; the which persuasion lands me right in the middle of a note addressed this very week to the editor of the World by Signor Francesco Vineca, the painter of a wonderfully clever picture called "The Queen of the Revels," in the instant Royal Academy Exhibition.

The matter of Signor Vineca's letter does not concern me; and as I am not, in this case, an art-critic, I must say nothing about the artistic merits of the picture. Still, I dare say that a multitude of outsiders have been as much puzzled as I myself have been to determine the nationality of the roystering cavaliers and romping damsels who are doing riotous homage to the Queen of the Revels. The men might be the swash-buckling tosspots of Terburg or Jordaeus; the buxom lasses might be so many participants in one of Rubens's kermesses. A pile of wine-flasks, with casings of wickerwork, in the foreground, suggest, it is true, that the scene is laid in Italy; but in what part of the Peninsula?

After long searching I espied towards the centre of the composition a white banner, emblazoned with sundry "tortaux gules," the Medician cognizance. The revels were evidently taking place on Tuscan soil.

But, looking at the crowned shield with its golden balls, as etched by Della Bella, a fresh associated idea starts up, and pursues quite a contrary direction. Stefano's Medician trophy might be the cognizance of a couple of pawnbrokers who had gone into partnership, and "joined arms." Are we quite so sure that the Three Golden Balls displayed by our Uncle are "the ancient arms of Lombardy," as they are commonly supposed to be? May they not be instead the truncated achievement of the Medici? It is worthy of note that the "Lombard" bankers and money-lenders who, about the middle of the thirteenth century, after the expulsion of the Jews, established themselves in London, are described as coming from Genoa, Lucca, Florence, and Venice, none of which cities are in Lombardy proper.

Mem.: "Jacob Larwood" in his "History of Signboards" (Chatto, 1868) says, p. 128, that the arms of the Medici were "five besants azure, whence the balls formerly were blue." This is manifestly erroneous, since the "besant" must necessarily be "or," and the "roundle" which is tintured "azure" cannot be a "besant," and must necessarily be a "heute"; and, moreover, the Medician roundle in the Encyclopædia "Blason" and in Signor Francesco Vineca's picture are neither "or" nor "azure," but "gules."

I must "hang up" the question of the authorship of "The Whole Duty of Man" for a week, for the simple reason that since the last appearance of the "Echoes" I have received at least fifty additional letters, the contents of which I have not yet had time to master, and all bearing on the "W. D. of M." I may just hint that the evidence of authorship seems to preponderate very strongly in favour of Dorothy, Lady Packington.

Touching "Packington's Pound," my very old friend Mr. Edward Draper (in our youth, if we did not precisely "piddle" the burn) or "pu" the gowans fine," at least we explored the same "fourpenny box" at the bookstalls and collected the same penny prints and halfpenny "yards of songs" from the old lady who displayed her stock-in-trade in a large gig umbrella in Oxford-street (just where the iron gates are, leading to Hanover-square), writes me that the air concerning which I made inquiry last week is mentioned in "Chappell's Popular Melodies of the Olden Time" as having been quoted in Ben Jonson's "Bartholomew Fair" as "Packington's Pound." Furthermore, that in the still popular ditty, "Come, lassies and lads, take leave of your dads," there occur the lines—

Begin, says Hall—aye, aye, says Mall,
We'll lead up Packington's Pound;
No, no, says Noll, and so says Doll;
We'll first have Sellinger's Round.

"Sellinger" is St. Leger. The music of Sellinger's "Round; or, the Beginning of the World," is also in Chappell. "Piles of Songs," according to Mr. Draper, have been written to the tune of "Packington's Pound." Yes, my friend; but why that "Pound?" Did Packington ever impound an intrusive stranger as the incensed Captain Boldwig did Mr. Pickwick, when that illustrious philanthropist was temporarily overtaken by cold punch?

The following suggestion on Mr. Draper's part is an extremely sensible one:—

Would you mind noting, he writes, that our present concert balladists and theatrical overture composers would do well to study something more than about a dozen ballad tunes, which they are constantly repeating: such as "The Bailiff's Daughter of Islington," the "Maypole Song," "Sally in our Alley," and so forth. There is one wonderful air with the burden of "Croakledum hoo, Croakledum he," which is one of the quaintest of all. "Croakledum" is in Tom D'Urfey's "Pills," and in Chappell.

As it is, we very rarely hear, nowadays, even the delightful melodies of the eighteenth century comic operas. I do not mean the "Beggars' Opera" (although that is very seldom played), seeing that the "Newgate Pastoral" is a pasticcio of very ancient English tunes; but what has become of the simple, charming airs in "Love in a Village," in "Midas," in "Rosina," in "The Quaker"? Even the more modern "No Song, No Supper" seems to have fallen into abeyance.

If I have not got Chappell, I have become the possessor, through the courtesy of Messrs. Paterson and Sons, of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Perth, and Ayr, of a very sumptuous volume—a copy, indeed, of "the Queen's Edition" of "The Vocal Melodies of Scotland," with symphonies and accompaniments by Finlay Dun and John Thomson. Quite apart from its lyrical attractions, this handsomely-printed volume is highly interesting from a literary and bibliographical point of view. It would seem that little is known of the writer and composer of "Charlie is my Darling," which, in Messrs. Paterson's volume, is merely set down as an "old Jacobite song, modernised." The heart-stirring Jacobite lyric of "Cam' ye by Athol" is quite modern; the words being by James Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd, and the music by Neil Dow, jun. The words of "Awa, Whigs, awa!" everybody knows to be by Burns. The words of "Annie Laurie" are "a modern adaptation of a poem by Mr. Douglass, of England," and the music is "ascribed to Lady Scott." "In the Garb of Old Gaul" had a Lieutenant-General, Sir Harry Erskine, for its writer, and the music was composed by General John Reid. The air of "And ye sall Walk in Silk Attire" was "arranged" by Sir Henry Bishop. Of "Welcome, Royal Charlie," it is simply said to have been "arranged by Finlay Dun;" the poet of "Wim wadna' fecht for Charlie?" is unknown; and equal obscurity shrouds the authorship, both as regards words and music, of "Wim'll be King but Charlie?"

Mem.: The new edition of the "Vocal Melodies of Scotland" has been entirely revised and re-edited by Mr. Edward Kimbault Dibdin.

Were George Eliot alive, and in the habit of keeping a commonplace book, she might make a curious entry illustrative of some fresh "Scenes of Clerical Life." A London Incumbent has written to the Times to suggest that the date of Hospital Sunday (a practically beneficent device which we borrowed from Birmingham) should be altered. June, it appears, is an inconvenient month for the preaching of sermons in aid of the funds of our hospitals; and the existing date "causes some of the clergy to stand aloof, and others to give the fund but a grudging and lukewarm advocacy." Is that so? I thought, in my ignorance, that the Quality of Mercy could scarcely be strained. But Hospital Sunday prevents the clergy from having a collection of any importance for any other object whatsoever for at least six months in the year.

The Bishop of London's Fund comes with a request, which is generally regarded as a command, for a sermon in the month of May; Hospital Sunday takes June; "by the middle of July half our congregations are on the wing for the seaside or the Continent; in August and September our churches are nearly empty" (is that so?); in October the congregations come back "hardly in a mood to be greeted by a charity sermon, having had one probably at every watering place they have visited in their travels." So that Shakespeare must have been altogether wrong, and the Quality of Mercy is a little strained.

Is not the admission about the churches in August and September being nearly empty rather a damaging one? Is it only Dives and his daughters who go to church? Or if Lazarus goes there likewise, is the tattered man in the habit, in the middle of July, of "taking wing for the seaside or the Continent?" The Incumbent writes from Paddington. Surely the thousands of hard-working operatives who were said to be yearning for the boon of Paddington Park are not all of them accustomed to go out of town from the middle of July to the end of September, thus leaving the churches "nearly empty."

Another suggestion of the Incumbent, that all hospital "cases" presenting an admission letter from a subscriber should pay some nominal sum—say a shilling for out-patients, and half-a-crown for in-patients is really worthy of serious discussion. The Incumbent is of opinion that such admission fees would yield an aggregate of forty thousand a year. There is no outrage to the merciful doctrine of Samaritanism in remembering that a very large proportion of our hospital patients are not the utterly destitute poor. Those woful ones are taken to the parish infirmary. On the other hand, it is certain that thousands of people who avail themselves of the advantages of an hospital are perfectly well able to pay a shilling or half-a-crown on entering the institution; but, if they be quite impecunious, what is there to prevent the subscriber from giving the poor man or woman the trifling sum required as an admission fee at the time of handing him or her the admission letter? The small sum would only be as a stamp on a cheque drawn on the Bank of Beneficence.

G. A. S.

LAND LEAGUE MURDERS.

On Thursday week, at Ardahan, near Gort, in the county of Galway, another of those hideous and dastardly crimes which disgrace the Irish nation was perpetrated, by the murder of Mr. Walter Bourke, a landowner, who has for some time past had disputes with his tenants. A soldier who had been appointed for his escort, Corporal Robert Wallace, of the Royal Dragoons, was killed by the same volley of bullets, which was fired by five men lurking behind a stone wall, loop-holed for the deadly purpose. Mr. Bourke was on horseback, and the soldier in front of him. Our illustration shows the place where this cowardly murder was done, at the entrance to the grounds of Castle Taylor, the residence of Mr. Shawe Taylor, Ardahan. The exact positions in which the two dead men were found are indicated, as well as the hole at the top of the wall, through which the shots were fired. The assassins came out of the gate shown in this sketch, and were seen deliberately walking away, across a field, carrying with them a rifle and a carbine taken from the murdered men. Mr. Walter Matthew Patrick Bourke was formerly a practising barrister-at-law and an advocate of the High Court at Calcutta. He was educated at Stonyhurst, and graduated in Trinity College, Dublin, as Senior Moderator. He was a magistrate, and, besides being a landed proprietor, he was also agent for other estates. He possessed two properties, one at Curraleigh, near Claremorris, in the county of Mayo, and the other at Rahasane, in the county of Galway. The latter was purchased within recent years. It appears that Mr. Bourke some time since declared his determination to make his tenants pay their rents, and he served ejectments upon them personally.

On one occasion he caused a great disturbance in the chapel at Claremorris by insisting upon entering amongst the congregation with his double-barrelled gun in his hand. He received numerous threatening letters, and had of late had special protection. The funeral of Mr. Bourke took place on Tuesday, at Claremorris, and was attended by many of his Mayo neighbours, both landlords and tenants. The funeral of Corporal Wallace, at Dublin, on the day before, was also attended with a public demonstration. The Coroner's jury in Galway have returned a verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown. A proclamation has been issued in the Dublin Gazette offering a reward of £2000 for information leading to the conviction of the murderers. A reward of £1000 is offered for private information leading to a similar result; and £500 for information, followed by the conviction, of any person who harbours the murderers. Three men have been arrested on suspicion of having been concerned in the murder. Owing to the refusal of all persons in the neighbourhood to assist in laying out the body of Mr. Bourke, the task had to be undertaken by the deceased's brother and a constable from Dublin, both of whom were afterwards refused refreshment in the adjoining village. Outrages are reported from other parts of Ireland.

WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS.

The publication of an illustrated catalogue by the Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours was announced in our notice of the Exhibition in Pall-mall East. The Old Water-Colour Society are thus doing for themselves what Mr. Blackburn has done for the Royal Academy and Grosvenor Gallery, and Mr. Dumas for the Paris Salon. It

THE KING AND QUEEN OF SIAM.—SEE PAGE 598.

1. Spot where Mr. Bourke's body was found. 2. Where the body of Corporal Wallace lay. 3. Loop-hole of wall, through which the shots were fired. (Gate by which the five murderers afterwards came out.)

SCENE OF THE MURDER OF MR. WALTER BOURKE AND CORPORAL WALLACE, AT ARDRAHAN, COUNTY GALWAY.

THE HEAD OF THE PROCESSION. BY SIR JOHN GILBERT, R.A.

THE WATERING PLACE. BY MURKET FOSTER.

SOUTH ENTRANCE TO THE CATHEDRAL AT MUNSTER. BY S. READ.

BEATRI. BY G. DU MAURIER.

COUNTING HER CHICKENS. BY E. K. JOHNSON.

SKETCHES FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS, DRAWN BY THE ARTISTS.

is needless to say that the work is well done. The small selection that we present would alone almost prove that. But it is well known that both the Water-Colour Societies include a larger number of cunning designers for reproduction in black and white than probably any other body of artists. Nothing is more certain, therefore, than that in these illustrations of their own works we should have some of the best of such memoranda, which are so pleasant to have and to refer to. Moreover, their reproduction in facsimile, by some of the many admirable processes now in use, lends them a special interest.

The first illustration by the President, Sir John Gilbert, R.A., that accomplished veteran artist to whom the Illustrated London News in its earlier years owed so much, requires no comment—unless it be that the very spirited, yet well-balanced, composition of his great drawing "comes out" more distinctly in the sketch than with the colours. The one by Birket Foster—another artist who commenced his distinguished career as a draughtsman for the wood engraver—shows here a largeness of touch for which we were hardly prepared. That by Mr. S. Read—to whom also this journal has been under great obligations for many years—is a charming and finished "li"—a complete little work in itself. The next is by Mr. Du Maurier, the dainty and spiritual designer for Punch, and his "Bentri" shows some of his rare skill in delineating English beauties. In the last drawing we see Mr. E. K. Johnson, in a more rustic vein than usual with him. This farmer's girl about to feed the poultry, is, like other of her sex, and, for the matter of that, our own sex too, "Counting her chickens," really, or metaphorically, before they are hatched—to complete the proverb.

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

"Don Giovanni" was given for the first time this season on Thursday week, with Madame Adelina Patti's bright and charming performance as Zerlina. The cast was also otherwise generally efficient, having included Madame Fursch-Madi as Donna Anna, Madame Valleria as Donna Elvira, Signor Cotogni as Don Giovanni, Signor Marini as Ottavio, and M. Gailhard as Leporello.

On Saturday last, Madame Pauline Lucca made her fourth appearance since her return; and on this occasion sustained the character of Margherita in "Faust" with rare excellence, especially in its dramatic aspect, her acting in the later scenes having been especially fine. It is needless to say that the music of the part was finely rendered. The cast was otherwise also an efficient one; Mdlle. Stahl was Siebel, Signor Frapoli Faust, M. Gailhard Mefistofele, and Signor Devries Valentino.

On Tuesday Meyerbeer's "Dinorah" was given, with the incomparable performance of Madame Patti in the title-character, the cast having included Signor Marini as Corentino, Mdlle. Tremelli as the Goatherd, and M. Dufriehe (vice Signor Cotogni) as Hoel.

GERMAN OPERA, DRURY-LANE THEATRE.

Weber's "Euryanthe" was produced here on Tuesday evening, after two postponements. As a work of high musical art, it must be ranked as superior both to his "Der Freischütz" and his "Oberon," its composition having occurred between the two. It was first produced at Vienna in 1823, and was finely given by German companies in London in 1833, and subsequently, but had not been heard here for many years until Tuesday evening, when its revival was a welcome event in the midst of the plethora of Wagner which has characterised this season. The heaviness of the story and the poverty of the drama of "Euryanthe" have always been a hindrance to the public success of the opera. The authoress, Frau von Chezy, did a similar ill turn for Schubert's beautiful music to "Rosamunde" as she did for Weber in the work now referred to. A slight sketch of the plot of "Euryanthe" may suffice. The heroine so named is beloved by Adolar, Count of Nevers, the secret of their love having been confided to her friend Eglantine, by whom it is betrayed to Lysart, Count of Forest, to whom she gives Euryanthe's ring, a love token stolen from its owner; Lysart having promised to wed the traitress. He then gages his hands and title against those of Adolar, that he will obtain the love of Euryanthe; and in proof shows the ring. The King, before whom this takes place, makes the award against Adolar; who is disinherited, and seeks obscurity in a desert. Here he encounters Euryanthe, whom he has doomed to death, but her endeavour to save him from the attack of a serpent (which he kills) induces him to relent, and he leaves her in despair. The arrival of the King, with his hunting train, leads to an avowal by Euryanthe of her innocence and the guilt of Eglantine and Lysart, whose bridal festivities are interrupted by the contrition and confession of Eglantine on beholding the ruined Adolar. Eglantine is slain by the furious Lysart, who is led out captive. Adolar is reinstated in his titles and possessions, is united to Euryanthe, and all ends happily.

The music is full of charm of melody, and dignity of character, and its fresh stage hearing, after a very long interval, constitutes an important feature of the present season. The character of Euryanthe was finely sustained by Madame Sucher, who sang and acted with great effect. Among special points may be mentioned her excellent delivery of the cavatina, "Glücklein im Thale," the scena "Schirmende Engelschaar," her shares in the duet with Eglantine, "Unter ist mein Stern gegangen," in those with Adolar, and that with the King in the last act. Eglantine's music was finely sung by Madame Peschka-Leutner; particularly her air, "O mein Leid," her scena, "Bethörte," her portion of the duet with Euryanthe, above named, and of the duet with Lysart in the second act. Another prominent feature was the fine performance of Herr Gura, who—as Lysart—both acted and sang finely. The great scena, "Wo berg ich mich" was admirably given—in its several phases of tenderness and rage—as were many other portions of his music. Herr Nachbar sang apparently with effort, and made no effect in Adolar's fine scena beginning "Welch mir." He was most successful in the romance "Unter blüh'nden," and in the scene with Euryanthe in the forest. The music belonging to the King was fairly well sung by Herr Noldechen; and the subordinate characters of Bertha and Rudolph were filled, respectively, by Fraulein Wiedemann and Herr Landau. The choral and orchestral performances were of the usual high order, and Herr Richter conducted in a way worthy of his reputation.

The fourth and last but two of the present series of symphony concerts conducted by Mr. Charles Hallé at St. James's Hall took place on Thursday week, when Schumann's music to scenes from "Faust" was given entire. There is much in this composition that is worthy of the poem with which it is associated—passages of poetic beauty and of mysterious impressiveness being present throughout, and especially in the closing portion, which is that best known to the English public. It was very well rendered in its orchestral and choral details, the principal solo music having been efficiently sung by Mrs. Hutchinson (Gretchen), Miss Larkcom (Carl), Mr. Shakespeare (Ariel and Pater Ecstasius), Mr. Santley (Faust), Herr Elmlad (Mephistopheles), and Mr. Savage (Doctor Marianus); incidental passages having been rendered by Misses Orridge, Carpenter, Hoeschke, Linnington, and Trevanna; Mr. E. Montague and Mr. J. Bridson. The performance was skilfully conducted by Mr. Charles Hallé, who previously gave a fine interpretation of Beethoven's piano-concerto in G; the concert having opened with Mendelssohn's overture, "A Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage." The last concert but one took place last Thursday evening. Of this we must speak next week.

The seventieth season of the Philharmonic Society closed last Friday, when Rubinstein's "Paradise Lost" was performed, for the first time in England. The work is classed as op. 54, and, therefore, belongs to a comparatively early, or rather to the middle, period of the composer's career. It preceded his "Tower of Babel," to which it is decidedly superior. The original German text was founded on portions of Milton's great poem, and has been cleverly rendered into English by Mr. H. Hersee. The work is divided into three parts, the principal characters supposed to be represented being:—Eve, an Angel, and Raphael (soprano), Michael and Gabriel (contralto), "a voice" (tenor), Adam (baritone), and Satan (bass). It is chiefly in the choral and orchestral effects that the composer has best succeeded; and these are in several instances highly impressive. Among the most so, in last week's performance were the double choruses of rebels and angels, in which there are some good contrasts; the movement suggestive of the gathering of the waters; and the melodious chorus, "Now bring forth fruits." Of the pieces for solo voices, the "Song of the Angel" (well sung by Madame Rose Hersee) was one of the most effective; another having been the trio, "Lord of all worlds" (efficiently rendered by Misses Fenna, Farnol, and Hudson). The many recitative passages for "a voice," were excellently declaimed by Mr. B. McGuckin; and Signor Foli's fine bass voice gave full impressiveness to the music of Satan. Mr. Ludwig sang the music of Adam earnestly, but occasionally a little too boisterously. In spite of the skilful writing which prevails throughout the work, its length and general heaviness of style induced a feeling of weariness before the close. If repeated, it should be very much abridged. The oratorio was preceded by Schubert's unfinished symphony in B minor. Mr. Cusins conducted ably.

Amid the multitude of concerts of the season we ought not to fail in mentioning the pianoforte recital of Herr Kummel at St. James's Hall last Friday. This accomplished artist occupied nearly two hours in playing from memory and with much exactness and expression a varied selection from Rubinstein, Beethoven, Chopin, Bach, and Schumann, a feat which not only illustrated the several styles of the composers but the high standard to which pianoforte playing has attained.

The operatic concert at the Royal Albert Hall last Saturday afternoon was a great success, an enormous audience having been drawn by the attractive programme, which included fine performances by Mesdames Adelina Patti, Albani, Sembrich, and other eminent artists of the Royal Italian Opera Company. Signor Beignani and M. Dupont conducted.

Mr. W. Carter's "Placida" and Rossini's "Stabat Mater" were given at St. James's Hall last Saturday afternoon. Madame Christine Nilsson was to have sung, but was prevented by indisposition. That rising young singer, Miss Patti Winter, rendered the principal soprano music with much efficiency; the other principal vocalists having been Madame Sterling, Mr. Maas, and Signor Foli; Mr. Ley and Mr. Cox having occasionally co-operated.

Last week's Saturday afternoon concert at the Crystal Palace brought forward a new symphony, composed by Signor Sgambati, the eminent Roman pianist, by whom it was conducted on this occasion, when it was performed for the first time in England. We have recently spoken in terms of commendation of the gentleman just named, in reference to his fine performance of his own cleverly-written pianoforte concerto at the fifth of this year's Philharmonic concerts. The symphony performed on Saturday consists of four principal divisions, and contains much effective writing, and some skilful instrumentation in each, the best portions being the second movement ("Andante mesto") and the "Scherzo." The former has much agreeable melodic flow, with a fanciful and varied use of the orchestra, and the latter is spirited and well contrasted by the two trios associated with it. The first and last movements are too diffuse in structure, and would be much improved by revision and condensation. The symphony was received with great applause, and was followed by a recall of the composer, who conducted it, and who further distinguished himself by a brilliant performance of Beethoven's pianoforte concerto in E flat. Mdlle. Badia and Mr. B. McGuckin contributed vocal solos with much success; other items of the programme not calling for mention.

One of a series of ballad concerts was given at the Alexandra Palace last Saturday afternoon, in the Central Hall, under the auspices of Mr. D. Beardwell. It consisted of a capital selection of solos by well-known vocalists, part-songs by the choir, and sundry pieces by Kalozdy's Hungarian Band, whose picturesque performance excited much interest.

The seventh—and last but one—of the present series of Richter concerts took place on Monday evening, when one of the grandest works in the whole range of sacred music—Beethoven's Missa Solennis in D—was performed. Of the mingled science and sublimity of this grand masterpiece we have several times spoken, and need now, therefore, only record its performance, with efficiency in some respects, although not quite satisfactory in all its details. The solo vocalists were—Frau Peschka-Leutner, Miss Orridge, Mr. Shakespeare, and Herr Elmlad.

Mr. W. G. Cusins, "Master of the Musicke" to the Queen, gave a morning concert on Wednesday at St. James's Hall, assisted by Madame Rose Hersee, Mr. Maas, Mr. Edward Howell, and other distinguished artists, and a new chamber trio by Mr. Cusins was performed for the first time in public.

Mr. George Watts's morning concert took place on Thursday last at St. James's Hall, with an excellent programme. A notice of it must be reserved for next week.

The fifth of Mr. Ganz's orchestral concerts—and last of the present series—takes place this (Saturday) afternoon.

We have already drawn attention to the French musical festival and competition to take place next week at the Royal Albert Hall. After the inaugural ceremony, on Tuesday, there will be a competition between the leading Fanfares and Orpheons of France, followed by a concert in the evening; a second concert being announced for the next day, and the distribution of the prizes for that evening.

Le Chevalier Eugenio Pirani will give a morning concert on the 27th inst., at St. James's Hall, for the benefit of Signor Campana's widow.

The profits arising from the Chester Musical Festival, amounting to some £600 or £700, will be devoted to the fund for restoring the Cathedral Chapter House. The expenses of the festival were £1900.

THE PLAYHOUSES.

On Saturday, the Tenth instant, at the Princess's, was produced before a crowded audience and with unqualified success a new and original romantic drama, from the pen of Mr. G. R. Sims, entitled "The Romany Rye." The dramatic critic of the Times newspaper has pronounced "The Romany Rye" to be "a bad and mischievous play." A bad play it certainly is not, since Mr. Sims has, with much skill and ingenuity, succeeded in constructing out of well-worn materials a closely coherent and deeply interesting story, which may pass muster as a brand new plot. The workmanship of the drama is, indeed, capable throughout, and in parts masterly. The dialogue is never absurd: it is often impressive, and more often racy humorous: it is only the incidents and the form in which the majority of the characters are cast that are repulsive. If you can imagine a fashionable West-End tailor setting his very best cutters and sewers to work to fashion out of the very best "extra double milled superfine" Saxony broadcloth, lined with silk throughout, a suit of clothes for a pauper or a convict; or an enthusiastic agriculturist embellishing the interior of a pigsty with encaustic tiles and mahogany "fixings," while he decorated the exterior with an ebony door and a double gilt knocker; or a spirited publisher issuing an edition of Catnach's Last Dying Speeches and Confessions, printed with silver-faced type on handmade paper and illustrated by dry-point etchings by Mr. Whistler and Mr. Herkomer;—then you might be able to gather some notion of the talent which Mr. G. R. Sims has displayed in "cutting fustian upon satin," mending beggars' rags with gold thread, trepanning murderers' skulls with silver plate, and playing "Nix my Dolly Pals, Fake Away," or "When Claude Duval was in Newgate Thrown," on a hundred-and-fifty-guinea Broadwood grand pianoforte, the walnut-wood case adorned at the additional outlay of a thousand pounds by Mr. E. Burne Jones with paintings emblematic of the Golden Stairs of the Treadmill, the Hidden Mysteries of Burglary, the Genius of Begging-Letter Writing, the Nemesis of the Gin Shop, and the Avatar of the Middlesex Sessions. There are nearly forty characters in "The Romany Rye," and they are nearly all arrant rascals of either sex, including a murderous young country gentleman, a knavish money-lender, a pseudo bird-fancier, who is in reality a burglar, a boy thief, a bloodthirsty gipsy, a roguish attorney's clerk, a number of tramps, cadgers, vagabonds, sham veterans of the Crimea, and gin-drinking women who hire babies to go out begging with; and a horrible old hag who drugs people who have been decoyed to a den by the waterside, to be afterwards flung into the river by two felonious "waterside characters," who either commit murder at the instigation of some third party actuated by motives of pecuniary interest or of personal vengeance, or else quietly pop the bodies into the Thames and fish them up again, so as to obtain the reward which mourning relatives have offered for the recovery of the remains of their loved ones. There are, it is obvious, hints and suggestions of characters such as these in the writings of Dickens and Bulwer, of Ainsworth and Wilkie Collins—to say nothing of the "Amateur Casual," Mr. James Greenwood. The edifying columns of the Police Gazette may also have been laid under contribution to supply the dramatist with, not attic, but cellar and gutter salt of a stimulating nature; and, finally, Mr. Sims himself must be a very keen observer of the very lowest phases of London life. The result is a really surprising piece of Realism, reminding the critic much less of the realism of Balzac or of Flaubert than of that of M. Emile Zola.

In his treatment of the Romany side of his story, Mr. Sims seems to lean more towards the opinion of Mr. Carlyle, as set forth in Mr. Charles G. Leland's recently published book on the Gipsies, than towards the views so forcibly enunciated by Mr. George Smith, of Conville, who, because the English Zingari persist in declining to live in houses, and in neglecting to send their children to school, denounces them as monsters of iniquity. "You have paid some attention to gipsies," remarked the Sage of Chelsea to Hans Breitmann. "They're not altogether so bad a people as many think. In Scotland we used to see many of them. I'll not say that they were not rovers and ravers; but they could be honest at times. The country folk feared them; but those who made friends with them had no cause to complain of their conduct." The most conspicuous trait of the gipsy character made use of, and in a highly effective manner, by Mr. Sims is the bloodthirsty vindictiveness of the Romany when the path of his woman-kind has been crossed by a Gentile. For the rest, the gipsies—although the hero, Jack Hearne, is a half-breed gitano—play but a very subordinate part in the Princess's drama. The characters round whom the most absorbing interest centres are the scoundrels and cheats, the bandits and assassins of London. We have two pretty glimpses of rural life in the opening scenes of a gipsy encampment, and the manor house at Craigsnest—both due to the admirable pencil of Mr. William Beverley; and there is also a well-painted scene of the Road to Hampton by Mr. Stafford Hall; and of the race-course at "Appy Ampton" itself, by Mr. Walter Hann; but the action of the rest of the piece mainly takes place in the slums, in Common Lodging-Houses and Thieves' Kitchens, in bird-fanciers' shops (the birds and rabbits all alive) in Little Querr-street, Seven-dials, in the office of fraudulent usurers, in the purlieu of Ratcliffe-highway, and the underground cellars of hired kidnappers and assassins. There are also two or three scenes on board ship, and a splendid view of the Thames, a shipwreck, a life-boat, the parlour of a waterside public-house, and the crowded quay of a seaport. These scenes, seventeen in all, are consecutively devoted to the exposition of the cold-blooded and calculating attempts of Philip Royston, the villain of the piece, to despoil and, if need be, murder Jack Hearne, the "Romany Rye," who is his half-brother, and to abduct and obtain possession of the property of Jack Hearne's sweetheart and subsequent bride, Gertie Heckett, who is the grand-daughter of Joe Heckett, the burglarious bird-fancier of Little Querr-street, but who is likewise Philip's cousin. To this it may be added that Goliath Lee, a gipsy, thirsts for the blood of the wicked young country gentleman, and goes about with a gun, bent on shooting him, because he has seduced a gipsy girl named Lura Lee. In the end vice is punished and virtue rewarded, the wicked young country gentleman and the unscrupulous money-lender being comfortably taken into custody by the detectives. The murderous "waterside characters" had previously been disposed of by the "Romany Rye," very gallantly played by Mr. Wilson Barrett. Miss Eastlake looked very charming and acted very gracefully as Gertie Heckett, although she screamed a little too often and too shrilly in the 'tween decks scene on board the "Saratoga," and Mr. E. S. Willard was the coolest and most polished of villains as Philip Royston. Mr. R. Markby presented an amusing amalgamation and inward rascality as the money-lending Marsden; and Mr. John Beauchamp looked becomingly ruffianly as Goliath Lee. Messrs. F. Huntley and H. Evans were efficiently revolting in the "waterside characters," Scragger and Ginger Bill; and Miss Emmeline Ormsby displayed both power and pathos as the ill-treated Lura Lee. A really admirable study of humorous low-lif character is Mr. George Barrett's Boss Knivett, who appears to combine the attributes of "Coster Joe" and the "Chickaleary Cove," and some of whose idiosyncrasies remind us of the Artful Dodger, while others are strongly reminiscent of Charley Bates. In the end, Boss Knivett makes up his mind to live "on the cross" no longer, but to act henceforth altogether "on the square." Throughout, this curious piece was excellently well played and admirably mounted. It will have, I should say, a long and prosperous career, and put plenty of money in the pockets of the Princess's management and of Mr. G. R. Sims. Personally, I scarcely think that I should like to see "The Romany Rye" again.

I went on Monday last to Her Majesty's Theatre to pass one of the dreariest evenings, and to witness one of the strangest experiments that it has ever been my lot to experience. The play was "King Lear," and the part of the distraught monarch was played by that well-known actor, Signor Ernesto Rossi, who has for many years past been highly popular among his Italian fellow-countrymen, and who has recently returned from the United States, extending his professional wanderings even to San Francisco. Signor Rossi played in this country a few years ago. He was received with respectful appreciation, but scarcely gained such a high degree of acceptance as had been accorded to Salvini. The peculiarity of the performance—certainly it could not be called an entertainment—on Monday consisted in Signor Rossi playing King Lear in choice Italian, while the remainder of the company played their parts in English. The polyglottism of "Odetta" is ridiculous enough; but here it was "confusion worse confounded." The unhappy coadjutors of Signor Rossi had to feel for their "cues," so to speak, and to catch them more from his gesticulations and his grimaces than from his articulate words. All dramatic illusion was thus entirely lost. The Signor, moreover, has not been gifted by nature with a form suggestive of majesty or dignity. He is squat of stature, and his "make up" conveyed the impression of his head being inordinately large; while his hirsute "arrangements" were suggestive, now of Pantaloon and now of a caricature of the estimable Alderman Sir Robert Carden. On the whole, the spectacle would have been laughable had it not been intolerably wearisome. I am not prepared to say that Signor Rossi (whose performance I had never before witnessed) is not a good actor. He may be, indeed, a very excellent tragedian; only, on Monday, under the ridiculous conditions to which he had chosen to subject himself he did not give his abilities fair play. The Italian translation of "King Lear" followed by Signor Rossi is that of Carlo Rusconi and Cristoforo Pasqualigo, published at Milan in 1879, and dedicated by the publisher to Signor Rossi himself. The version is a tolerably close one; but it is in prose, and this circumstance deprives the speeches of Lear of much of their grandeur and eloquence, and reduces some of his sublimest outpourings to the merest commonplace. To be sure, the English Lear talks prose himself, sometimes; but the prose only acts as a foil to the magnificence of the blank verse. Signor Rossi was supported by a "scratch" company of unequal merit. Mr. John Ryder was respectable as Kent; Mr. Edmund Lyons highly intelligent as the Fool; Miss Louise Moodie incisive as Goneril; and Miss Lydia Cowell sweetly pathetic as Cordelia.

The beautiful and talented Mrs. Langtry continues to reap fresh and brilliant laurels in the provinces. The ovation at Edinburgh has been followed by a triumph at Liverpool, where the clever and industrious lady was received with immense enthusiasm, and I understand that at the conclusion of her brief engagement Mr. Saker handed the deservedly popular artiste a cheque for eleven hundred pounds; a larger sum than he has hitherto paid to any "star." Mrs. Langtry is at present engaged in the pleasant task of taking Leeds by storm.

G. A. S.

FINE ARTS.

MISS NORTH'S PAINTINGS OF PLANTS.

Some years back an extensive series of paintings of plants by Miss Marianne North was exhibited in one of the long galleries at South Kensington, and deservedly excited much admiration. Since then the collection has been greatly extended; an entirely new series of drawings from Australian plants have been added; a suitable gallery, from designs by Mr. James Ferguson, has been erected for the reception of the works in Kew Gardens; and the whole—building and drawings—have been munificently presented to the public by Miss North. The collection comprises no less than 627 examples, and forms incomparably the most complete, and at the same time the most accurate series of illustrations of the flora of the world in existence. The paintings are highly-finished studies in oil on paper, and in all cases the objects represented have been painted on the spot. What this implies and what the range of this lady's travels have been will be inferred from the fact that she has explored the remotest and least-known countries of the two hemispheres—Teneriffe, Jamaica, Brazil, California, Borneo, Western Australia, Ceylon, and the Himalayas. The collection comprises characteristic and rare flowers, plants, trees, and groups of trees, and some strange insects and reptiles. Artistically, the paintings are admirable, while the requirements of the botanist are entirely satisfied by accuracy and finish of the draughtsmanship. The highest scientific authorities certify that the paintings cannot be surpassed in truthfulness. Sir Joseph Hooker, in particular, says that "it is impossible to overrate the interest and instructiveness of the collection in connection with the contents of the gardens, plant-houses, and museums of Kew."

Messrs. Cassell, Petter, Galpin, and Co. have formed an interesting exhibition of the numerous original designs, mostly in black and white, which have been executed for the illustration of their many excellent periodical and other publications. The collection—a selection from which was exhibited at the Dudley Gallery last year—includes drawings by many of the leading artists of our school. It is well known that a large proportion of the most distinguished painters of the day have, at least at some period of their career, occupied themselves in designing for the wood-engraver; and it is surprising how many of these have been engaged by the eminent firm in Belle Sauvage-yard.

A series of water-colour drawings by Mr. Ayscough Wilkinson is on view till the 29th inst. at Messrs. Barnard and Son's Gallery, 233, Oxford-street.

Lord Derby opened the new building in addition to the Brompton Hospital for Consumption on Tuesday. The Bishop of London, assisted by the Rev. Hughes Owen, previously performed a dedicatory service. The new building contains 127 beds, and additional subscriptions to the amount of £10,000 a year will be needed to keep the whole institution in an efficient state, the whole of the large legacy having been expended, as prescribed by the testator, in the erection and the furnishing of the new building. The hospital since its establishment has afforded relief to 29,600 in-patients; its 200 beds are filled, and there are now 300 applicants for admission. We shall give a view of the building next week.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Any diminution in the attendance at Ascot on the Tuesday and Wednesday was amply atoned for on the Cup day, when the Prince and Princess of Wales and other members of the Royal family again drove on to the course in semi-state, and the rings and stands were densely crowded. Racing began with the All-Aged Stakes, in which Marden (9 st. 11 lb.), who had a great disadvantage in the weights with his three opponents, proved himself a wonderfully good colt over his own course, and never ought to be asked to travel more than six furlongs. On his running in the Derby, Sachem appeared to have the St. James's Palace Stakes at his mercy; but he could only get third to Battlefield and Gareth, and the victory of the former redounds greatly to the credit of Shotover, who had no trouble in conceding him 13 lb. and her sex allowance in the Ascot Derby. In our account of the Derby we stated that Bruce, in spite of running wide at Tattenham Corner, could have beaten Sachem easily enough for third place, and it is now plain that the American representative was very lucky to get anywhere near the front at Epsom. The great reputation of Foxhall completely paralysed opposition to him in the Ascot Cup, and had not the Duke of Beaufort pluckily started both Petronel and Faugh-a-Ballagh, one of the most coveted prizes of the season might have been walked over for by the "illustrious stranger." Faugh-a-Ballagh's mission was to make the running for his stable companion, and this he did so effectually that, as he turned into the straight about half a mile from the finish, he held a lead of many lengths. He was then eased to let Petronel come up, but, as the latter was in hopeless trouble a few strides further on, little Martin set the three-year-old going again, and made a grand finish with Foxhall, being only defeated by a neck. Cannon, who has now won four Ascot Cups in succession, did not use either whip or spur, but for all that he had to send his horse along in earnest in the last quarter of a mile, and it was plain either that Foxhall has deteriorated considerably since last season, or that Faugh-a-Ballagh is a very exceptional youngster. The result of the Alexandra Plate, to which we shall refer in due course, favours the former supposition. The Nineteenth New Biennial was a gift for Tristan, who seems equally at home over all courses; and from the poor show made by Thebis she has evidently not yet recovered the form that deserted her so suddenly at Newmarket last season. Though he had eight opponents, odds were laid on Retreat for the Rous Memorial Stakes, and he landed them cleverly enough, Wolsey being the only one to make anything of a fight with him, as St. Marguerite again cut up very badly. Backers were not so lucky in the New Stakes, in which they laid odds on the unbeaten Rookery, who just escaped a penalty, in spite of her previous successes. This time Archer was in the saddle, so there was no excuse to be made on the score of lack of jockeyship. At the foot of the hill Rookery was pulling double, and looking all over a winner, but she was done with directly Adriana challenged, and Mr. Houldsworth's filly came in alone. Adriana is by Adventurer—Morgiana, and is own sister to Rozelle, who achieved such a sensational victory in the Coronation Stakes on the previous day. She had never run previously, and is undoubtedly the best two-year-old that has appeared in public this season. The runaway victory of Tyndrum in the Twentieth New Biennial Stakes exhausted a very heavy card, the luckless Lilac finishing second, as usual.

With nearly £5000 added to the various stakes on Friday, it may be imagined that there was no falling off in the character of the sport. The excellence of Adriana was confirmed by the easy success of Rookery in the Windsor Castle Stakes, and, after the shifty Isabel (8 st. 7 lb.) had upset the odds laid on Privateer (9 st. 2 lb.) for the Ascot High Weight Plate, all interest centred in the Alexandra Plate, in which Foxhall and Petronel met to fight their Cup battle over again, Fiddler and Exeter joining in with them. The American crack went very short in his preliminary canter, and as Fiddler, who received 5 lb. from him, was backed pretty freely, the bookmakers fielded strongly against the favourite. Exeter made the running until reaching the hotel turn, where he tried to bolt to the stables, and this left Fiddler with a long lead of his field; Petronel and Exeter were hopelessly out of it at the turn into the straight, and, though Foxhall made a gallant effort to catch Fiddler, he could never get on terms with him, and was beaten by half a dozen lengths. No doubt Foxhall felt the effects of his severe race on the previous day; still one cannot think that he is anything like the horse he was last season, and, perhaps, he may not show his best form until the autumn. Eastern Empress had all her work cut out to concede 41 lb. to Kate Craig in the Queen's Stand Plate, though she beat Narcissa, the only conqueror of Geheimniss, easily enough. A splendid week's sport wound up with the Hardwicke Stakes, for which Tristan had been in reserve. He was opposed by Retreat, Poulet, Sweetbread, and Sachem, but none of them could fairly extend him, and, at present, he is probably the best horse in England. Sweetbread finished second, and ran so well that he has since been backed at 20 to 1 for the St. Leger.

The yearlings bred by Mr. Waring at Bunham were disposed of on Saturday last, the thirty-one lots realising 6700 gs., or an average of 173 gs., which, we fear, is scarcely a remunerative result. My Lud (1050 gs.), a bay colt by King Lud—Strategy, made the highest price, and next to him was a bay colt by Adventurer—Irene (700 gs.). Six yearlings belonging to Mr. Alexander were afterwards disposed of, a filly by Petrarch—Botany Bay (660 gs.) and a filly by Bertram—Poon (500 gs.) making fair prices.

The rain, for which bowlers must have been longing, has fallen at last; and, instead of a record of long scores, we have to chronicle some remarkable achievements with the ball. The Australians v. Yorkshire ended in a draw, Lockwood (66 and, not out, 14) being the top score on either side, and undoubtedly saving the county from defeat by his grand display of batting at a critical time. Notts also made a draw against the Australians, Blackham (not out, 56) and Bonnor (39) doing the lion's share of the scoring. We do not care to go into what has been dignified with the name of "the cricket scandal" in connection with this match, and will simply remark that the exercise of a little tact—for which quality, however, Captain Holden has never been famous—would have saved a vast amount of unpleasantness. A very exciting match between Sussex and Derbyshire ended in the victory of the former team by only three runs. Mr. A. H. Trevor (61 and 63) did most of the run-getting for Sussex, and shared the honours of the victory with Juniper, who, in the second innings of Derbyshire, bowled six men and caught one. On the other side, Messrs. Shaker (56) and Docker (60) made the best scores. Gloucestershire v. Surrey ended in a draw, Midwinter (not out, 77) and Read (73) fairly dividing the honours of the game. As might have been anticipated, Somersetshire stood little chance against Lancashire, the northern county winning in one innings, with 157 runs to spare. Pilling (78) batted in unusually good form, and Nash took twelve wickets for 28 runs, Crossland getting six for 7 runs. At one time Middlesex looked like disposing of Yorkshire very easily; but, thanks to the fine bowling of Peute and Bates, the "big county" only succumbed by three wickets. Notts defeated Middlesex by an innings and one run, the former scoring 210 and the latter 32 and 177. This was due to the marvellous bowling of Shaw and Morley in the first innings of Middlesex; which was of such an extraordinary character that we append the analysis:—A. Shaw—18·2 overs, 14 maidens, 12 runs, and 4 wickets; Morley—18 overs, 9 maidens, 20 runs, and 6 wickets. Middlesex played up well at the finish to save a single-innings defeat.

The schooner-match of the Royal Thames Yacht Club was won on Tuesday by the Miranda, and the yawl-match by the Lorna. The two cutter-matches of the Royal London Yacht Club were won by the Annasona and Freda respectively.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, June 13.

There are, and there probably always will be, predestined persons provided with all the necessities of life—people born with silver spoons in their mouths—who are reduced, while others labour, to seek assiduously the means of occupying their leisure. In order to simplify their task, some sly people not belonging to the predestined class have set themselves to codify elegance and to apportion to different employments and different distractions, according to times and seasons, the strenna inertia of the rich. It is thus that the Parisian year has been divided into periods to which fashion suits its occupation. There is the theatrical season, the dancing season, the marrying season, the racing season, then the seaside, the shooting season, the vintage, the return from the country, the opening of the theatres, and the resumption of regular Parisian life. But there are moments of transition when society does not know what to do, and one of these moments is the period between the Grand Prix and the departure for the seaside, the period which we are now traversing. Most of the theatres are shut; balls are over; dinners are over, and there remains nothing but the Saturdays at the Circus and the Tuesdays at the Hippodrome. The gazetteers of fashion have to turn their pens to less elevated subjects. In short, Paris is dull.

And, to make matters worse, the weather is cold and rainy, and the beautiful country around Paris is hardly inviting in such conditions. I know Socrates did not delight in the country because it taught him nothing, and Voltaire declared the country to be the chiefest of insipid pleasures. On the other hand, Paul de Kock, who was more a Parisian than Voltaire, has asked what is sweeter than the pleasures of the country? What indeed? reply the Parisians. But what will you? It rained on the day of St. Médard, and the deep-rooted belief is that a wet Saint Médard means a month's wet weather, or rather forty days,—a second deluge in commemoration of the forty days' rain of Noah's flood, for in the old chronicles Saint Médard is styled magister diluvii, and a "steward of the pluvial waters."

As a sign of the extreme dullness of things in Paris, imagine that the only novelty of the week is a card-board model of Papin's Digestor, exhibited on the stage of the Gaité Theatre. A well-known writer on popular science, M. Louis Figuier, has conceived the idea of creating a scientific theatre, and of acquainting the people scenically with the history of great inventions. His first attempt, "Denis Papin; or, the Invention of Steam," is hardly a success. He has spoilt his piece by mixing up with it a silly love affair. It was hoped that M. Figuier had discovered something new in his scientific theatre. He has only produced a poor drama which has failed. Nevertheless, he announces his intention to continue the attempt with "Gutenberg, or the Invention of Printing," and "Kepler, or Astronomy and Astrology."

In the political world there is, as usual, a slight crisis. On Saturday the Chamber of Deputies voted on a first reading the suppression of the life tenure of the magistracy. The Ministry asked only the suspension of the life tenure during three months, in order to enable them to weed out the reactionary Judges and put Republicans in their place. In consequence of these two votes M. Humbert wished to resign. M. Grévy refused to accept his resignation, and so M. Humbert has taken a month's congé. The votes were not definitive, but, nevertheless, they have produced a very bad effect. The Chamber is severely criticised by the press of all shades of opinion, and appears to be losing entirely what little credit it ever had. A feeble Ministry than the present it would hardly be possible to have. As for Egyptian affairs, that have taken so serious a turn, M. de Freycinet told the Chamber yesterday in honeyed yet dignified terms that he knew next to nothing about what had happened or what course the Government intended to adopt.

On Sunday afternoon, a ceremony in honour of Garibaldi took place at the Cirque d'Été. Some four thousand people were present. M. Lockroy, M. Adier de Montjan, and General Turr made speeches, the band played the "Marseillaise," and everything passed off satisfactorily. The apotheosis was well organised. Victor Hugo was to have presided; but, being too fatigued, he sent his grandson, George Hugo, a little fellow of ten years of age, who received by proxy the ovations intended for the illustrious poet, and presided in his place!

A Parisian journal, noticing the presence of several Republican deputies at the Duc d'Aumale's receptions at Chantilly, and at the Duc de Nemours' at Paris, has conceived the strange idea that the Orleans princes are bestirring themselves and preparing to become candidates for the presidency of the Republic, and perhaps even something more. The idea is more ingenious than well-founded.

For the benefit of roving Britishers I will state that the splendid picture galleries and park of Chantilly will be open to the public on June 18, 22, 25, and 29.

T. C.

The Session of 1881-2 of the Royal Institute of British Architects was brought to a close last week by the presentation of a Royal gold medal, the gift of the Queen, to Baron von Ferstel, of Vienna. This medal is annually awarded to some eminent architect or man of science engaged in promoting the study and practice of architecture, and every alternate year it is given to a foreigner. Baron von Ferstel was unable to be present, but the Austro-Hungarian Embassy deputed Baron Wacken, who was attached to the Embassy, to receive the medal. Several other medals and prizes were awarded.

John Garrett Elliott, one of the persons concerned in the prize-fight in St. Andrew's Chapel, who failed to appear when the other persons implicated in the matter were dealt with, was brought up at the Middlesex Sessions yesterday week, when he pleaded guilty to the charges against him. The Assistant-Judge said it was quite clear that Elliott had taken a leading part in the arrangements for the fight, and he would have to pay a fine of £25 and £10 costs, to enter into his own recognisances in the sum of £100, and find two sureties in the sum of £50 each for his good behaviour for twelve months; and, in default of payment, to be imprisoned for three months.

T H E F U N E R A L O F G A R I B A L D I.

THE GROVE WHERE THE SPEECHES WERE DELIVERED.

1. Garibaldi's House. 2. Stables. 3. Mill. 4. Gate by which the Procession came out. 5. Road to the Port and Bathing-place. 6. Grove where the Funeral Speeches were delivered. 7. The Cemetery.

CAPRERA ON THE DAY OF THE FUNERAL.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT: A GUARD-HOUSE OF SOLDIERS OF THE LINE IN CAIRO.—SEE NEXT PAGE.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE FUNERAL OF GARIBALDI.

On Thursday week, instead of the process of "cremation," or destruction by fire, which Garibaldi had most expressly and minutely directed, and for which he had actually prepared a place near his dwelling, the hero's body was interred, in the presence of a large assembly of Italians who came for the purpose, in the cemetery of the island of Caprera. The funeral ceremony lasted from a quarter to four until five o'clock, a storm of wind and rain raging the whole time. There was no ecclesiastical service, or form of prayer or Divine worship, on this occasion. The coffin, which was covered with garlands of flowers, was borne by some of the survivors of the Sicilian expedition of 1860. It was followed to the grave by the Duke of Genoa, Signor Zanardelli (Minister of Public Works), General Ferrero (Minister of War), representatives of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, and delegates of three hundred Italian associations. Speeches were delivered in a neighbouring grove by Signor Alfieri di Sostegno, Vice-President of the Senate, Signor Farini, President of the Chamber of Deputies, the two Ministers of State, and Signor Crispi, who were much applauded. As the coffin was lowered into the grave, salutes were fired by the Washington and Cariddi, vessels of war lying in the strait between Caprera and Maddalena. Our Special Artist, who was present at the funeral, has sent us the Sketches of the proceedings, and of the aspect of Caprera on that day, which appear in this week's publication. Another Illustration shows the body lying in state, attired in the historical red shirt and white poncho, and adorned with wreaths of flowers, in a room of Garibaldi's house. Muskets or rifles, with fixed bayonets, were piled round the little bed, which was guarded by a few soldiers and sailors who had served under Garibaldi's command. On the walls hung the portraits of his family and friends.

The following letter, dated September, 1877, from Garibaldi to Dr. Prandina, gave directions for his funeral. After pointing out the precise spot for the cremation, the letter proceeds:—"There a wood pile two mètres long shall be formed of acacia, lentiscus, myrtle, and other aromatic wood. On this shall be placed a small iron bedstead, and on that an open bier with the remains dressed in a red shirt. The handful of ashes remaining shall be preserved in an urn of any sort, and shall be placed in the little sepulchre which keeps the ashes of my babes, Rosa and Anita." At the place designated by Garibaldi, shown in our Illustration, in a rocky recess, he had caused preparations for the funeral pyre to be made, by putting up several low pilasters of granite, upon which iron bars were to be laid across, and the wood placed upon them. It was the desire of his widow and of his two sons, Menotti and Ricciotti, that Garibaldi's directions should be complied with; but they were persuaded, with some difficulty, by the representatives of the Italian Democratic party, to allow the temporary interment of the body at Caprera, with a view to bringing forward, in the Italian Parliament, a resolution to appoint a grand national funeral at Rome. It is intended that this proposal shall be made to the Parliament when it next meets in session, and that Garibaldi's body shall be brought from Capri to Rome with all the public honours that can be devised. There seems to be some disposition to make it a party matter; though much interest had been felt as to the terms of the telegram sent by the King with his own hand to Garibaldi's sons, which was as follows:—

"From my youth up my father taught me admiration for Giuseppe Garibaldi. Later I witnessed his heroic acts, and in my family the admiration and gratitude grew greater. Accept my condolence, which is shared by the whole Italian nation.—(Signed), Umberto."

At Rome, on Sunday afternoon, there was a grand procession in honour of Garibaldi. It started from the Porta del Popolo at four o'clock, and reached the Capitol about six. Every kind of scholastic, industrial, artistic, and political associations participated in the ceremony. The International Artistic Club came with the banners of the principal nations. The Masonic lodges and the anti-clerical clubs were prominent. One hundred and forty banners shrouded in crape were carried. The procession must have consisted of many thousands, and the crowds in the streets to look on numbered tens of thousands. Twice during the route a panic occurred, but no serious mischief ensued. The procession closed with a vast car drawn by eight horses, on the platform of which was a colossal bust of Garibaldi, on whose brows a great figure of Italy was placing a wreath. In the front of the car were forty ensigns in the form of the classic laurum, inscribed with the names of forty victories. The procession reached the Capitol by the road which leads up from the Forum, the ancient Clivus Victoria; and all the associations which thronged the mind on seeing such a triumphal car ascending that slope are readily imagined by those acquainted with the classic history of Rome.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT.

At the time of writing this notice, on Wednesday evening, the latest news from Egypt is not altogether such as to reassure the public mind against the fear of renewed sanguinary conflicts, either at Cairo or at Alexandria; but the Khedive and Dervish Pasha, the Sultan's Special Commissioner, have quitted the capital for the last-named city. Dervish Pasha still declares that he is able to answer for the preservation of order, but he is confessedly obliged to keep on terms with Arabi Pasha, the leader of the rebellious Egyptian army, there being no Turkish force at hand; and it seems doubtful whether the Khedive, Tewfik Pasha, has now any real authority in Egypt. The British representative, Sir Edward Malet, has followed the Khedive from Cairo to Alexandria, by the directions of our Foreign Office. Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, commanding our naval squadron, has full powers, in case of need, to land sailors or marines for the protection of British subjects; but it has been hitherto considered by all the authorities that to do so just now would be most likely to provoke a fresh outbreak of Mussulman fanaticism. The later accounts of the terrible riot and massacre of Europeans at Alexandria on Sunday last, which is narrated in another page, show that it was a preconcerted attack; and that many of the Egyptian military police or soldiers joined the rioters in killing or ill-treating the foreign residents. The number of lives lost is now supposed to be not much less than a hundred. Among the Europeans killed are three British naval men, Mr. James Pibworth, second engineer of H.M.S. Superb, and George Strackett and Alfred Herne, of H.M.S. Helicon; two commercial men from Manchester, Mr. Robert James Dobson, and Mr. Reginald Richardson; Dr. H. P. Ribton, Professor Gimmelli, editor of an Italian paper; Signor Cattani, banker; Rossi, a solicitor; and Biedermann, a German clerk; while the British, French, Italian, and Greek Consuls were personally maltreated. A thousand Europeans are said to have fled from Alexandria since last Sunday, dreading a fresh outbreak of violence. The city, however, is now full of regular troops of the Egyptian Army, numbering seven or eight thousand, under the orders of Arabi Pasha, who promises to keep the peace.

Two members of the ancient gipsy tribes of the Coopers and Taylors were married with Protestant rites at St. Mary's Church, East Moulsey, on Monday. Prior to the marriage ceremony a baby belonging to the Cooper family was baptized. The church was crowded with gipsies, who were in the neighbourhood in great numbers to attend the Hampton Races, and they were profusely decorated with wild flowers.

Somewhat tardily, but with unquestioned force and resolution, the Roman Catholic Prelates of Ireland have at last denounced the crimes and outrages which disgrace the Irish agitation. As far as their influence goes it is now cast into the scale against the assassins and mutilators. They have issued an address, in which they condemn the refusal to pay just debts by those able to pay them, the preventing of others from paying their debts, the injuring of a neighbour's person or property, the forcible resistance to the officers of the law, and the formations of secret associations. They, at the same time, declare that the national movement, purged from what is criminal, shall have their earnest support.

Under the presidency of Captain C. T. Ritchie, M.P., the twenty-sixth annual general gathering of the members and supporters of the Christian Blind Relief Society was held on Tuesday night at the Limehouse Townhall, Commercial-road East. There was a large attendance. Amongst those present and on the platform there was a choir composed entirely of blind persons—objects of the society's care—who, during the course of the proceedings, sang several pieces.

The Duke of Bedford has returned his tenants 25 per cent off their rents for the past half year; Mr. G. T. J. Sotheron-Estcourt, the member for North Wilts, has returned 10 per cent to his Yorkshire tenants, being the fourth similar half-yearly return made by him; the Duke of Westminster has again remitted to his Flintshire tenants 20 per cent on the half-year's rentals just due; Sir Archibald Campbell, of Blythwood, Renfrewshire, has granted a reduction of 10 per cent to his agricultural tenants.

The annual evening fête of the Royal Horticultural Society, held on Tuesday night at South Kensington, was attended by a large and fashionable company, despite the unpropitious state of the weather for outdoor amusements. The arcades were furnished with an extensive assortment of flowers and plants, the cherry and peach trees in full bearing contributed by Messrs. Rivers, vying with rhododendrons and table decorations on one side, and fuchsias, pelargoniums, and gloxinias on the other. The electric lights in the arcades were furnished by Siemens Brothers, and those in the gardens by the Anglo-American Brush Company. The gardens were also tastefully illuminated with festoons and devices in coloured lamps, and on the two occasions when coloured fires were also brought into requisition the effect was exceptionally attractive. The bands of the 2nd Life Guards and the Royal Horse Guards contributed the musical portion of the programme.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

SPAIN.

The Cortes have voted reductions in the existing tariff, but the Government is authorised to enforce the higher duties upon British imports as a means of forcing England to accede to a larger reduction of the duties on Spanish wines.

PORTUGAL.

The King and the Royal family took part on the 8th in the Corpus Christi procession at Lisbon. Perfect order prevailed.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

The Session of the Hungarian Diet was closed last Saturday by a Royal rescript. The next Session will begin on Oct. 5.

Twice prevented, the duel arising out of the dispute in the Hungarian Diet finally took place on Sunday. Pistols were used, but neither of the combatants was hurt.

GERMANY.

The infant son of Prince William of Prussia was christened on Sunday afternoon in the New Palace, at Potsdam, by the names of Frederick William Victor Augustus Ernest, in the presence of the Emperor and Empress and the members of their family, the King of Saxony, the Crown Prince of Austria, the Grand Duke Sergius of Russia, the Duke of Aosta, Prince Christian (representing Queen Victoria), and a number of the German Princes and Princesses.

Prince Bismarck addressed the Reichstag on Monday in favour of the Tobacco Monopoly Bill, declaring it essential for carrying out necessary reforms in the taxation of the country. He emphatically denounced the opposition to the measure, adding that, if he remained at his post, it was only to be faithful to the oath he took when he saw the Emperor lying in his blood after the attempt on his life in 1878.

RUSSIA.

The Empress gave birth to a daughter on Tuesday morning at the Palace at Peterhoff. The infant is to be named Olga. According to the bulletin published, her Majesty is suffering from unusual exhaustion.

M. d'Onbri, Russian Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, has been appointed a member of the Council of the Empire.

After innumerable rumours, an Imperial decree announces the resignation by Count Ignatieff of the Ministry of the Interior. He does so on the score of ill-health, it is stated. Count Tolstoi, the former Minister of Public Instruction, will be his successor.

SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

A telegram from Christiania states that the Storthing has again rejected the proposal to increase the allowance of the Crown Prince upon his marriage with the Princess Victoria.

CANADA.

The Marquis of Lorne's yacht, on approaching the wharf at Quebec on Tuesday, came into collision with a schooner, in consequence of which the flagstaff on the bow of the former broke and fell on the deck. It was prevented from striking Princess Louise by the Marquis, who put up his arm in time to ward off the blow.

An Order in Council has been passed dividing the great North-West Territory, beyond the confines of Manitoba, into four new districts, or, more properly speaking, territories. The new names and locations are as follow:—

Assiniboia, containing about 95,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by the international boundary, on the east by the western boundary of Manitoba, on the north by a line drawn near 52 deg. latitude, and on the west by a line drawn between 110 deg. and 111 deg. west longitude.

Saskatchewan, containing 114,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by Assiniboia, on the east by Lake Winnipeg and Nelson river, on the north by a line drawn near 55 deg. latitude, and on the west by a continuation of the line marking that boundary of the previous district.

Alberta, containing 100,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by the international boundary, on the east by Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, on the west by British Columbia, and on the north by the continuation of the line bounding Saskatchewan.

Athabasca, containing about 122,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by Alberta, on the west by British Columbia, on the east by the line bounding Assiniboia to the west until it intersects Athabasca river, then by it and the lake of the same name, and following Slave Lake to a line near 60 deg. latitude, which forms the northern boundary.

To sum up, the Saskatchewan district includes Battleford, Carleton, and Prince Albert; Assiniboia includes Qu'Appelle, South Saskatchewan and Souris Rivers, and Forts Pelly and Ellice; Alberta includes the Battle, Bow, and Belly rivers, the cattle ranch district; and Athabasca takes in the celebrated Peace River districts. This division of the vast country hitherto known as the North-West will have the effect of localising points which hitherto were very indefinitely comprehended, and by having each its capital assigned it, will form nuclei for settlements more compact than the straggling homestead of prairie squatters.

In Victoria (Vancouver Island) great damage has been done to property by the flooding of the Fraser River. Another ship-load of Chinese immigrants has arrived in the colony, and it is expected that before October 40,000 others will arrive.

SOUTH AFRICA.

We learn from the Times' correspondent at Durban that the Cape Upper House has amended the new ocean mail contract, as approved by the Assembly, so as to make the contract time twenty-one days; the term of the contract to be five years.

The Legislative Council of Natal was opened by Governor Bulwer on the 8th inst., as stated in our last issue. In his opening speech the Governor reviewed the constitutional history of the colony, and commended the question submitted by Lord Kimberley to the deliberate judgment of the Legislative Body. He referred to affairs in Zululand as unsatisfactory, and as calling for a reconsideration of the settlement effected, with a view to the remedying of its defects. The rest of the speech was only of domestic interest.

AUSTRALIA.

The Agent-General for Victoria has received somewhat fuller details of the financial statement laid before the Legislative Assembly by the Hon. Sir Bryan O'Loughlin, M.P., Colonial Treasurer. The despatch states that the financial statement was made on May 30, and was considered very satisfactory. The revenue for the year amounted to £5,563,254, being £321,740 in excess of estimates. From the State railways alone the income for the year amounted to £1,640,996, being £115,996 above the estimate in Sir Bryan's last financial statement, in which railways were set down as expected to produce this year £1,575,000. The previous year, 1880-1, railway revenue was estimated to produce £1,490,000, so that the income from this source alone has increased by upwards of £200,000 in the course of two years. Ordinary expenditure for the year amounted to £5,374,929, but there was also a balance of Treasury bonds paid in advance, amounting to £305,300, making a total of £5,680,229. A balance is carried forward to 1882-3 of £73,777. Sir B. O'Loughlin estimates the revenue for 1882-3, after allowing £140,000 for remissions of taxation, at £5,528,104, of which £1,750,000 is the estimated income from Government railways. The estimated expenditure is £5,574,073. In this sum is included provision for the following charges:—Defences, £110,000; railways, £959,000; public works, £338,247; municipal works, £310,000; country water-works, £111,500; and interest on loans, £1,188,610; leaving a balance to 1883-4 of £36,915. In addition, the interest on the new loan has been provided for from Jan. 1. Thus, the Treasurer, while making large remissions of taxation, sweeping off all arrears, and making liberal provision for defences and public works, is able to show a fair estimated surplus, and an extraordinary elasticity in the revenue, especially in that derived from the State railways.

The Agent-General for South Australia has received a telegram from the Government of South Australia, notifying the safe arrival of the emigrant-ship Clyde, all well.

Cardinal Howard on Sunday consecrated Dr. Coffin, the new Roman Catholic Bishop of Southwark, at the Church of St. Alphonso, Rome.

Captain Moloney has been appointed Administrator of the Gold Coast Colony during the absence of Sir Samuel Rowe, Governor-in-Chief.

The "annual statement exhibiting the moral and material progress and condition of India during the year 1879-80" has been issued as a Parliamentary paper. This is the sixteenth annual issue of this statement.

Intelligence received from Honolulu announces that the Hawaiian Cabinet resigned on the 19th ult., and that it had been reconstructed by Mr. Gibson, who had assumed the portfolio of Foreign Affairs.

THE COURT.

Her Majesty's Highland life has been but little varied during the week, only drives to Glen Gelder Shiel, the Linn of Muich, and similar localities having been taken, and a few visits paid, including a call upon the daughters of Colonel Farquharson at Invercauld. The Queen, Princess Beatrice, and Princesses Elizabeth and Irene of Hesse attended Divine service on Sunday at Crathie church, Principal Tulloch officiating. Mrs. Drummond, of Megginch, and the Very Rev. Principal Tulloch have been on a few days' visit at Balmoral Castle; and the Rev. Archibald Campbell, Colonel Farquharson of Invercauld, and Mr. John Athol Farquharson have been among her Majesty's dinner guests.

The date of the departure of the Queen and Court from Balmoral has been once more altered, and is now fixed for Tuesday, the 20th inst.

Colonel the Hon. H. Byng represented the Queen at the Marquis of Conyngham's funeral.

The Queen has intimated her intention of contributing fifty guineas towards the fund for establishing a museum and art gallery in Aberdeen.

Chief Superintendent Hayes, of the Windsor police, has received £5 from the Queen, in acknowledgment of his services upon the occasion of the attempted assassination of her Majesty by Roderick Maclean.

The last Levée of the season is held to-day (Saturday) by the Prince of Wales, on behalf of her Majesty.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess wound up their customary Ascot week festivities with the usual pic-nic at Virginia Water. The Duke of Edinburgh and their Royal Highnesses' daughters were present with their Coworth Park guests. When outdoor amusements were over, the Royal party dined at the Fishing Cottage; ending with a dance. The Prince and Princess, with their family, returned to Marlborough House on Monday. The Prince, with the Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Albany, and the Duke of Cambridge, was in the House of Lords when the Deceased Wife's Sister Bill was brought forward; he and his brothers voting in favour of the second reading. The Princess and the Duchess of Connaught were in the gallery. In the evening their Royal Highnesses went to the Gaiety Theatre. Princess Christian is on a visit at Marlborough House, Prince Christian having gone to Germany.

The Prince presided at the dinner given on Wednesday at Willis's Rooms in aid of the Funds of the London Fever Hospital.

His Royal Highness has appointed Mr. G. Watson, jun., of Rochester, organising secretary to the Royal College of Music.

Princes Albert Victor and George, in the Bacchante, arrived a few days since at Corfu.

The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh assisted on Monday at the opening and dedication of a transept to the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Notting-hill, in memory of the late Most Rev. Dr. Robert Gray, Metropolitan of South Africa, uncle to the Vicar. The Duchess received purses from ladies in aid of the funds. On Wednesday morning the Duke and Duchess and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught left Paddington for Weymouth, where they embarked on board the Duke's yacht for a six-weeks' cruise.

The Duke of Albany will preside at the annual Newspaper Press Fund dinner, which will be held on the 24th inst. at Willis's Rooms.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck, with their children, were present at the opening of the Military Tournament on Monday, at the Agricultural Hall, in aid of the Royal Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows. The Duchess will open the new wards at Richmond Hospital on July 22.

Mr. W. H. Grenfell, the senior member for Salisbury, opened a fancy fair there on Tuesday, which is being held by the Congregationalists on behalf of the new church fund. The edifice cost £10,000, and the debt is about £2000.

The Commemoration festivities at Oxford have been actively going on this week. The Philharmonic Society gave a concert on Monday afternoon in the Sheldonian Theatre, the soloists being Mr. Santley and Miss Mary Davies. In the evening the usual procession of boats took place, when there was a very large number of spectators of the ceremony of saluting Exeter, the head boat. Later in the evening Wadham College gave a concert in their College Hall, the gardens being illuminated. Fireworks were provided. The day's proceedings were concluded with the University ball in the Corn Exchange. The principal event in the festivities on Tuesday was the flower show of the Oxfordshire Horticultural Society in the gardens of Worcester College. The attendance of visitors was large, but unfortunately rain came on during the afternoon. The chief of the series of balls, that given by the Apollo University Lodge of Freemasons, was held at night in the Corn Exchange and Townhall. Amongst the other entertainments was a water party to Nuneham, given by Lincoln College. The Enchiridia was held on Wednesday in the Sheldonian Theatre, when the honorary degrees were conferred and the prize competitions recited. After these proceedings there was a Masonic fête in the gardens of Wadham College, and a concert at Magdalen and a ball at New College concluded the festivities.

1. Dragging sledges across a frozen river. 2. Right bank of River Lena. 3. Yakut Woman. 4. Yakut Festival. 5. Water-Carriers. 6. Ancient Cossack Fortress at Yakutsk. 7. Sledging the

THE JEANNETTE SEARCH EXPEDITION: SKETCHES I

7. Surface-water on the ice of the Lena. 8. Survivors of the Jeannette Arctic Expedition. 9. Woodcutters' Hut. 10. Russian Governor of Yakutsk. 11. Sledges descending from station on river bank.

OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN NORTH-EASTERN SIBERIA.

THE SILENT MEMBER.

Grave questions and a stirring debate in Parliament were hardly needed to assure us that the Government are face to face with anarchy in Egypt. With a strong fleet of English and French men-of-war within gunshot, Alexandria was on Sunday the scene of a conflict between Arabs and Europeans, ending in the killing of fifty Europeans, among whom were three men belonging to the British Squadron—James Pitworth, of the Superb; Alfred Herne and George Strackett, of the Helicon. Our Consul, Mr. Cooke, was wounded during the mélée, but not seriously injured, happily. The painful news naturally occasioned an uneasy feeling in both Houses of Parliament on Monday; and the present gloomy phase of the Eastern Question may at length lead the Cabinet of Mr. Gladstone to appreciate the anxiety with which the late Lord Beaconsfield's Administration watched the same perplexing question four or five years ago.

The only satisfactory part of the official explanations offered on Monday by Earl Granville and Sir Charles Dilke was the assurance that "Sir Beauchamp Seymour has power to land sailors and marines, should he think it necessary; but he has telegraphed that the disturbance is of a non-political character, and was suppressed by Egyptian troops;" and that "the women and children who sought refuge in the Consulate have been transferred to the ships." Far from reassuring, however, was Sir Charles Dilke's rider that "Dervish Pasha and the Khedive concur in advising that the sailors and marines should not be landed. That applies to the safety of the people in Cairo as well as in Alexandria." The Foreign Secretary and the Under-Secretary added on Tuesday that all was quiet at Alexandria, to which the Khedive and Dervish Pasha had removed from Cairo. Albeit these and other statements are made on behalf of the Government, apparently with a "light heart," it is impossible that a searching Parliamentary criticism of the wavering policy of the Foreign Office with regard to Egypt can be delayed much longer.

The Suez Canal is, one may hope, more vigilantly and effectively guarded than Alexandria appears to be. Cold comfort, however, is afforded by Sir Charles Dilke's laconic answer on Monday that "we have gun-boats at each end of the Canal;" and Mr. Gladstone's reply to Baron H. De Worms that "to destroy or even permanently to injure the Canal would be extremely difficult, if not impossible." A bolder tone and clearer aims are demanded to solve the Egyptian Question—whether the mouthpiece of the Government is heard in Parliament or at the Conference table. This was made patent by the animated protests made by Sir H. D. Wolff and others against the reticence of Sir Charles Dilke on Wednesday.

The business-like way in which the House of Lords can tersely discuss and come to a decision on most controversial matters was notably exemplified on Monday in the debate on the Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister Bill. There was an exceptionally large and brilliant assemblage, their Royal Highnesses the Princess of Wales and the Duchess of Albany being recognised in the Royal balcony, and the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Albany, and the Duke of Cambridge occupying the cross-bench. The measure was in good hands. Its second reading was moved by one of the most promising of the younger members of the Ministry, the Earl of Dulhousie, who with laudable clearness pointed out that the bill aimed to remove a restriction which was the cause of great misery to a large number of persons (5000 couples in London alone), and simply proposed to legalise in this country marriages which were valid in Australia and New Zealand, Canada, and the New England States of North America, and which were asked for here by numerous petitions. Chiefly on Scriptural grounds did Lord Balfour of Burleigh oppose the bill; but the most formidable opponent was the Bishop of Peterborough, who argued against the innovation from both a practical and a sentimental point of view, and set himself up as a champion of the sister-in-law, in reference to whom he borrowed a metaphor from the Irish Land debates, and said it was proposed "to evict" her as a "sister-in-law" and admit her as a "care-taker." In the division the bill was negatived by a majority of four votes only—132 against 128—their Royal Highnesses having all voted in favour of the measure.

The Irish Prevention of Crime Bill—rendered more necessary than ever by the recent murder of Mr. Walter Bourke and Corporal Wallace, the sad tidings of which, by-the-way, caused a brother of Mr. Bourke to personally upbraid Mr. Parnell and Mr. Biggar in the Lobby—still drags its slow length along in the House of Commons. Introduced on the evening of Lord Frederick Cavendish's funeral by the Home Secretary, the measure had by Monday made such small progress in Committee that Mr. Monk was induced to ask the Prime Minister whether it was not time to demand "urgency" with regard to the bill. For a variety of reasons, Mr. Gladstone was not disposed to agree that the time had arrived for that step to be taken, though he hoped the passage of the clauses would be expedited. But Mr. Parnell and his followers were too fond of their pet invention, "Boycotting," to lightly allow it to be included in the class of "intimidation" the bill aims to extinguish. Mr. Healy on Monday threw himself into the breach with an amendment to Clause 4, the purport of the hon. member's proposition being to ward off the stigma of illegality from the Land League process of "Boycotting." This amendment was rejected by a majority of 224—258 against 34. But Mr. Parnell was successful, upros of another of Mr. Healy's amendments, in obtaining from Mr. Gladstone, and eventually from Sir William Harcourt, an admission that, in this endeavour to suppress "Boycotting," it would be unjust to interfere in Ireland with any such right as Trade Unionists have in this country to combine. On the report, a clause to this effect is to be inserted. The anti-Boycotting clause was eventually passed. On Tuesday, the commendable firmness and quickness of Dr. Lyon Playfair accelerated the progress of the bill, clauses 5 and 6 of which were sanctioned. And it may be respectfully suggested that a similarly firm and prompt exercise of his high authority by the urbane Speaker, sure of the support of the House, would greatly tend to dispatch in the transaction of legislative business, which is so sadly in arrears.

Still, in the small hours, other members than the Home Rulers do sometimes manage to squeeze a bill or so in. On Monday, to wit, a little progress in Committee was made with the Scottish School Teachers' Bill and the Supreme Court of Judicature Acts Amendment Bill; and on Tuesday Mr. Labouchere, in the teeth of Mr. Newdegate's valiant opposition, ultimately persuaded the House to give leave "to the proper officer of this House to attend the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice with the paper writing subscribed by Mr. Charles Bradlaugh at the table of the House on Feb. 21 last, and the copy of the New Testament named in the Journals of the House of the same date."

The Town Council of Newcastle-on-Tyne has decided to forward to the Queen a memorial praying that a charter be granted conferring on Newcastle-on-Tyne the dignity of a city.

GENERAL HOME NEWS.

The State apartments of Windsor Castle are closed.

King's Lynn was on Tuesday visited by a severe thunder-storm.

A new grammar school at Solihull, near Birmingham, was opened on Tuesday by the Bishop of Worcester.

The Wesleyan Conference is to be held at Leeds during the week beginning July 17.

The session of the Trades' Union Congress is fixed for Sept. 18, at Manchester.

The Society of Arts held a conversazione at the South Kensington Museum on Wednesday.

The annual parade and inspection of the corps of Commissioners will take place inside Westminster Hall to-morrow (Sunday) morning.

Frederick Schwelm, a German compositor, charged at Bow-street with having published a seditious libel in the Freiheit, has been fully committed for trial.

The Dulwich College concert was given in the great hall on Wednesday; Messrs. Ernest and Herbert Sims Reeves, old Dulwich boys, taking part in it.

Mr. R. Giffen, hitherto at the head of the Statistical Department of the Board of Trade, has been appointed Assistant-Secretary to the Commercial Department of that board.

For the Cambridge University higher local examinations, which begin next Monday, there are 961 candidates to be examined at the various centres in London and the provinces.

In London last week 2476 births and 1369 deaths were registered. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 15, and the deaths 74, below the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years.

The East of England Horse Show was opened last Saturday in Carleton Park, Pontefract, Mr. Childers, senior member for the borough, succeeded in inducing the Duke of Cambridge to be present on the first day. The exhibition was a good one.

Mr. Scanlen has announced to Parliament that after the Session he will take office as Colonial Secretary, in the place of Mr. Molteno, who retires. Mr. Leonard will probably succeed the Premier as Attorney-General.

The Mayor of Cardiff presented on Tuesday, in the name of the United States Government, a gold medal to E. A. Johnson, formerly third officer of the steamer Ethiopia, for gallantry in helping to rescue the crew of the American steam-ship Jamestown, on Feb. 13 last.

Lady Burdett-Coutts distributed the prizes to the Westminster pupil-teachers last Saturday, at the rooms of the National Society, Broad-sansbury. The Dean of Westminster, Mr. J. G. Talbot, M.P., and Lord Algernon Percy, M.P., were among the speakers.

Upwards of 200 of the provincial Mayors and Mayoresses have accepted invitations to be present at the municipal banquet to-day (Saturday). The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Speaker, the Home Secretary, and many members of the Legislature will also attend.

A public meeting was held at the Mansion House on Tuesday, the Lord Mayor in the chair, in support of the proposed extension of the work of higher education of women at King's College. Canon Barry, the Bishop of Manchester, Mr. Hubbard, M.P., the Bishop of Peterborough, and Canon Farrar were amongst the speakers.

On Monday the Swansea Harbour Trust officially opened the new docks completed on the east side of the Swansea river, which were inaugurated and named in October last by the Prince and Princess of Wales. The docks have a water area of twenty-three acres, with a depth of thirty-two feet, the total cost being £300,000.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, replying on Saturday to an address from the Irish National School teachers, said that it was the duty of society to destroy the organisations which main and murder in defiance of the law. The body of teachers had it in their power to guide the opinions of the youth of Ireland into the respect for law and order which they themselves entertained.

Some consolation, poor as it is, to us shivering mortals may be drawn from the fact that even in the good old days summers were not always scorchingly hot. Here is what Horace Walpole wrote on June 15, 1789:—"I have had a fire these three days. In short, every summer one lives in a state of mutiny and murmur, and I have found the reason: it is because we will affect to have a summer, and we have no title to any such thing."

The rifle-match for the national trophy between teams of twenty English, Scotch, and Irish Volunteers came off last Saturday near Glasgow, when the Scotchmen won by nineteen points, the aggregate of the scores at the three ranges being Scotland, 1753; England, 1734; Ireland, 1546.—The Earl of Euston, nephew of the late Duke and son of the present Duke of Grafton, has accepted the Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the 1st Northampton Volunteers.

A gentleman has offered, through the Jubilee Fund Committee, to give £1000 per annum for five years for Congregational church extension in London on condition that £9000 a year in addition be raised; or to give £2000 per annum for five years if £18,000 additional be raised; or to supplement in the same proportion any sum raised for new work in London less than the sums above mentioned; and to give £100 for every Congregation hall, up to twenty, erected in London.

A financial agent in Pall-mall on Tuesday sued in the Queen's Bench to recover £1390, the value of bills given by a young gentleman named Bouverie in exchange for a loan and jewellery. Mr. Justice Stephen strongly reproached the plaintiff for having charged 60 per cent interest and double its value for the jewellery. The jury wished to return a verdict for £200; but the Judge ruled that the verdict must be for the whole amount claimed, or for the defendant. The jury then found for the defendant.

The remarkable collection of old English, Dutch, French, and Italian fans formed by Mr. Robert Walker, of Uffington, Berks, which had for some time been exhibited at the rooms of the Fine Arts Society in Bond-street, was sold by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge last week, many of the choicer fans bringing high prices. An illustrated catalogue, sold at a guinea, gave an excellent idea of the collection, being, next to that of Lady Wyatt, the best in England. There were 462 fans, and the sale occupied three days.

In our memoir of Garibaldi last week, it was stated that Professor Partridge, of King's College, who attended him at Spezia when wounded in the ankle in 1862, succeeded in extracting the bullet. Neither Professor Partridge nor M. Nélaton, the eminent French surgeon, who was sent by the Emperor Napoleon III., actually performed that operation. It was done, on Nov. 23, after Garibaldi's removal to Pisa, by Dr. Zanetti, a Florentine surgeon; but a splinter of bone came away with the bullet, and the use of the limb was never perfectly restored.

HAMILTON PALACE.

Messrs. Christie, Manson, and Woods, the eminent auctioneers of works of the fine arts, will begin this day (Saturday) and will continue seventeen days, ending July 20, at their rooms, in King-street, St. James's-square, the very important sale of the Duke of Hamilton's great collections of pictures, sculpture, artistic furniture, and decorative objects, brought from Hamilton Palace, the Duke's grand mansion in Lanarkshire. The intended sale in London on the 30th inst. and twelve following days of the Duke's valuable collection of books and manuscripts forming the Beckett Library was noticed by us last week. Some account of the ducal family and of Hamilton, the town and the palace, situated ten miles from Glasgow, on a tributary of the Clyde, at a place anciently named Cadzow or Cadwoy, accompanied our illustration of the noble ducal residence.

Hamilton Palace, above sixty years ago, was almost entirely rebuilt by Alexander, the tenth Duke of Hamilton, seventh Duke of Brandon, who had married, in 1810, the daughter and heiress of William Beckford, of Fonthill Abbey, Wiltshire, the celebrated millionaire, amateur of art and author of the Arabian romance of "Vathek." He was grandfather to the present Duke of Hamilton. The Palace which he built is a stately edifice of Grecian architecture, with a north front of 264 ft., and with a portico of six Corinthian columns each cut out of a single stone. Whatever of the older building was left has been covered in and entirely concealed by the construction of that period, and in 1822 Duke Alexander made a very large addition. In this work he employed Mr. David Hamilton, an architect of well-known celebrity in the west of Scotland, and who received the second prize in the competition for the Palace at Westminster. The town of Hamilton is quite close, and not many years since one side of the main street was taken down to give more space between the palace and the town. In this operation the old Tolbooth, or jail, was preserved, and now stands within the grounds as a relic of the past. Even with this clearing, the Palace is still too close to the houses of the town for that privacy which is desirable. Our View of Hamilton Palace, from Bothwell, gives an idea of the position of the mansion and the grounds around. It also shows the long avenue coming from the Palace north to the Clyde. To the left of the Palace is seen the top of the Ducal Mausoleum over the summits of the fine old beech-trees which grow near it. Beyond the grounds are seen the chimneys of coal-pits and ironworks, whose constant pouring forth of smoke is said to be one of the causes which make Hamilton Palace anything but agreeable for the habitation of a noble family.

The collection of paintings and other works of art in Hamilton Palace was one of the finest in Scotland. It included the famous picture by Rubens, "Daniel in the Lions' Den," upon which the poet Wordsworth once wrote a sonnet. The Beckett Library apartment, which is constructed in the shape of a letter T, was adorned with some interesting family portraits, one or two by Vanduyke, and there is the portrait of Alderman Beckford, by Joshua Reynolds. At the lower end of the T was the portrait of a predecessor of the family, Peter Beckford, who had been Governor of Jamaica in 1692. These portraits are in panels formed of Egyptian and Aberdeen granite, scagliola, and other beautiful marbles. On the walls around are the cases lately containing the books, about 25,000 volumes, and 800 volumes of rare MSS.

THE JEANNETTE RELIEF EXPEDITION.

The expedition sent by Mr. J. Gordon Bennett, proprietor of the New York Herald, in the earlier part of this year, to search for and relieve the shipwrecked survivors of the Arctic exploring party from the Jeannette, on the coast of North-east Siberia, was accompanied by our Special Artist, Mr. Larsen, some of whose sketches of the long Siberian winter journey have appeared in this Journal. Others are now presented in this week's Extra Supplement; also comprising a group of portraits, photographed in the town of Yakutsk, of the surviving officers and men of the Jeannette. Lieutenant Danenhauer, who was lately in England, on his way home to America, and Mr. Melville, the engineer, who remains in Siberia, still engaged in a further search for traces of the fate of their unfortunate comrades, are the two central figures, seated side by side; Mr. Leach stands behind, to the right, with his hand resting upon Lieutenant Danenhauer's left shoulder. Mr. Newcombe, the naturalist, who rendered much assistance to our Special Artist, and gave him many original sketches, stands in the back row, at the left-hand side of the Engraving; Noros and Wilson stand near him on that side; Barlett and Nindemann sit below and in front of Mr. Melville and Lieutenant Danenhauer; Lautebach, Cole, and Manson, are crouching in the front of the group.

The other illustrations are from our Special Artist's sketches of the scenes and incidents which he beheld on the banks of the Lena, and at the town of Yakutsk, the capital of Eastern Siberia. The river was still frozen, so that the sledges could be drawn across it; but there was, in many parts, a depth of 1 ft. or 2 ft. of water, or melted snow, above the ice, with loose floating pieces of ice, through which it was often difficult to drag the sledges. In the summer, of course, there are ferry-boats to cross the river. The banks of the river, on which the villages or post-stations are situated, are frequently so high and steep that some care and skill would be needed to effect the descent with a laden vehicle in safety. At the town of Yakutsk, the river Lena is two miles and a half wide in winter, and four miles wide in summer; it is usually frozen about the beginning of October, and not clear of ice till the middle of May. The province of Yakutsk is nearly as large as the whole Continent of Europe, not including Russia, having an extent of one million and a half square miles; but its total population is 235,000, of whom only 15,000 are Russians, and the others are Yakuts, Tunguses, and Yukaghirs, living according to native customs, but under the rule of General Tchernajeff, the Russian Governor, whose portrait our artist has given. The town or city, where our Artist arrived on March 26, has a population of 4800, including some political exiles from Russia, who are to be found also in villages along the river. There is a Cathedral, built of stone, for the Bishop of Yakutsk, and several churches, in which part of the service is performed in the Yakut language. The Yakuts, though reckoned by ethnologists a people of the Turcoman race, are of a light brown or copper-coloured complexion, with black hair, resembling North American Indians. Our Artist's sketches of a woman, a postilion riding the forehorse of a sledge, and two Yakuts with a water-cart drawn by an ox, give some notion of their appearance. They dress comfortably, in clothes usually made of yellow leather with fur or velvet trimming, and with stout horse-hide boots. Both men and women are fond of riding either on horses or oxen. This remote country of Eastern Asia was conquered by the Russian Cossacks, under their famous chief Irnak, two hundred and fifty years ago: there still remains a wooden fort, or block-house, with towers, which the Cossacks built in 1632, and an ancient wooden church, among the few objects of historical interest at Yakutsk.

4. The Volunteers.
8. The Procession Returning.

3. Procession passing over Mount Bridge.
7. General View of the Ceremony.

2. Procession passing along South End.
6. The Mayores Cutting the first Turf.

1. Boston Town Arms.
5. The Wheel-Barrow in the Procession.

FESTIVITIES AT BOSTON: BEGINNING THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE NEW DOCK.

COLONEL H. BRACKENBURY.

The appointment of this distinguished officer to a newly-created post in the Government of Ireland, that of Assistant-Under-Secretary for the Department of Crime and Preservation of Order, was one of the first acts of Mr. Trevelyan, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, and of Earl Spencer, the Lord Lieutenant, after the frightful murders of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke in the Phoenix Park at Dublin. Colonel Brackenbury's official duties, though in no way political, will hereafter be of the greatest importance in executing some provisions of the Bill for the Repression of Crime in Ireland, now before the House of Commons. One great advantage of the institution of his special department is that it will enable a clear and distinct line of separation to be drawn, in the administrative business of Dublin Castle, between political agitation, lawfully carried on, and the practice of criminal outrages, and treasonable or illegal conspiracies. There are, in Ireland, two separate bodies of police, the Metropolitan Police of Dublin, and the Royal Irish Constabulary serving all over the country. Colonel Brackenbury had already within the last month accepted the appointment of Inspector-General of the Royal Irish Constabulary, an excellent but rather military force, whose fidelity and bravery have recently been acknowledged by the distribution of special rewards to the amount of £180,000. It seems questionable whether the Dublin Metropolitan Police be equally efficient; but neither the one nor the other appears capable of the service of detective investigation. Few Governments in the world have been so badly served with particular information concerning the identification and pursuit of criminals as that of Ireland, under the system prevailing till the recent assassination of the late Under-Secretary and his Chief, which has now led to a complete reorganisation of this Department. The new Assistant-Under-Secretary, Colonel Brackenbury, will henceforth be alone charged with all matters relating to police and to crime, with the collection of all information regarding the sources of crime, and with the direction of all police forces throughout Ireland; having under his orders both the Inspector-General of Constabulary, Colonel Bruce, and the Chief Commissioner of Metropolitan Police. He is also empowered to issue instructions to the Resident Magistrates (stipendiary district magistrates) and to justices of the peace, for the maintenance of order and the enforcement of the law. This is a great charge and responsibility, at the present moment; and we earnestly hope that Colonel Brackenbury will be enabled to discharge it with tolerable success, but the difficulties and dangers are enormous.

Colonel Henry Brackenbury, of the Royal Artillery, was born at Bolingbroke, in Lincolnshire, Sept. 1, 1837. He was educated at Tonbridge Grammar School, at Eton College, and at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich. He has been long in the service: his commission as Lieutenant dating from April, 1856; as Captain, August, 1866; Brevet-Major, April, 1874; Major, February, 1875; and Lieutenant-Colonel, October, 1875. He served in India, in the Indian Mutiny War of 1857 and 1858, and was present at the action of Banda and the capture of Kirwee, for which he received the medal with clasp. During the war between France and Germany, in 1870 and 1871, he was appointed by Government to assist the National Society for the Relief of the Sick and Wounded. He was with the armies in France throughout that war, and his services to the suffering soldiery, on both sides, were acknowledged by the Emperor of Germany, with the decoration of the Iron Cross and the Royal Bavarian Order of St.

COLONEL HENRY BRACKENBURY.
THE NEW ASSISTANT UNDER-SECRETARY FOR IRELAND.

Michael, and by the French Republic, with that of the Legion of Honour. In September, 1873, he accompanied General Sir Garnet Wolseley to the Ashantee War, on the Staff, and took part in all its operations, for which he received the brevet rank of Major, and other honours. He is author of many useful reports and other writings upon subjects of military science and contemporary military practice. He has been Instructor of Artillery, and subsequently Professor of Military History, at the Woolwich Royal Military Academy.

The Portrait is from a photograph by Denque and Co., of Paris.

BOSTON DOCK.

The commencement of an important work of local improvement was celebrated in the town of Boston, in Lincolnshire, on the Friday of last week, with a public demonstration of which we give a few sketches in another page. Since the recent undertaking of the River Witham Outfall Act, passed two years ago, to cut a more direct and convenient navigable channel from the town to Boston Deep, a distance of only seven miles, the Harbour Commissioners have obtained powers for the construction of a Dock at Boston. The first sod or turf for the excavation of this dock was turned on Friday week by the wife of the Mayor of Boston, Mrs. J. C. Simonds, after a procession from the Guildhall, in which the Magistrates, Aldermen, and Town Councillors, the Borough Officers, the Engineers and contractors for the dock, and the invited guests and visitors, were conveyed in a line of carriages, preceded by the Borough Police, a banner and a band of music, and the 1st Lincolnshire Artillery Volunteers. Some effective street decorations were displayed in the Market-place, at Bargate, in West-street, High-street, South-street, and Skirbeck-road. The approach to the site of the intended dock is by a new road made from Skirbeck-road, across the field between St. John's burial-ground and the Union premises, to which the Dock grounds will be adjacent in St. John's-lane. The procession having arrived on the ground, at three o'clock, when eight or ten thousand people were assembled, a brief religious service was recited by the Rev. J. Schofield, assisted by the Rev. G. W. Lowe. The Mayoress of Boston was then presented with a pretty spade and wheelbarrow, which she used, deftly enough, in the performance of her pleasant task, saying, "I cut and lift this, the first sod of the Boston Dock; I pray for the blessing of God, and I wish every possible success to this undertaking." She was assisted by Mr. W. Rigby, the contractor for the dock. The company then moved off to the People's Park, where music was furnished by the Boston Borough Band and Brass Band, for an agreeable promenade. At six o'clock there was a banquet at the Assembly Rooms, where Colonel Moore, of Frampton Hall, occupied the chair, and Dr. A. M. Adam the vice-chair. A testimonial, in the shape of a silver tray, was presented by the Chairman, on behalf of the Dock Committee, to the Mayor of Boston, for his exertions in promoting the work that day commenced. Among the other speakers at table were Mr. W. J. Ingram, who proposed the health of the Aldermen and Town Councillors; Aldermen T. Wright and W. Bedford, Councillor Kenington, Mr. R. Harrison, who spoke for the colliery interest, Mr. T. Garfit, and the Mayor of Grimsby. The construction of the dock, which will cost, including the land, buildings, and machinery, altogether £120,000, is to be completed by the end of the year 1883. The designs were prepared by Mr. W. H. Wheeler, engineer to the Boston Harbour Commissioners; and will be carried out under his direction, assisted by Mr. C. D. N. Parker, the resident engineer, formerly of Leith Docks. The entrance lock for ships will be in the river Witham, near the Maud Foster Sluice, the lock being 300 ft. long and 50 ft. wide, with an entrance depth of 25 ft. water at ordinary spring tides. The Dock will have a water area of seven acres, being 825 ft. long and 450 ft. wide; it will be connected with the Great Northern Railway by a swing-bridge, crossing the Haven near the Mussel Stage, with a single line of rails. There will be a wooden pier, or jetty, from the lock gates to the channel of the river. The plans were approved by Mr. James Abernethy, C.E., Consulting Engineer, and have also received the official approval of the Board of Trade. Boston is the nearest port on the East Coast to some of the most important mineral districts and manufacturing towns of the North Midlands, and may fairly expect a good share of commercial prosperity when the port is improved.

Monday being the morrow of the Feast of St. Barnabas, the great hall of Merchant Taylors' School was filled with a large company, the greater part consisting of ladies, to witness the election of scholars to St. John's College, Oxford, and the award of prizes to the successful competitors in the recent examinations. In the evening, the usual "election-day" banquet was held in the hall of the company, Threadneedle-street, Mr. J. W. Simmonds, the master, presiding.

HAMILTON PALACE, FROM BOTHWELL.—SEE PAGE 591.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

CHATTO and WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW FICTION NOW READY AT EVERY LIBRARY.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S GARDEN PARTY, and other Stories. By Mrs. J. H. RIDDELL. Crown 8vo, 6s.

PRINCE SARONI'S WIFE. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE. 2 vols.

THE MARTYRDOM OF MADELINE. By ROBERT BUCHANAN. 3 vols.

COALS OF FIRE. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY. 3 vols.

IN MAREMMA. By OUIDA. 3 vols.

FOR CASH ONLY. By JAMES PAYN. 3 vols.

NEW WORK BY MARK TWAIN.

THE STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT, &c. By MARK TWAIN. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. (uniform in size and binding with "A Tramp Abroad").

OUIDA'S NEW STORIES.

BIMBI: Stories for Children. By OUIDA. Small 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Full of quaint fancies and fantastic suggestions; thoroughly healthy in tone, as well as charming in style. — Manchester Examiner.

THE LIFE OF GEORGE CRUIKSHANK. By BLANCHARD JERROLD. With numerous illustrations. Second Edition, 2 vols., crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s.

The personal anecdotes are plentiful and to the point, and the illustrations are numerous and good. The volumes form an entertaining biography. — Standard.

NEW COLLECTED EDITION OF

CHARLES READE'S NOVELS. Uniform in style, crown 8vo, cloth extra, illustrated, 3s. 6d. each.

A TERRIBLE TEMPTATION.

THE WANDERING HEEL.

A WOMAN-HATER.

IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND.

HARD CASH.

PECK WOLFINGTON.

CHRISTIE JOHNSTONE.

GRIFFITH GAUNT.

THE DOUBLE MARRIAGE.

LOVE ME LITTLE, LOVE ME LONG.

KNOX PLAY.

THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE.

THE AUTOGRAPHY OF A THIEF.

PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE PICCADILLY NOVELS.

In a few days, crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

THE BRIDE'S PASS. By SARAH TYTLER.

CAVALRY LIFE. By J. S. WINTER. Chatto and Windus, Piccadilly, W.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

Now ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.

REDEEMED. By SHIRLEY SMITH, Author of "His Last Stake," &c.

A FAITHFUL LOVER. By Mrs. MACQUOID, Author of "Patty," &c.

DONOVAN. By EDNA LYALL, Author of "Won by Waiting."

IRIS. By Mrs. RANDOLPH, Author of "Gentiana."

A BROKEN LILY. By Mrs. MORTIMER COLLINS.

FORTUNE'S MARRIAGE. By GEORGINA M. CHALK, Author of "Dorcas," &c.

HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 15, Great Marlborough-street.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS.

In 3 vols., crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

RECORDS OF LATER DAYS. By FRANCES ANN KEMBLE.

RICHARD BENTLEY and Son, 5, New Burlington-street.

LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO.'S

In Handbooks, post-free 1s. 1d.

POTTERY PAINTING. By John C. Sparkes.

PAINTING ON CHINA, &c. By Baronne Delamardella.

FAN PAINTING. By Baronne Delamardella.

LIMOGES ENAMELS. By L. Delajayrak.

MODELLING IN CLAY, &c. By Morton Edwards.

GOLDEN RULES FOR SKETCHING FROM NATURE.

London: 60, Regent-street, W.

MESSER'S BRITISH WILD FLOWERS.

A New and Rapid Method of Studying Wild Flowers by Analytical Illustrations. "We cordially recommend it." — Journal of Horticulture. Cloth, 10s. 6d.

D. BOOTH, St. Martin's-place, Trafalgar-square, W.C.

MYRA'S

MID-MONTHLY

JOURNAL.

Novelties for JUNE Number:

A COLOURED FASHION PLATE.

DIAGRAM SHEET, containing patterns of (1) The Tracy Mantle for a girl of fifteen; (2) Bathing Costume for a Young Lady; (3) The Blouse Costume; (4) The Sandown Suit for a boy of five.

CUT-OUT PAPER PATTERN of the Raymond Mantle.

THE SILK WORM'S GIFT.

Design for an Embroidered Work-Basket.

LA MODE IN PARIS; ILLUSTRATIONS OF

The Education of Girls; The Newest Modes in

Nursery, Story, "Dora's Trials," Notes on Novelties;

MYRA'S ANSWERS, American Modes for Children,

Dress, Health, and Personal Attention, the Cuisine,

Needlework, Books and Authors, Music, Etiquette,

Miscellaneous; Last News from Paris.

NEEDLEWORK: Design for an Embroidered

Valance, and Case for Silks, Border in Berlin Wool-Work, Square and Edgings in Crochet, &c.

Price 6d.; by post, 8d.

GOSNOLD and Son, 39 and 40, Bedford-street, London, W.C.

Just published, post-free, 2 stamps.

DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS

OF INDIGESTION. A small pamphlet on these distressing complaints and their complete cures. Published by the Author,

RICHARD KINE, Esq., Staff Surgeon R.N., 23, Warwick-st., Rugby.

SUMMER CATARRH, or HAY FEVER:

Its Causes, Symptoms, and Treatment. By GEORGE

MOORE, M.D. 1s.; or 12 stamps by post.

London: James Epps and Co., 170, Piccadilly.

By Dr. BARR MEADOWS, Physician to the National Institution for Diseases of the Skin. Ninth Edition, post-free, 3s. stamps.

ERUPTIONS; their Rational Treatment.

London: G. HILL, 104, Westminster Bridge-road.

DEAFNESS.—Sufferers will do well to send for Rev. E. J. SILVERTON'S Book on EARS, EYES, and HEALTH, price 1s.; but to the readers of this paper two penny stamps.—Note address: Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, 17, St. Bride-street, Ludgate-circus, London.

NO MEDICINE for the cure of Asthma,

Consumption, Coughs, and Bronchitis was ever attended with such speedy and unfailing success as Dr. LOGGIE'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

A NEVER-FAILING REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINTS.

DR. SCOTT'S BILIOUS and LIVER

PILLS, prepared without Mercury, are invaluable to all who suffer from Bilious and Liver Complaints, Indigestion,

Wind, Spasms, Nervous Depression, Loss of Appetite, &c.

As a General Family Astringent Medicine they have no equal, being mild in their operation and grateful to the stomach.

Prepared by W. LAMBERT, 170, Seymour-place, London,

W. In Boxes, 1s. 1d. and 2s. 6d., and sold by all Chemists.

The genuine are in a square green package.

MONACO.—The SUMMER BATHING

SEASON IS NOW OPEN.

The Sea Baths of Monaco are completely protected from the north winds, and the most healthful and enjoyable on the Mediterranean Coast.

The Grand Hotel des Bains, upon the seashore, contains most comfortable and luxurious apartments for families at moderate

prices.

Hot and Cold Salt and Fresh Water Baths, and Hydrostatic

Establishment. Tropical vegetation abounds, and the temperature is always tempered by the cool sea breezes.

MONACO is situated about 35 minutes from Nice, and 20 minutes from Mentone, and vice versa with either town for its sanitary arrangements and healthful climate.

AIX-LES-BAINS.—Grand Hôtel de l'Univers. Established 1848. Always open. The proprietor, in consequence of the necessity for enlarging the premises to meet the growing influx of visitors, is desirous of meeting with a capitalist, partner, or promoter of a company limited, for the purchase of his freehold and interest in said hotel, and the erection of a first-class hotel (extra), with 200 chambers, lift, and all modern appliances. There is no English hotel at Aix-les-Bains, although it is visited by 15,000 English people annually; there is no hotel with a lift, neither is there one conducted by an English proprietor—so necessary to administer to the comforts of English travellers. There is a fortune to be made. Apply to Mr. HENRI, Hôtel de l'Univers, Aix-les-

Bains.

NAPLES-BY-THE-SEA.—See Naples as it should be seen, from the balconies of the HOTEL ROYAL

DES ETRANGERS. Patronized by High Life. Always open.

Views and Prices of Mr. CAYANI, Sole Proprietor.

NAPLES.—HOTEL TRAMONTANO, on the Corso V. Emanuele. Highest and healthiest part.

Magnificent view of the Bay and islands. Desirable homely hotel. Kept by an English Lady.

NAPLES.—HOTEL DE RUSSIE.

Celebrated for comfort. Facing the Landing Station of the Capri Steamers. Fine View of Vesuvius. Close to Palais

Royal.

NAPLES.—AMERICAN DENTISTRY,

with latest Discoveries. Gold and Vulcanite Sets. Stopping in Gold.—Mr. J. CAMMEROTA, Dentist, adjoining the English

Chemist—F. KERNOT.

MESSINA.—HOTEL VICTORIA. First

Class house. Specially recommended for comfort and price. W. Mueller, Proprietor. TAORMINA.—Hotel Bellevue. First Class. Grand scenery in Italy. G. KLEBERMAN, Proprietor.

MILAN, Pallanza, Locarno, Bellagio, Venice.

Grand Hotel at Milan. First class Extra.

Grand Hotel at Pallanza. Best and most comfortably regulated Hotels on the Continent.

Grand Hotel at Locarno.

Grand Hotel at Bellagio.

Grand Hotel at Venice.

MALTA, Corsica, Egypt, Constantinople,

Italy, Greece, and Danube, by Frassinetti and Co.'s steamers.

Prospectus and tariff of Smith, Sundius, and Co., Gracechurch-street; or Frassinetti and Co., 6, Place de la Bourse, Marseille.

TOULOUSE.—Grand Hôtel du Midi.

Patronized by the Duke of Norfolk and English nobility and gentry. First-class hotel. English spoken; and comfort of visitors specially studied.

E. POUSSIER, Proprietor.

BIARRITZ PREFERABLE TO PAU or

RIVIERA. No frost or snow, no typhoid or other fever.

Pure air. Splendid sands. Sea warmed by the Gulf Stream, and no sewage discharges.

BIARRITZ.—VILLA EUGÉNIE HOTEL

B. and RESTAURANT. Superior Class. Grand apartments and chambers, with every luxury. Table-d'Hôte, Restaurant,

Café, Club, Casino, and Concert every evening. Billiards, Gymnastics, Lawn-Tennis. Large ornamental garden surrounded by pine wood. Bathing on the magnificent sands. Fine winter climate. Mr. CALMEL, Proprietor of the Grand Hôtel du Luchon, at Luchon, is Director of the Palais Biarritz.

BORDEAUX.—Grand Exhibition, General

Productions; Agriculture, Industry, Ancient Art: Universal Exposition of Wines, Spirits, Liqueurs, Fermented Drinks.

Interesting to English Trade. Catalogues, apply to Proprietors.

NEW LINE—Bordeaux to New York.—No danger from icebergs, tempests, or collisions by the south route. Magnificent steamers, upwards 4000 tons. Compagnie

Bordelaise. Particulars of Mr. BORDA, Manager, Bordeaux.

ARCACHON.—The Grand Hotel. Superior

first-class, with grand terrace leading to the sands. Open sea and hydropathic baths. Table d'Hôte, Restaurant, Billiards,

&c. Winter Pension, 9 francs. VANMYSACK, Proprietor.

DAX, near Pau and Biarritz; same climate.

Thermal Establishment with MUD Baths, 130 deg. Fahr., efficacious in affections, Throat, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, &c.

Superior Pension.—Address, SECRETARY, DAX-LANDES.

CAUTERETS.—Grand Hôtel Continental.

Most comfortable of the Pyrenean Stations. 200 Chambers.

Conversation Saloons, Table-d'Hôte, Lift, Grand Theatre,

Casino, Club—Same property. Madame BAILLY, Proprietor.

LUCHON.—Grand Hôtel Richelieu, opposite the Thermal Establishment. Frequented by Royalty and the highest nobility and gentry. Splendid scenery. First-class arrangements. L. EXTRADE, Proprietor.

VICHY.—Hammam Turkish Baths. New system. Electric and Vapour Baths; Inhalation, Pulverization, Hammam Vapouriere, approved by Academy of Medicine,

Paris. Mr. FERRIN, Director, Rue Burdal, Vichy.

VICHY.—English Club, Grand Cirque,

Concerts, Balls, Reading, Drawing-rooms, Cards, Billiards,

Restaurant à la Carte. Choicest Wines. Telegraphic despatches,

Paris, London. English rendezvous.

GENEVA.—Hôtel de la Poste. One hundred chambers. Lift, Restaurant, Table d'Hôte, wine included. Prices moderate. In centre of town, near the Post-Office.—SAILLES and BENTLEY, Proprietors.

GENEVA. Hôtel Richmond, facing the Lake,

Mont Blanc, and Brunsvich Monument. VILLENEUVE—

Hôtel Byron. Modern comforts, moderate prices. Terms free.

Mr. ARMENBERG, Proprietor, Hôtel Richmond, Geneva.

GENEVA.—Hôtel de l'Ecu, facing Lake.

Superior old-established English Family Hotel. Home comforts and inferior charges. Write for Prospectus, Messrs.

HAAS and FERRER, Proprietors. Arrangements made.

GENEVA.—Hôtel Beau Rivage. Thirty balconies, garden overlooking the Lake, and Mont Blanc.

Sanitary arrangements perfect. Rendezvous of nobility and gentry. Write for Prospectus to Proprietors, MAYNARD and KENZ.

GENEVA.—HOTEL METROPOLE.

Grand First-class Hotel, facing Lake. English Garden, Music

kiosque, steam-bath pier. Rooms, service and bougie included, 4f.

Favourable arrangements offered.—W. M. GRENLING, Director.

SOOLBATH NAUHEIM, near Frankfort-on-Main. Station of the Main-Weier Railway. Natural

Warm Sulphuric Rich in Carbonic Acid; Nine Drinking

Springs and Alkaline Chalybeate Springs; Inhalation Saloon

Ozone generated Atmospheric; (that) Windy cure. Season from May 1 to Sept. 30. Baths may be obtained before and after above dates. For the House Grand Ducal Naueheim Bath

Direction, JABORN.

SLEEPING-CARS on all Continental main lines. Apply for berths at the Agencies of the International

Sleeping-Car Company, Paris, London, Berlin, Brussels, Cologne, Frankfurt, Vienna, Madrid, and Rome.

ARMS and CRESTS FOUND, by Mr.

HODGSON, late from HERALD'S COLLEGE. Sketch,

3s. 6d.; Coloured, 7s. Monograms, Seals, Dice, Book Plates,

Pillboxes, Illuminated Envelopes, Engraving, Vignettes, Cards,

Stationery, &c.—MATTHEWS and HODGSON, 135, Oxford-street, W. Estd. 1810. Prize Medals, 1851, 1862, 1876.

PANEL-PAINTING DESIGNS (Artists')

Sketches for sale or hire. Priced List post-free. Prepared Special Vouchers.

W. M. MARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL,

WESTGATE-ON-SEA

(One hour and three quarters from London).

ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL

(Furnished by Messrs. Shoolbred).

FOR TARIFF APPLY TO MANAGER.

ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL has recently been built, regardless of expense, to supply the demand of the increasing number of visitors to the most rising seaside resort on the East Coast.

WESTGATE-ON-SEA

is now recognized as the most healthy seaside residence in Great Britain, and, having been laid out by eminent surveyors and architects at an enormous outlay, may now claim to be the most picturesque spot in the South of England. Visitors will find at

ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL

Magnificent Sea Views,

Splendid Apartments, and Moderate Charges.

SUN FIRE and LIFE OFFICES,

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS
have gained the HIGHEST AWARDS at all the recent INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITIONS, including the Two Gold Medals for Uprights and Grands, Melbourne, 1881; the First Prize, Queensland, 1880; the Two First Special Prizes, Sydney, 1880; the Legion of Honour, Paris, 1878, &c.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS' PIANOS
for SALE, HIRE, and on the THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.

The principal of the previous honours gained by the BRINSMEAD PIANOS are:—
THE DIPLOMA OF HONOUR AND GOLD MEDAL South Africa, 1877.
THE GRAND MEDAL OF HONOUR AND DIPLOMA OF MERIT, Philadelphia, 1876.
THE DIPLOMA OF HONOUR, Paris, 1874, and the HONORARY MEMBERSHIP OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF FRANCE.
THE GOLD MEDAL, Paris, 1870.
THE DIPLOMA OF EXTRAORDINARY MERIT, Netherlands International Exhibition, 1873.
THE MEDAL OF HONOUR, Paris, 1867.
THE PRIZE MEDAL, London, 1862, &c.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
SOSTENENTE PIANOS,
for Extreme Climates,
With the Perfect Check Repeater Action,
Patented 1862, 1868, 1871, 1875, 1879, and 1881,
throughout Europe and America.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.

"Paris, Nov. 4, 1878.
"I have attentively examined the beautiful pianos of Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons that are exhibited at the Paris International Exhibition of 1878. I consider them to be exceptional in the ease with which gradations of sound can be produced, from the softest to the most powerful tones. These excellent pianos merit the approbation of all artists, as the tone is full as well as sustained, and the touch is of perfect evenness throughout its entire range, answering to very requirement of the pianist."
"Ch. Gounod."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.

"Paris, Sept. 8, 1878.
"We, the undersigned, certify that, after having seen and most conscientiously examined the English pianos at the Universal Exhibition of 1878, we find that the pianos belong to the Grand Piano of the house of Brinsmead.
"NICOLAS RUBINSTEIN,
"D. MAGNIN,
"Chevalier Antoine DE KORTSEK, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Germany."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.

"I have pleasure in expressing my opinion that the Paris Exhibition Model Grand Pianofortes of Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons are unsurpassed. The tone is deliciously sweet, sustained, and extraordinarily powerful; the touch responds to the faintest and to the most trying strains on it, and the workmanship is simply perfect."
W. Kuntz.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.

"Illustrated London News."
"The principle of the Brinsmead firm is to give the best piano of its kind, the best materials, the best care, the best of taste, and the best of finish, and this is why the manufacture in Kentish Town sends down to Wignmore-street so many pianos perfect in scale, sustained in tone, elastic in touch, with equal and responsive touch, and, in fact, as near as possible to that ideal that all musicians must require—'A thing of beauty that is a joy for ever.'"

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.

"Daily Chronicle."
"In tone the instrument is exceedingly rich and sweet, and in touch the very perfection of lightness. Messrs. Brinsmead may certainly be congratulated upon their success."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.

"Morning Advertiser."
"The Legion of Honour. In addition to the other distinctions awarded to Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons at the Paris Exhibition of 1878, the founder of the firm has been created Chevalier of the Legion of Honour."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.

"Daily News."
"A new Pianoforte, recently manufactured by Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons, claims notice, not only on account of its beauty and richness of tone, but especially for some ingenious mechanical novelties, the most important being the addition of a third pedal, by means of which the sound of any note or notes may be almost indefinitely prolonged at the will of the player. This base notes may be sustained after being struck by the left hand, which may then be taken away, and, with the right hand, may execute the most brilliant staccato passages, thus giving almost the effect of four hands. The patent 'check-repeater action,' a speciality of Messrs. Brinsmead, enables the performer to command with ease the most rapid repetition of the same note; the facility of the key movement in general being such that glissando passages can be executed with such perfect ease as to render them practicable with the lightest touch. The volume of tone is intensified by a peculiar construction of the sounding-board, another improvement being the system of bridging, by which the vibrations are increased and rendered sympathetic. The Pianoforte is capable of all degrees of delicacy and power, its massive structure rendering it less liable to get out of tune than usual; and the instrument is altogether calculated to extend the reputation of its makers."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PIANOS

may be obtained of all the principal Musicians.
Prices from 40 guineas to 350 guineas.

18, 20, 22, WIGMORE-STREET, London, W.,
and
THE "BRINSMEAD WORKS,"
GRAFTON-ROAD, KENTISH TOWN, N.W.

ILLUSTRATED LISTS FREE.

EVERY PIANO GUARANTEED FOR FIVE YEARS.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

NEW FASHION-BOOK and PRICE-LIST
now ready. Sent free.

NEW SUMMER SILKS.
PATTERNS FREE.

150 pieces of Rich Moire Française, all new Colours 7s. 11d. per yard.
100 pieces of do. do. in Black, from 4s. 6d.
100 pieces of the New Moire and Satin Stripes 6s. 11d.
300 pieces of Rich Brocade Satins, including every variety of Colouring, from 4s. 6d.
Coloured and Black Brocade Satins 2s. 11d.
200 pieces Rich Black Satin Brocade 4s. 11d.
Black Satin Duchesse, 6s. 6d., 6s. 6d., and 8s. 6d. Coloured Satin Duchesse 7s. 11d.
Black Satins, from 1s. 9d.

NOW READY, A MAGNIFICENT COLLECTION OF THE NEW DUCHESSE SATIN COSTUMES
at 13 18s. 6d.

Can be had in every New Colour; also in Black; also richly trimmed with Moire and Brocade, 5s. guineas. Fashion-sheets and patterns free.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

SUMMER DRESSES.—PATTERNS FREE.

Angola Cashmere, per yard, 1s. to 1s. 9d.
Vigogne Cashmere, 1s. 6d.
Angola lino, 1s. to 1s. 2d.
Cachemire de la lino, 4s. 11d. wide, 1s. 6d.
Satin Cashmere, 1s. 6d.
Nuns' cloth (very fashionable), 1s. 4d.
The above in all the New Shades.

Cashmere Merino, all shades, 4s. to 4s. 11d. wide, per yard, 1s. 11d. to 2s. 9d.

Cachemire de Paris, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d.
Cachemire de Paris, Light Shades, 1s. 11d. to 2s. 3d.
Bective Serge, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d.
Printed Satins, choice designs, per yard, 9d. to 1s. 9d.
Plain Satins, new shades, 9d. to 1s. 2d.
New striped Skirtings, 1s. to 2s. 3d.
Velvet-Finished Velveteens, all new shades, including Pale Blue, Pale Green, White, Cream, Old Gold, Pink, 2s. 9d. to 3s. 9d.
Black ditto, 1s. 11d. to 6s. 6d.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

FURTHER EXTENSION OF PREMISES.

SILKS, DRESSES, MANTLES, COSTUMES, DRESSING, HOSIERY, GLOVES, LACE, RIBBONS, &c.
In consequence of considerable additions to my premises, including a portion of the BOYS' CLOTHING DEPARTMENT is removed to 5 and 7, Great Portland-street (in communication with my other premises), during the alterations, which, when completed, will comprehend additional premises in the rear of my Oxford-street establishment, extending from Regent-street into Great Portland-street.

THE LONDON CRYSTAL PALACE

BAZAAR.
The progress of the work in the newly-added premises will not in any way interfere with the arrangements for the SPRING and SUMMER SEASON, for which preparations on an unprecedented scale have been made, which it is confidently hoped will be found adequate to the requirements of every Customer. The MOURNING BUSINESS is carried on at 226, 228, 240, 242, Regent-street.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

THE LOUIS VELVETEEN.
The best make known.
JONES BROS., 381 to 385, Holloway-road, N., supply all qualities, Black and Colours, of this celebrated Velvet at cheapest possible rates.
Patterns post-free.
The wear of every yard guaranteed.

HENRY GLAVE'S
ENGLISH and FOREIGN
FANCY SILKS and DRESSES.

Black Brocade Silks .. 3s. 11d., 4s. 11d. yard.
Black Moire Brocade .. 6s. 11d., 8s. 11d. yard.
Black Moire Satin .. 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d. yard.
Coloured Moire silks .. 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d. yard.
Duchesse Satins .. 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d. yard.
Chinise Brocade Silks .. 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d. yard.
Bradford Beiges .. 1s. 9d., 1s. 10d. yard.
Cachemire Foulé .. 1s. 9d., 1s. 10d. yard.
Nuns' Veil Cloth .. 1s. 9d., 1s. 10d. yard.
Cashmere Merino .. 1s. 9d., 1s. 10d. yard.
Mourning goods of every description.
Patterns post-free.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT TO LADIES.
Our New Spring and Summer Fashion Book is now ready. Sent post-free for one stamp.

HENRY GLAVE,
80, 82, 84, 86, 88, New Oxford-street, W.C.

THE LOUIS VELVETEEN.
For every purpose the best manufactured.
The genuine bears the name "Louis" on every yard.
Patterns post-free.

HENRY GLAVE,
80, 82, 84, 86, 88, New Oxford-street.

MADAME ELLIOT makes up DRESSES
stylishly and elegantly. Stylish Costumes ready for wear, from 1s. to 12 guineas.
8, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street.

MADAME ELLIOT'S CORSETS.
Splendid Shape. French and English make, 6s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 21s., 30s., 42s. To avoid delay, send size of waist and full-order for the amount. Corsets exchanged if not approved. Corsets made to order; also, Corsets made for every figure (embonpoint, deformities, curvatures, spinal complaints, &c.). Also Specialties in Ladies' Tournures, Tournures-Jupons, Crinolinettes, &c.—8, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street.

CHAPMAN, NOTTING-HILL, W.,
supplies all qualities of the

LOUIS VELVETEEN,
in Blacks and all Colours, at specially cheap prices.
The wear of every yard guaranteed.

LEWIS'S Contains Bromine and Iodine, the vital, refreshing, and health-giving principles of sea-water, most valuable remedy for all eruptions of the skin, pimples, blotches, &c.

IODINE
Braces and invigorates enfeebled constitutions, gives a healthy glow to the skin, stimulates every organ of the human frame, and is a grand substitute for sea-bathing.

SOAP.—For Hot Climates it is invaluable, quickly curing prickly heat, and such disorders. Price 1s. and 1s. 6d., of JAMES LEWIS and SON, 32, Old Bond-street, London.

THE CELEBRATED LOUIS VELVETEEN.
The wear of every yard guaranteed.
E. COX, SONS, and STAFFORD, 163 to 169, Western-road, Brighton.
Patterns post-free.
Every yard of the genuine bears the name "LOUIS."

PETER ROBINSON'S
COURT and GENERAL MOURNING
WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET.

ON RECEIPT OF LETTER or TELEGRAM.
MOURNING GOODS will be forwarded to all parts of England, on approval (no matter the distance), with an excellent fitting dressmaker (if required), without extra charge.
PETER ROBINSON, 226, 228, 240, 242, Regent-street, London.

INEXPENSIVE MOURNING, as well as the Richest Qualities, can be supplied by PETER ROBINSON upon the most advantageous terms to Families.
THE COURT and FAMILY MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 226, 228, 240, 242, Regent-street, London.

850 PIECES of Rich Quality PLAIN
BLACK SILK at 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d.
RICK PERIN MOIRE, 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d.
RICH BLACK SATIN (all silk), 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 3d.
BLACK BROCADED VELVETS, 4s. 6d., 5s. 11d., 7s. 11d., 8s. 6d.

EVENING and DINNER DRESSES.
A VERY NEW and CHOICE COLLECTION.
BRUSSELS NET, handsomely trimmed, from 2s. 6d.
TARLATANS, from 1s. 6d.
BLACK SPANISH LACE, also in Cream White, from 4s. guineas.
FOR YOUNG LADIES, NUNS' CLOTH, in Cream White, trimmed lace, 3s. 6d. Sketches free.
OPERA MANTLES, 2 guineas.

PETER ROBINSON,
308 to 302, REGENT-STREET, LONDON.

CHARLES MECKING and CO.,
Holborn,
supply all qualities of the celebrated
"LOUIS" VELVETEEN.
In Black and all Colours, at most moderate prices.
Patterns post-free.
The wear of every yard guaranteed.

CARISSIMA.
PIESSE and LUBIN announce their new Perfume for the present Season.—LABORATORY OF FLOWERS, 2, New Bond-street, London; and of all Chemists and Perfumers. Catalogues free on application.

PIESSE and LUBIN.
PESTACHIO NUT TOILET POWDER imparts a natural whiteness and youthful delicacy to the skin, obtainable by no other means. Also repels the unpleasantness of too copious perspiration.—2, New Bond-street, London, W.
May be had of all Perfumers and Druggists throughout the earth. Can be sent by post.

BREIDENBACH'S
ALBANY BOUQUET.

Distilled in honour of the marriage of H.R.H. the Duke of Albany. Price 2s. 6d. to 21s. per Bottle.
BREIDENBACH and CO., Perfumers to Her Majesty the Queen, 157a, New Bond-street, W.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR.
If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer." for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most hair-restorers. It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath.
Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalcules," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke; being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants, it is perfectly delicious to the taste, and as harmless as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORAL BELL LIQUID DENTIFRICE.
Superiority and excellence over all. Unequalled for Cleansing, Preserving, and Beautifying the Teeth and Gums. It removes tartar, hardens the enamel, arrests decay, and imparts to the breath, under all circumstances, a most delightful fragrance. A few drops on the brush night and morning is all sufficient. Use only Floral Bell Liquid Dentifrice. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers. Price 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

LIFE, GROWTH, and BEAUTY for the HAIR. MELROSE FAVORITE HAIR RESTORER.—Supplies everything to keep and restore a beautiful head of hair. Nature's Lovely Crown Melrose is not a dye. Use Melrose if your hair is grey or white. Use Melrose if your hair is falling out and to remove dandruff. Use Melrose to give luxuriant growth and to prevent baldness. Sold in two sizes, at 2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d., by Chemists and Perfumers.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored
by this specific: after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unequalled as a dressing: it causes growth, arrests falling, and it's use defies detection. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince you it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free.—Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

ROBARE'S AUREOLINE, or GOLDEN
HAIR WASH.—For producing the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 6s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.—Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

VINAIGRE d'EUCALYPTUS.—As used by H.R.H. the Duke of Albany. Antiseptic and invigorating. In Bottles, 2s. 6d.; Boxes of Ten, carriage paid, on receipt of 10s. 6d. value 25s. Prepared only by NICHOLLS and CO., Pharmacie Massena, Nice.

HAY FEVER CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Snuffing-Bottle.

ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.
ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.
ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.

IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 6d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS,
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR GOUT and RHEUMATISM.
Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 11d. and 2s. 6d. per Box.

FLIES.
MYOCOM FLY GUM
KEEPS ROOMS ENTIRELY CLEAR OF FLIES.
Sold in 1s. Boxes by all Chemists and Grocers, or a sample post-free 1s. 2d. from the Sole Wholesale Proprietors,
T. CHRISTY and CO., 155, Fenchurch-street, London.

"KEATING'S POWDER" kills BUGS,
Moths, Fleas, Beetles, and all Insects (perfectly unvalued). Harmless to everything but insects.
This, 6d. and 1s.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
For CONSTIPATION,
BILE, HEADACHE.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
A LAXATIVE and REFRESHING,
UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON.
2s. 6d. per Box, stamp included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.
Wholesale—M. GRILLON, 99, Queen-street, London, E.C.

THE PERFECTION OF PREPARED COCOA.

TAYLOR BROTHERS'

"MARAVILLA" COCOA.

Sold in tin-lined Packets only, by all Grocers.

TAYLOR BROTHERS call the attention of consumers to the high sustaining and nutritive powers possessed by MARAVILLA COCOA and MARAVILLA COCOA ESSENCE. These articles being prepared with great judgment and skill from the choicest growths of the Trinidad and South American estates, compare advantageously with the productions offered by other houses, and a trial is strongly recommended before a preference is finally given to any other description.

TAYLOR BROTHERS, MARAVILLA, HOMOEOPATHIC,

ROCK, FLAKE, and PEARL COCOA

MANUFACTURERS,

Brick-lane and Wentworth-street Steam Mills, Spitalfields, London.

"A PURE COCOA OF THE CONSISTENCY OF TEA."

TAYLOR BROTHERS'

"MARAVILLA" COCOA ESSENCE.

Sold in Tins and tin-lined Packets only, by all Grocers.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA.

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder. Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoa Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c.
The faculty pronounced it the most nutritious, perfectly digestible Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps in all climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast Cup costing less than a halfpenny. Samples gratis. In Air-Tight Tins, at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, London, W.C.

CHOCOLAT MENIER Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in 1 lb. and 1/2 lb. PACKETS. For BREAKFAST and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-eight PRIZE MEDALS. Consumption annually exceeds 22,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Paris, London, New York.

Sold Everywhere.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR IS A WORLD-WIDE NECESSARY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR FOR THE NURSERY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR FOR THE FAMILY TABLE.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR FOR THE SICK ROOM.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR HAS A WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

TO MAKE A JELLY or BLANC-MANGE,
Buy a Sixpenny Packet of CANNON'S GELATINE POWDER. This preparation is simple in its use, and perfectly pure. Directions included in each packet. Sold by all Grocers, Oilmen.—B. CANNON and Co., Manufacturers, Lincoln, England.

GENUINE DUBLIN WHISKY.
THE MOST WHOLESOME OF ALL SPIRITS.

DUBLIN WHISKY, Distilled by Messrs. JOHN JAMESON and SON, WILLIAM JAMESON and CO., GEORGE ROE and CO., and JOHN POWER and SON, can be obtained in Wood by wholesale merchants and dealers, direct from their respective distilleries.

INGHAM'S MARSALA WINES maintain their unrivalled and world-famed reputation for extreme purity and delicacy, and are recommended by the Faculty. Ask for "Ingham's Marsala." Of all Wine Merchants.

L. TAMPPIER and CO. World-famed Claret. BORDEAUX. London: 97, Jermy-street; Cellars, 173, Piccadilly.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This delicious Liqueur and the only known remedy for dyspepsia, heretofore so difficult to procure genuine, can now be had of all Wine and Spirit Merchants.

Consignees for the United Kingdom and the Colonies, W. DOYLE, 2, New London-street, E.C.

SOYER'S SODA WATER, Lemonade,
Nectar, &c., are now sold at lower rates than any other similar first-class goods. Made only by G. SOYER and CO., 78, Copenhagen-street, London, successors of the late M. Alexis Soyer, formerly chief cook at the Reform Club. Sold by Grocers, Chemists, and Wine Merchants.

POSTAGE OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.
The postage within the United Kingdom, including the Channel Islands, is One Halfpenny.

ABROAD.
To places abroad the postage is Twopence, with the following exceptions:—

To Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Mozambique, Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, Threepence.

To the Hawaiian Islands and Madagascar (except St. Mary), Fourpence.

Copies printed on thin paper may be sent to the Colonies and Foreign Countries at half the rates stated above; but their use is not recommended, the appearance of the Engravings being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Office: 199, Strand, W.C.

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW DANCE

MUSIC.
 Gee Up! Polka .. D'Albert.
 Waldeck Waltz .. D'Albert.
 Nearest and Dearest Waltz .. D'Albert.
 Patience Waltz and Quadrille .. D'Albert.
 Patience Lancers and Polka .. D'Albert.
 Olivette Waltz and Quadrille .. D'Albert.
 Olivette Lancers and Polka .. D'Albert.
 Drink, Popsy, Drink, Polka .. D'Albert.
 Visions d'Amour Valse .. G. and A. Delbrück.
 Loyauté Waltz .. Luke Wheeler.
 (Dedicated by permission to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.)
 Played at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
 Grenade Waltz .. Mrs. Smith Bridges.
 Tenebris Waltz .. Caroline Lowthian.
 Jo' T'Alme Valse .. Waldteufel.
 Played at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
 Mother Hubbard Polka .. Caroline Lowthian.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW SONGS.

An Old-Fashioned Garden .. Lady Benedict.
 Thine Alone .. A. H. Lehrend.
 'Tis for the Best .. Madame Salomon-Dolby.
 Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd.
 ARI (Evermore) .. A. H. Behrend.
 Sung by Mr. F. King.
 In the twilight of our love .. A. Sullivan.
 (Drawing-room version of "Silver'd is the raven hair," from "Patience.")
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW PIANOFORTE

PIECES.
 Viscount Dupplin .. Three Album Leaves.
 Janotha .. Moment Musical.
 Janotha .. Valse Brillante.
 Janotha .. Gavotte, Solo or Duo.
 Viscount Dupplin .. Handelian Dance.
 Jules de Sylva .. Odetta.
 G. J. Rubini .. Odetta.
 G. F. Kendall .. Margery, Old English Dance.
 G. F. Kendall .. Phyllis, Old English Dance.
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

PATIENCE. An Aesthetic Opera. By

W. S. GILBERT and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed at the Savoy Theatre with enormous success.
 Libretto .. 1s.
 Vocal Score .. 5s.
 Pianoforte Score .. 10s.
 All the following sent post-free for half price.

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
 Boyton Smith's Fantasia .. 4 0
 Duet .. 5 0
 Kine's Fantasia .. 5 0
 Smallwood's Easy Fantasia, 1, 2, 3 .. each 3 0
 Fred. Godfrey's Grand Selection. (As played by all the Military Bands) .. 4 0
 Duet .. 5 0
 CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

MRS. L. MONCRIEFF'S NEW SONGS.

'Twas Only a Year Ago, Love.
 A CREOLE LOVE SONG.
 THOUGH AT SUNRISE.
 Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS'

SYSTEM OF HIRE OF PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, AND AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the instrument becomes the property of the hirer at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2s. 6d. Harmoniums, from 1s. 6d.; and American Organs, from 1s. 6d. a quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from

20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S YACHT PIANINOS,

with folding keyboards, from 30 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IRON-FRAMED

COTTAGE PIANOFORTES for Ocean Steamers and Extreme Climates, from 35 to 65 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S Early English

PIANOFORTES, artistically designed Ebonyed Cases, from 45 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S Iron Double

Overstrung PIANOFORTES, Check Actions, &c., from 50 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from

20 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE

HARMONIUMS, for Church, School, or Drawing-Rooms, from 6 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from 12s. 6d. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED

AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipe with Reeds. Manufactured by C. Lough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. A large variety on view, from 15 to 250 guineas. Price Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PET ORGAN,

Seven Stops, including Sub-bass and Octave Coupler. Elegant Carved Walnut Case. 18 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite

ORGAN. Five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two knee swell, elegant carved Canadian walnut case, price 25 guineas. With thirteen stops, octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 30 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S NEW STYLE

VICTORIA CASE. Twelve stops, five sets of reeds, sub-bass and Octave Coupler. 37 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S CENTENNIAL

GRAND ORGAN, 15 Stops, 9 Sets of Reeds, and Combination Tubes, 45 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PIPE and REED

ORGAN, Style 119. Organ Pipe Front, handsomely diapered, seventeen stops, thirteen sets of reeds. 133 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S "GRAND

ORGAN MODEL. Two claviars, two and a half octave of pedals, twenty-three stops, seventeen sets of reeds, elegant diapered pipes, solid walnut case. 225 guineas. The most perfect American organ manufactured. Illustrated List free.

INSTRUMENTS BY ALL MAKERS may be

HIRED or PURCHASED on the Three-Years' System. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS

FOR CASH. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

GRANDS and SEMI-GRANDS

by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and CRAMER.

on Cramer's Three-Years System (originated by them), from 25s. 6d. per quarter; the easiest and most satisfactory mode of acquiring a thoroughly reliable instrument of the highest quality as regards both tone and construction. Any instrument may be exchanged within three months without loss. The hiring may be discontinued, or an exchange made on special terms, at any time during the currency of the agreement. Pianofortes tuned by the year in town or country. Regent-street, W.; Moorgate-street, E.C.

J. and J. HOPKINSON beg to announce that they have opened the above extensive premises with an entirely new stock of their celebrated Grand and Cottage Pianofortes.

For Sale, Hire, or on the Three-Years' System. Illustrated List, with original designs in the Chippendale, Queen Anne, Early English, and other styles on application to 50, New Bond-street, London, W.

NEW MUSIC.

POPULAR SONGS.

I THINK OF ALL THOU ART TO ME.
 In D and F. COWEN. Net. 2s. Sung by Mrs. Osgood.
 Miss de Fontblanc, Clara Myers, Carlotta Elliott, Estelle Emica.

NOT ALWAYS YOUNG. Song. In E
 and F. PALADILHE. Net. 2s. Sung by Madame
 Trebelli and all principal vocalists.

A WAYSIDE POSY. In D, E, and F.
 A. MICHAEL WATSON. Net. 2s. Sung by Agnes Larkom,
 Lucy Franklin, Annie Giles, Emmeline Dixon, Miss Woodhatch, Madame Worrell, and Annie Marriott.

A DAY DREAM. In D and F.
 BLUMENTHAL. Net. 2s. Sung by Annie Marriott,
 Sedge Glover, Emmeline Dixon, Miss Woodhatch, Madame
 Worrell, and Madame Bernant.

TOLD IN THE TWILIGHT. In D, F,
 and G. Weatherly and MOLLOY. Net. 2s. Sung by Annie Giles, Emmeline Dixon, Miss McClean, and Madame Worrell.

LOVE WILL SHINE ALL THROUGH.
 (Contralto). PINSUTI. Net. 2s. Sung by Miss Clara
 Myers, &c.

THE CHILD'S LETTER TO HEAVEN. In
 D and F. LEVEY. Net. 2s. A most effective drawing-room song.
 "Words of exquisite tenderness, and blended with music of a most charming character."—Vide Press.

COWEN'S latest SONGS (in keys to suit all voices). Each, net. 2s.
 If thou wilt remember. Good-night.
 Mondel (Kiss me Sweetheart). The Night has a Thousand Eyes.

ALL SONGS (including the above) published by me may be sung at any concert free of charge, the sole exceptions being "She wore a wreath of roses" and "Sweet and low" (Wallace), over which I have no control.
 Signed, JOSEPH WILLIAMS.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW VIOLIN

MUSIC.
 THE VIOLIN STUDENT. 1s. 6d. each, net.
 1. Largo. Handel. 2. Gavotte. Rameau.
 3. Slumber Song. Schumann. 4. Stray Thought. Farmer.
 5. Andantino. Schubert. 6. Minuet. Boucherin.
 7. Cavatina. Raff. 8. Andante. Handel.

SALLY BROWN. GEORGE FOX.
 Comic Cantata, suitable either for drawing-room or concert. Four voices and Chorus. Net. 2s. 6d.

HAROLD THOMAS. OPERATIC, &c.,
 FANTASIAS. Net. 2s. each.
 LES HUGUENOTS. FAUS (Gounod).
 LUCIA. MUSE IN EGGITO.
 DON GIOVANNI. DER FREYSCHUTZ.
 THOVIATORE. TRAVIATA.
 MASANILLO. MARTHA.
 LOHENGRIN. TANNHAUSER.
 HYMN OF PRAISE. ST. PAUL.

BILLE TAYLOR. Vocal Score, 6s.
 QUADRILLES, Cote. 2s. net. VALSE, Godfrey, 2s. net.
 LANCERS, 2s. net. Quadrille and Waltz. Complete
 FANTASIA for PIANO, by Tourville, 1s. 6d. net.

CLAUDE DUVAL Vocal Score, 6s.
 QUADRILLES, Cote. 2s. net.

J. WILLIAMS, Berners-street; and
 121, Cheapside.

BOCCACCIO.—The universally popular
 Opera by VON SUPPE. The only complete authentic edition, as performed at the Comedy Theatre. Vocal Score, with English Words, by Farnie and Reeco. Net. 1s. 6d.

BOCCACCIO for Pianoforte. Complete, 2s.

BOCCACCIO AND MASCOTTE ALBUM.
 Containing "Boccaccio" Quadrille, Waltz, Galop, March, and Polka; and "Mascotte" Quadrille and Waltz. Complete (32 pages), price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
 Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S
 SUCCESSFUL PUBLICATIONS.

IN SHADOWLAND. CIRO PINSUTI.
 Sung by Miss Hope Glenn with great success.
 Price 4s.

AT THE PORCH, by A. J. CALDICOTT,
 Pianoforte and Harmonium Accompaniment ad lib.,
 is now being sung by
 Madame Osborne Williams,
 Miss Annie Listerworth,
 Mrs. Lancelotti-Sims, with considerable effect.
 Price 4s.

THE SCENT OF THE LIMES,
 J. L. ROECKEL,
 In E flat and F,
 is now being sung by
 Miss Maud Cameron,
 Miss Thormille,
 Madame Florence Clare,
 with much promise of great popularity.
 Price 4s.

CLASSICAL EXTRACTS FROM THE GREAT COMPOSERS.
 Arranged for the Pianoforte
 by J. DUVAL.
 Six Books, each 2s.

GUARDIAN ANGELS.
 By G. ADELMANN.
 Just published.
 "Much above the average of modern airs."
 Price 4s.

CLASSICS FOR YOUNG PIANISTS.
 Edited by F. LEMOINE.
 1. Tema, Extract (Mozart). 4. Choral. Fantasia (Beet-
 2. Marcia alla Turca (Beet- hoven).
 3. Sondo. all' Ongarese 6. Toccata con Var., from Sep-(Haydn). zett (Beethoven).
 Each, 3s.
 "Exceedingly well fingered and arranged, and will be found a great help to teachers."—Orchestra.
 Each of the above post-free at half price in stamps.
 6, New Burlington-street, W.

PIANOFORTES FOR HIRE or for SALE,
 from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Poultry-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, CAUTION the Public that Pianos of this name are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture.
 For information as to authenticity apply to 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 50 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from
 50 guineas.
 OBLIQUES, from 45 guineas.
 GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS HALF PRICE.
 In consequence of a change of partnership the whole of this splendid stock (perfect with all the improvements of the day)—viz., steel frame, overstrung, trichord throughout, check action, &c., by this long-standing firm of 100 years' reputation is now offered at half price; and in order to effect a speedy sale
 the easiest terms arranged, with ten years' warranty.
 Trichord Cottages from hire, &c., 10 to 12.
 Class 0, 11s. Class 2, 12s. Class 4, 13s. Class 6, 14s.
 Class 1, 11s. Class 3, 12s. Class 5, 13s. Class 7, 14s.
 American Organs, best, &c., from 15s.
 Carriage free, and all risk taken, to any station in England.
 THOS. D'ALMAINE and CO., 91, Finsbury-pavement, Moorgate, E.C.

NEW MUSIC.

B. WILLIAMS'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PRINCESS HELEN OF WALDECK
 PYMONT. Suite de Valse. Par GEORGES
 LAMOTHE. 2s. net.

AUF IMMER (For Ever). Waltzer. By
 OSCAR SEYDEL. The favour with which this waltz has been already received bids fair to outstrip the celebrated
 "Weit von Dir" in popularity. 2s. net.

THE OLD and THE YOUNG MARIE.
 By Weatherly and COWEN. Sung by Miss Clara
 Samuel. 2s. net.

LOVE ABIDES. By Weatherly and
 ROECKEL. 2s. net.

THRO' THE GOLDEN GATE. Words
 by Frederick Wood; Music by GEORGE FOX. Sung by Miss Emilie Lloyd. 2s. net.
 London: B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row.

MUSICAL VACANCIES for Talent.—The London Conservatoire grants FREE TUITION and Introductions, as proposed by the Royal College of Music; special residential departments for ladies. Address SECRETARY,
 6, Tavistock-square.

PLEYEL WOLFF and CO.'S PIANOS.
 Every description of these celebrated
 Instruments for SALE or HIRE.
 Sole Agency, 170, New Bond-street, W.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS
 at RODRIGUES', 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON.
 SETS FOR THE WRITING-TABLE AND BOUDOIR,
 IN POLISHED BRASS, ORNOLD, REVISED CHINA, BRONZE, ALGERIAN ONYX, and OXIDIZED SILVER, from 21s. to £10.

DRESSING CASES .. 21s. to £20
 JEWEL CASES .. 21s. to £10
 DESPATCH BOXES .. 21s. to £10
 TOILET WRITING CASES .. 4s. 6d. to £5
 ENVELOPE CASES and WRITING BOOKS .. 10s. 6d. to £5
 STATIONERY CASES and CABINETS .. 21s. to £5
 INKSTANDS .. 7s. 6d. to £5
 CANDLES (per pair) .. 7s. 6d. to £5
 GLOVE and HANDKERCHIEF BOXES (per pair) .. 21s. to £5
 CASES OF IVORY BRUSHES .. 6s. 6d. to £10
 SCENT BOTTLES .. 10s. 6d. to £5
 WORK BOXES and BASKETS .. 15s. to £5
 CARRIAGE and TABLE CLOCKS .. 6s. 6d. to £10
 OPERA and FIELD GLASSES .. 21s. to £5
 FANS, IVORY, PEARL, and WOOD .. 5s. to £5
 CARD FRAMES and TAZZES .. 5s. to £5
 CHAIR and CIGARETTE CABINETS .. 5s. to £5
 THE NEW "TANTALUS" LIQUEUR STAND .. 10s. to £10
 THE "TANTALUS" PERFUME STAND .. 7s. 6d. to £5
 And a large and choice assortment of ENGLISH
 VIENNESE, and PARISH NOVELTIES, from 2s. to 2s.

PORTRAIT ALBUMS at RODRIGUES', interleaved for Vignette and Cabinet Portraits, 4s. 6d. to £5. Floral Albums, Scrap Albums, Presentation and Regimental Albums, Portrait Frames and Screens in great variety.

RODRIGUES' DRESSING BAGS for Travelling, with silver, silver-gilt, and plated fittings, from £3 3s. to £10 10s. Presentation and Regimental Bags of all kinds at very moderate prices.—42, Piccadilly.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office, Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s.
 The arms of man and wife blended. Great engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, &c., &c. Gold seal, with crest, 20s.
 Solid gold ring, 18-carat, half-marked with crest, 42s. Manuscript of 100 engravings, 3s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 50 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto. Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS by CULLETON.
 Fifty best quality, 2s. 8d. post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate, Wedding Cards, 1s. each, 50 Enclosed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, &c., &c.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's Inn)
 Heraldic Offices send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.;
 in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies,
 Illuminated Addresses, Silk Banners, &c.—PUGH BROTHERS,
 Great Turnstile, Lincoln's Inn, W.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1878.

THE LADY OF THE WOODS and THE LORD OF THE GLEN. These two remarkable Engravings, together with the Original Drawings by J. MacWhirter,
 A.R.S.A., are now being issued by Messrs. GLADWELL BROTHERS, at the City of London Fine-Art Gallery, 20 and 21, Gracechurch-street. Admission by private card.

VITREMANE, superseding Diaphane.
 An easy and inexpensive method of decorating windows in churches, public buildings, and private houses, by which may be produced the rich colouring and beautiful designs equal in appearance to real stained glass. Handbook of Designs and full instructions, 1s. 4d. Boxes, containing designs, &c., at 21s.
 1s. 6d. 42s. Particulars post-free. Sole inventors, J. BARNARD and SON, 233 (late 339), Oxford-street, London, W.

CHROMOPHOTOGRAPHY.
 (KRAUS' PROCESS).
 The New Art (enabling any person without previous knowledge of either Painting or Drawing) to Colour Photographs on convex glasses, in imitation of China and Enamel Painting. Boxes containing every requisite, 20s. and 20s.
 Particulars post-free. Specimens shown on application at the Sole Agents, J. BARNARD and SON, 233, Oxford-street, London, W.

OSLER'S SHOW-ROOMS,
 100, OXFORD-STREET, W.

CHINA DINNER, DESSERT, TEA,
 and
 BREAKFAST SERVICES.
 Glass Dinner and Dessert Services, Chandeliers and Wall Lights.
 LAMPS, LUSTRES, VASES, FLOWER STANDS,
 TABLE DECORATIONS.
 CHINA, GLASS, and PARIAN ORNAMENTS
 OF ALL KINDS.
 Sole Agents for the Venice and Murano Glass Company.

OSLER MANUFACTORY,
 BIRMINGHAM.
 Show-rooms:
 100, OXFORD-STREET, W.

NOTICE.—GARDNERS', consequent on the extension of their Metal Trades, are RELINQUISH-
 ING their ELECTRO-PLATE, CUTLERY, and CLOCK DEPARTMENTS. The STOCK of the first quality only is NOW OFFERED to the public at a DISCOUNT of 37 PER CENT from the marked prices. Descriptive Lists post-free on application.—Nos. 453 and 454, West Strand, Charing-cross.

ELKINGTON and CO.,
 ELECTRO PLATE.
 SILVER PLATE
 CLOCKS and BRONZES.

ELKINGTON and CO.,
 TESTIMONIAL PLATE.
 CUTLERY, &c.
 Illustrated Catalogues post-free.
 ELKINGTON and CO., 22, Regent-st.; or 42, Moorgate-st., City.

THE SEWILL'S KEYLESS WATCHES, FINEST WATCHES MADE.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES
 are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862;
 Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from 4s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. Price
 Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; and 20, Regent-street.

D. R. DE JONGH'S

(KNIGHT OF THE ORDER OF LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM, KNIGHT OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR)

LIGHT-BROWN

COD-LIVER OIL.

THE PUREST. THE MOST EFFICACIOUS.
 THE MOST PALATABLE. THE MOST DIGESTIBLE.

Proved by thirty years' medical experience to be
 THE ONLY COD-LIVER OIL which produces the full curative effects in

CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, THROAT AFFECTIONS, GENERAL DEBILITY, AND WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR G. DUNCAN GIBB, Bart., M.D.,
 Physician to the Westminster Hospital.

"The value of Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine; but, in addition, I have found it a remedy of great power in the treatment of many Affections of the Throat and Larynx, especially in Consumption of the latter, where it will sustain life when everything else fails."

DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL,
 Physician Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.

"I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, Dr.
 DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod-Liver Oil which I am acquainted. It was especially noted, in a large number of cases in which the patients protested they had never been able to retain or digest other Cod-Liver Oil, that Dr. DE JONGH'S OIL was not only tolerated, but taken readily, and with marked benefit."

DR. HUNTER SEMPLE,
 Physician Hospital for Diseases of the Throat and Chest.

"I have long been aware of the great reputation enjoyed by the LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL introduced into medical practice by Dr. DE JONGH, and have recommended it with confidence. The Oil of Dr. DE JONGH'S OIL very useful in cases of Chronic Cough, and especially in Laryngeal Disease complicated with Consumption."

JOSEPH J. POPE, Esq., M.R.C.S.,
 Late Staff Surg., Army, Prof. of Hygiene, Birkbeck Institution.

"I found during my Indian experience that the worth and character of Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL remained unchanged by tropical heat or foreign climate, and it was, from its uniformity of character, particularly adapted for long-continued administration.
 The value of 'Indian' Oil, of all adulterated states of the system, is now becoming thoroughly recognised; and it is, without doubt, from the animal oils and fats, rather than from their vegetable substitutes, that we may hope to derive the surest benefit. The Oil of Dr. DE JONGH'S in everyone's reach a reliable and valuable remedy, one that cannot be too widely recognised."

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold ONLY in capsules Imperial Half

EGYPT AS IT IS.

FROM SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

1. Soldier of the Garrison at Siout.

6. Coptic Monastery on the Gebel-el-Dair.

2. Cemetery of Siout.

7. Piercing and Selling Pipe-stems.

3. A Dyer at Siout.

8. Sepulchral Grottoes near Siout.

4. Pipe-Merchants at Siout.

9. Siout, View taken from Embankment leading to the Cemetery.

5. Pounding Coffee at Siout.

THE SIAMESE ROYAL ORDER AND MEDAL.

The flourishing city of Bangkok, the capital of Siam, has lately celebrated its centenary—having been founded by Rama Dibodi IV. on April 21, 1782. That Monarch, whose coronation took place on June 13, 1782, was also the founder of the present reigning dynasty—the House of Chakrakri. In commemoration of those events, there have been great festivities and public rejoicings this year throughout the whole of Siam; and the present King, who is the fifth in descent, has instituted the Order of the “Maha” or great “Chakrakri,” in honour of the founder of his family and his capital. This decoration is to be bestowed upon forty-nine members who will compose the order. The Sovereign, one Grand Master, the Queen as Grand Mistress, thirty male Companions, and sixteen female Companions. The gentlemen wear the collar round the neck and pendant, the badge upon the left breast, and the “chuta,” or lesser “Chakrakri,” hanging from a yellow silk sash, worn across the right shoulder. The lady members wear only the pendant, which is suspended from a small silk bow; the Queen, however, has a collar in addition to the pendant, being Grand Mistress. The badge of this order, which is of singular beauty and appropriateness, has been expressly designed by the present young and enlightened King of Siam. In the centre is the peculiar heart-shaped emblem, the mystic symbol of Buddhism, the national religion of the Siamese; and from this rays of light are made to spring by means of coloured enamel. An inscription in the Pali language, signifying “Faith, Loyalty, and Patriotism,” encircles this figure; and wreaths of the sacred “Chiya Phruk,” or Tree of Victory, stand upon the wheel and tridents, which are supposed to be typical of Law and Power. The Great Crown, or “Maha Mongkut,” is placed above these emblems, and, with its rays of Glory, completes the artistic outline. The subsidiary parts of the design are in complete harmony, the collar being composed of the same emblems of Buddhism alternately with the Wheel and Tridents, and the Badge or Star having the same emblems.

The Siamese have been renowned throughout Asia, from the earliest times, for the excellence of their work in gold, and the purity of their metal. They have not yet, however, mastered the difficult art of enamelling sufficiently well to be able to produce the varied colours, and to show up distinct and clear the delicate inscriptions on these decorations. Their method also of setting stone is somewhat rough and rude. The manufacture of the whole of these decorations was therefore intrusted to a London firm, that of Mr. J. W. Benson, of Old Bond-street, who has completed the work under the intelligent supervision of his Highness the Prince Prisdang, the special envoy from the King, and has delivered the whole in Bangkok in time for the installations. Some idea may be formed of their magnificence, when it is stated that the collar, badge, and pendant to be worn by the Sovereign have not less than 2382 diamonds set in them, and the pendant and collar for the Queen contains 1608 diamonds. All the badges and pendants of the male companions have the Buddhist symbols in the centre set entirely in diamonds, and all the other parts are of pure gold and enamel.

Another of our Illustrations shows the exact size and pattern of the medal which has just been struck to commemorate the centenary of the founding of the city of Bangkok. On the face are represented the busts of the five Sovereigns of Siam—from the first to the present one of the now reigning Siamese dynasty, the house of “Maha Chakrakri”—in the full state robes of their times, and arranged from right to left in the order of their reigns. Around the busts are inscribed in Siamese the names and titles under which they respectively were known. The medal has exactly one hundred rays spreading outwards, as being typical of the centenary, and which form a very effective and uncommon bordering. The reverse side has the following inscription in Siamese:—“In commemoration of the first centenary of Bangkok from Sunday, April 21, 1782, the first year of the reign of Phrabadh Somdet Phra Buddha Yofa Chulaloky, to Friday, April 21, 1882, the fifteenth year of the reign of Phrabadh Somdet Phra Chula Chomkla Chow Yuhya, the present King.” Above six thousand of these medals are being struck by Mr. Benson, of Old Bond-street, for the King or Siam; some in pure gold, and others in silver, gilt with red gold; silver, gilt with yellow gold; silver, bronze silvered, and pure bronze. These are to be presented to the principal nobles and officials of the Kingdom, and will be worn suspended from the neck, by a loop from a red and white ribbon, the national colours of Siam.

Her Majesty has approved the appointment of Mr. R. W. Duff, M.P., as a Junior Lord of the Treasury.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

Twelve months (including Christmas Number), £1 9s. 3d.
Six months, 14s. Christmas Half-Year, 15s. 3d.
Three months, 7s. Christmas Quarter, 8s. 3d.

Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6d. for each Number, paid in advance.

ABROAD.

The yearly subscription abroad is 36s. 4d. (on thin paper, 32s.), with the following exceptions:—

To Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Luban, Mozambique, Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, 41s. (thin paper, 31s.). To Madagascar, except St. Mary, 45s. (on thin paper, 36s. 4d.).

Subscribers are specially advised to order the thick paper edition, the appearance of the engravings in the thin paper copies being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the distance of the mails.

Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publishing Office, 125, Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London; or by Post-office Order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, to George C. Leighton, of 125, Strand, London.

OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS.

WOODLAND WARDLERS.

In the early days of leafy June—when the beech and the oak, the last of our forest trees to put on their summer dress, are in full leaf—when spring is gliding imperceptibly into summer—when the unsullied purity and freshness of the deepening verdure make us think we are still in the vernal season, only that there is a balmy softness in the air which breathes of summer; at this sweetest moment of the year, the sweetest of all birds evince the greatest affection for their young. As to the loves of the parent birds for each other, so devoted is the male to his mate that, if captured after the birds have paired, he almost invariably pines and dies; hence bird-fanciers, who make sad havoc amongst the nightingales, endeavour to capture the males on their first arrival, before the females have come, or at least before any of the billing and cooing has set in. The male is most assiduous in his attentions to his little wife, supplying her with food while sitting, and even relieving her not infrequently by himself helping in the tedious duties of incubation. And how he serenades her!—breaking the stillness of the moon-lit night with his enchanting love-song; for though he sings to her at all times of the day, it is at night, when all the rest of the woodland singers are hushed in sleep, that the full compass of his strain delights us most; and sweeter then, than in the garish light of day, are those exquisite trills of his, and that “one low piping sound, more sweet than all.” It is perhaps that “one low piping sound,” plaintive but full of tenderness, that has made almost all the poets, from Homer downward, sing of this sweet bird as sad and grief-stricken, and made them weep “o’er Philomela’s pity-pleading strains.” But we prefer to think with Coleridge that “in Nature there is nothing melancholy,” and that it is the “merry nightingale,” and not the “sad bird of Night,” that can carol forth his love-lay as joyously when the moon and stars are shining as in the warm daylight. Toward the end of the month his song almost ceases; for the young birds are then fledged, and his gentle mate no longer requires his sympathetic minstrelsy to sustain her.

Next to the nightingale, the sweetest of our sylvan warblers is undoubtedly the blackcap. He has been called the contralto singer of the woodland choirs. His strain, while rich and deep in its intonation, has also considerable variety, and is charmingly modulated. Now it is soft and plaintive, as if the singer were far away, and now, gradually rising in power and compass, we catch a glimpse of him in the branches right above us, his wings slightly drooping and his little throat quivering, while he pours forth a roundelay, witching, wild, and loud. But the blackcap is shier and more timid in its habits than the nightingale, and, when it finds it is observed, quickly retires into the denser parts of its cover. Like the nightingale, it is of a very affectionate disposition, the male bird feeding his love while she is on the nest, and himself sitting on the eggs at times, though of course not so long or so persistently as his mate. In her plumage the female somewhat resembles her partner, but it is more tinged with brown, and instead of the jet-black patch which he has on the crown of his head (whence his name of “blackcap”), her poll is a reddish brown. The blackcap is capable of being kept in confinement; but it seems very hard to imprison this wild creature, for, though its gentle nature allows it to become wonderfully attached to its jailer, so strongly is it endowed with the instinct of migration as to die of grief when the proper period arrives. But for the matter of that, it seems just as barbarous to cage a nightingale. Though decidedly woodland birds, both the blackcap and the nightingale may often be found in sheltered and secluded lanes where the hedges are thick and tangled, and occasionally even in our shrubberies and gardens.

Three very sweet singers, and so closely resembling each other as to be barely distinguishable unless quite near, are the chiff-chaff and the wood and willow warblers. The first-named little bird is the smallest of this pretty trio, and has a duller plumage than its congeners. The wood and willow warblers are distinguishable from each other by the former having a more decided green on its upper parts, and on its under parts a snowier white. From its greater size and brighter plumage, the wood-warbler is the most conspicuous of the three; but it has scarcely so sweet a song as the willow-warbler, which fragile creature is indeed one of the sweetest of all of our feathered friends. What with its mellow and melodious lay, its delicate appearance, its pretty graceful motions, and, above all, its charming trustfulness, the willow-warbler is one of our special favourites. Its strain has neither great compass nor much variety, but is rich in tone and exquisitely soft and plaintive. A woodland bird, it is also found, like the chiff-chaff and the wood-warbler, in thick hedges, in gardens, and on the borders of wooded streams.

The garden-warbler, as its name indicates, frequents shrubberies and large gardens, but it is also very partial to the undergrowth of woods and plantations. Shy and retiring in its habits, it is not so often seen as the willow-warbler, but its song is quite as sweet, and is so rich and flute-like in tone as to place it in the front rank of our woodland songsters. Like the brown nightingale, its plumage is not such as to attract attention, though, in common with most of the warblers, it is very graceful in its movements.

Though rarely seen in the Dryads’ deepest haunts, the sprightly whitethroat must be included amongst our sylvan singers. It frequents chiefly the outskirts of woods and plantations, and quiet lanes and hedgerows. Not nearly so shy as the garden warbler—whose tender strain is heard only from the shadiest of closely-embowered covers—the quick and hurried song of the whitethroat is often carolled forth while on the wing and while wheeling round and round, in utter joyousness of heart, in the circumambient air. But the song is not so sweet as the garden-warbler’s, some of the notes, indeed, being a trifle harsh. The little creature, however, seems so thoroughly happy in giving forth those few hurried notes of his, and sings so long and heartily, we cannot help but love his simple lay, which is sweet and pleasing and is continued well into the summer, when nearly all the little woodland throats are silent.

W. OAK RUID.

The Corporation of London has adopted the report of a committee recommending that £1000 per annum should be contributed for five years in aid of the movement for establishing a Royal College of Music.

BADGES OF THE SIAMESE ORDER OF THE MAHA CHAKRAKRI.

the haunts of Nature are the woodlands. And it is in the woodlands, where the greenwood shades are greenest and shadiest, where summer suns scorch not and summer dust does not penetrate, that we find the sweetest of our feathered warblers.

That “syren of the woods,” the nightingale, claims, of course, our first attention. Upon its arrival in England, it remains at first in hedges and thickets on the borders of cultivated ground; but as soon as the trees are sufficiently in leaf to suit its fastidious taste, it retires to the woods and the deepest of embosomed thickets, especially such as have a limpid stream stealing through the undergrowth. There, where the wild blue-bell hyacinth is now scenting the woodland air, amongst the roots of a tree, on the stream’s bank, or in some thick shrub, it builds its unassuming nest. But though the nest is very loosely put together, it must not be supposed that nightingales are at all wanting in domestic attachments. The

SIAMESE MEDAL TO COMMEMORATE THE CENTENARY OF THE CAPITAL, BANGKOK.

THE CHURCH.

PREFEMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Baker, W. De Foe, Vicar of Saxilby, to be Vicar of Welton.
 Braithwaite, J. M.; Vicar of Crofton.
 Briggs, Henry, to be Curate of Hursley, Winchester.
 Cornish, Charles Edward, Vicar of South Petherton; Vicar of St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol.
 Cooper, J. Hughes, Rector of Tarporley, Rural Dean of Middlewich; Honorary Canon of Chester.
 Cox, W. E., Vicar of Chittlehamholt; Rector of Georgeham.
 Goddard, William Ward; Perpetual Curate of St. Saviour's, Hoxton.
 Gordon, Charles James, Curate-in-Charge of Langport; Vicar of St. Mary, Far Cotton, Northampton.
 Gordon, William, Curate of Chulmleigh; Rector of Martinhoe.
 Gould, James Aubrey; Vicar of Bramford Speke.
 Holtum, N. A., Curate-in-Charge of St. Matthew's, Sheffield; Vicar of Scawton, Yorkshire.
 Humble-Crofts, W. J., Vicar of Frickley-with-Clayton, Doncaster; Rector of Waldron, Sussex.
 Jeffcock, J. T., Rector of the Collegiate Church, Wolverhampton; Rural Dean of Wolverhampton.
 Lester, Edward Augustus; Vicar of Bishop's Nympton.
 Linfield, Ralph Parkinson; Incumbent of St. Stephen's, Elton, near Bury.
 Perry, W. C.; Chaplain of the Guild Chapel, Stratford-on-Avon.
 Phelps, Hubert Hunter; Perpetual Curate of St. Peter's, Congleton.
 Porter, Erisey John, Vicar of Metfield, Suffolk; Vicar of Welcombe, North Devon.
 Ring, T. P.; Vicar of Hanley.
 Sandberg Graham, Curate of St. Clement and St. Mary, Sandwich; Chaplain of the Seckford Hospital and Almshouses, Woodbridge, Suffolk.
 Smith, John, Vicar of Lyme Regis; Canon of Alton Australia in Salisbury Cathedral.
 Southam, John Henry, Curate of Kilington; Chaplain of the Workhouse, Axminster.
 Sullivan, John Filmer, Vicar of Frant; Vicar of St. Matthew's, Bayswater.
 Taylor, John Charles; Vicar of Harmondsworth.
 Walsh, A. G. D.; Perpetual Curate of St. George's, Carrington.
 Ware, Douglas Powell, Curate of St. Mary's, Glasgow; Incumbent of St. Cuthbert's, Hawick, N.B.
 Watkins, William, Archdeacon of Northumberland; Archdeacon of Auckland.
 Weldon, G. W., Incumbent of the Chapel-of-Ease, Islington; Vicar of Bickley, Kent.—Guardian.

The Church Congress will meet at Derby on Oct. 3.

There were collections on Sunday in all the London churches and chapels on behalf of the metropolitan hospitals.

A church, built after the designs and under the personal superintendence of the Hon. Mrs. Holden-Hambrough, has been opened at Pipewell.

Last Saturday afternoon the Archbishop of Canterbury consecrated a second church for the parish of Bexley, Kent, the land for which was a free gift of the University of Oxford.

The Lord Mayor presided on the 5th inst., at the Mansion House, at the second annual meeting of the East London Church Fund, which is now providing for seventy-five additional workers in this district, at a cost of £7000 a year.

The Bishop of London presided on Monday at the annual meeting of the London Diocesan Home Mission, and explained that under its influence forty new district parishes had been created. Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., who was one of the speakers, commended the mission as performing a most useful and necessary work in the metropolis.

On Corpus Christi Day the foundation-stone of a new church (St. Thomas the Apostle, Shepherd's-bush) was laid by Lady Burdett-Coutts, in the presence of a large assembly. The new district will be taken out of the now populous parish of St. Stephen, and will be under the charge of the Rev. H. Small, M.A. A bazaar in aid of the building fund was afterwards opened by the Baroness.

A joint committee of the two Houses of the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury have reported in favour of the separation of the Channel Islands from the See of Winchester, and their constitution into a separate diocese, whose Bishop should have jurisdiction over English congregations in Europe which are not under the direction of the Bishop of Gibraltar.

The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh on Monday opened the new south transept of and laid a memorial-stone in the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, in Ladbroke-grove, North Kensington. There was a large attendance at the service, which was conducted by the Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Incumbent of St. Patrick's Church, Hove, Brighton, and the Rev. Dr. E. K. Gray, Vicar of the church.

The ancient village church of St. Bartholomew, Shapwick, has been restored at a cost of about £2000, to which the villagers have contributed largely. A handsome font-cover has been provided as a memorial of Miss Snow and Miss Pritchard, who were friends of the Rector's family, and who were drowned while skating at Blandford on Dec. 20, 1879. The chancel is laid with tiles designed by the Prolocutor of Canterbury, Lord A. Compton, Dean of Worcester.

The Bishop of Carlisle recently opened the Mission chapel which has been erected for the St. Peter's-square district of Leeds parish church. The building, which stands on a site given by Lord Derby, will accommodate 300 worshippers, and the school below it 500 children. It has cost about £3500. Amongst the gifts which have been made to the chapel is a chalice in memory of the Rev. G. G. Goodwin, a son of the right rev. prelate, and for some time a curate at St. Peter's.

It was reported at a meeting held recently at Truro that the subscriptions towards the new Cornish cathedral amounted to upwards of £50,000, of which £41,000 had been paid. Out of this amount the sum of £10,600 had been given for land for the site, and rather more than £7000 has been expended on the building. The Bishop of Truro mentioned at the meeting that a conditional subscription of £1000 had been promised towards the building of the south porch, and that in all probability the conditions will be complied with.

Recently the Bishop of Manchester consecrated the new church of St. Stephen's, Bury, which has been built at a cost of about £6000, upon a site given by the Earl of Derby. At the luncheon, Bishop Fraser said that when the diocese was first founded there were perhaps about 240 or 250 churches, while at the present time there are about 480. Bishop Lee had the opinion that if a new church was consecrated in every two months the wants of the population would almost be met, and it was rather singular that he has completed 130 churches, which was nearly six churches in every year of his episcopate. He (Bishop Fraser) was now in the thirteenth year of his episcopate, and during that period he had consecrated something like 105 churches, or an average of nine each year.

A window (by Messrs. Campbell, Smith, and Campbell) has been placed in the chancel of Holy Trinity parish church, Windsor, by the Rector, the Rev. Arthur Robins, and his friends, to commemorate the escape of the Queen from assassination, and, on the 5th inst., the Princess of Wales visited the church to unveil the window, which was greatly admired. At the same time a carved oak altar screen (designed by Mr. Stephen Wyborn, of Windsor) was inaugurated by the Prince of Wales.—A three-light painted window, from the studio of Mr. Taylor, of Berners-street, has been placed in the parish church of West Drayton. It is the gift of Miss Rickards, in memory of her parents and sister.—An effective Munich east window, of five lights, has been placed in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Ashton-on-Mersey, in memory of Sarah, wife of Mr. Frederick Fielder, Whitefield House, Ashton-on-Mersey, and of their elder son, Frederick Rodolph. The artists are Messrs. Mayer and Co.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

DIGESTION.

Professor Arthur Gamgee, M.D., F.R.S., in his fourth and concluding lecture, given on Tuesday, the 6th inst., traced the changes which the products of gastric digestion, that have resisted absorption, constituting the chyme, undergo when submitted to the action of the bile and the pancreatic juice. He referred to the bile, as containing the bile acid and the bile colouring matter, which are to be looked on as by-products in the great essential processes going on in the liver, and not exerting any definite digestive action, because destitute of any digestive ferment. The bile, however, facilitates pancreatic digestion by neutralising the acidity of the chyme, and thus establishing a condition favourable to the activity of the pancreatic ferments. The structure of the pancreas was then considered, attention being directed to the different appearances of the pancreas of animals fasting, or in different stages of digestion. The mode of secretion, and the characters of the pancreatic juice were then noticed, as well as the fact that the pancreatic gland forms three important ferments, which act on the three principal groups of food constituents:—1. The diastatic, analogous to that of the saliva. 2. The proteolytic, termed trypsin, present in the pancreatic juice, which (unlike pepsin, which can only digest proteids in the presence of free acids) can dissolve proteids in neutral solutions, alkalies, or fatty acids. The employment of artificially peptonised food was then noticed, especially those prepared with the aid of solutions containing trypsin, in the treatment of some diseases, a benefit which has been lately much promoted by the researches of Dr. W. Roberts, F.R.S., of Manchester. 3. The fat-decomposing ferment was next considered. Reference was also made to Claude Bernard's observations on the power of the pancreatic juice and tissue in emulsifying fats and partly decomposing them into glycerin and fatty acids. That the latter has been questioned on insufficient grounds was demonstrated by the experiments of the Professor.

PROPERTIES OF THE METALS.

Professor Dewar, M.A., F.R.S., began his eighth and concluding lecture, given on Thursday, the 8th inst., by noticing the properties of nickel and cobalt, illustrating the coating of iron with nickel to prevent oxidation, and explaining the use of the salts of cobalt in the production of colouring matters. The great value of copper and its various uses were then described; also its well-known alloys, brass and speculum metal. The way in which the purest copper is obtained from pyrites was explained. The spectra of nickel and cobalt are very complex, while those of copper, lead, and silver are comparatively simple. These were exhibited, and the distinction between them and that of thallium, a rare metal discovered in blende by Mr. Crookes, was specially noticed. After commenting on the well-known properties of lead, the Professor explained the principles, and exhibited the construction of the secondary battery, in which electricity may be stored up, invented by Planté and improved by Faure, which is based upon a valuable application of thin sheets of lead. By a recent form of this battery, constructed by Mr. Sellen, a large mass of platinum wire was kept at a glowing red heat throughout the lecture hour. The properties of silver were next illustrated and the absorption of oxygen by the fused metal and the expulsion of the gas when it cooled was shown. The lecture concluded with illustrations of the important properties and uses of platinum, and the peculiarities of osmium, palladium, and some other rare metals.

THE EXCITABILITY OF PLANTS.

Professor Burdon Sanderson, LL.D., F.R.S., gave the discourse at the last evening meeting of the season on Friday, the 9th inst. After stating that the term "excitability" includes all cases in which some definite change in the behaviour of a living substance takes place, as the result of some temporary impulse, he described its two phases, that of latency, and that of visible motion, accompanied by a change of form and by electric disturbance. The Professor referred to specimens of a great variety of plants which exhibit contractility when excited, including many of the composite (thistles, knapweed, &c.), and then selected the mimosa or sensitive plant for special study, exhibiting on the screen the magnified minute motor organs. The sleep of plants, in which state they are still excitable, was alluded to. The results of long continued extremely delicate experiments were exhibited by the microscope on the screen, and the motions made visible to the audience by the electric light. The movements were attributed to the distension and discharge of water from the minute cells which compose the tissue of the leaf-stalks of the plant. The movements and structure of various parts of flowering plants were discussed and illustrated, and special remarks were made on the centauray and the Dionaea muscipula or Venus's fly-trap. In concluding, the Professor said that though the result of experimental research showed that the mechanism of plant-motion is entirely different from that of animal motion, and well marked, it is not essential, for it depends not on difference of quality between the fundamental chemical processes of the plant and animal protoplasm, but merely on difference of rate of intensity. In both, work springs out of the chemical transformation of materials, but in the plant the process is relatively so slow that it must necessarily store up energy, not in the form of chemical compounds, but in the mechanical tension of elastic membranes.

FORMS OF POETRY.

Professor David Masson, LL.D., in his fourth and concluding lecture, given on Saturday last, the 10th inst., began with remarks on the advantages of metre and rhyme as aids to the memory. He commented on some of the theories of the relations of verse to poetry, especially that which assumes that verse itself possesses charms and graces delightful to all persons of sensibility, and recommends and magnifies all matter committed to its charge. This Wordsworth terms a soothing effect in relation to painful things. Large masses of what is termed poetry, the Professor said, are not strictly poetry at all, but only matter of fact made valuable by being put into metre. Not only is it the function of verse to convey thought pleasantly and impressively, but it also has the function of generating the thought and determining the train of ideas, it has to convey. A passage from Tennyson's "Maud" beginning, "Is that enchanted moan only the swell," was given as an illustration. Beautiful examples were also given of cases where, under a sense of solemnity or pathos, the voice swells naturally, and the language tends to rhythm and cadence, evidencing the alliance between verse and deep, keen feeling. Verse embalms and conserves, and lends point and charm to all that is intrusted to it. There is also an exquisite and varied literature of verse in all languages, which, though not really poetry, is called such by courtesy, such as satires, &c. Verse was classified into lyric, epic, and dramatic poetry; and the different forms of each were characterised. In regard to poetry in prose, the Professor described a novel as a prose epic; and cited Carlyle's tribute to the memory of Marie Antoinette as a noble prose ode. In conclusion, he read a fine translation of Milton's Latin poem in defence of Poetry.

The Royal Institution season closed with this lecture.

BENEVOLENCE AND SELF-HELP.

Mr. Justice Chitty presided at the fiftieth commemorative festival of the United Law Clerks' Society, held on the 7th inst. at the Freemasons' Hall, the subscriptions amounting to £380.

On the same day Sir Stafford Northcote, M.P., presided at the annual dinner of the friends and supporters of the school for the sons of poor clergy. Sir Stafford said that the people owed a deep debt of gratitude to the clergy, and it was the duty of all who appreciated their work to help such of them as were unable to afford it to give their sons a good education.

Earl Cairns presided on the 7th inst. at the annual meeting of the friends of Dr. Barnardo's Home, held in Exeter Hall. The noble chairman called attention to the family system which had been adopted in the homes as preferable to the barrack plan. The various homes now provide for 1178 children; and while £90 is required to meet the expenditure of a single day, the balance at the banker's is only of that amount. There is a mortgage of £4500 on the homes, which it is desirable to wipe off. A choir of several hundred children from the Homes sang a selection of pieces during the evening.

The half-yearly meeting of the members of the London General Porters' Benevolent Association, of which Mr. S. Morley, M.P., is the president, took place the same evening at the Guildhall Tavern, Mr. F. T. Isitt presiding. The report showed that the income during the period from November, 1881, amounted to £1892, while the balance at the Union Bank at the date of the audit came to £803. One hundred and eight pensioners—namely, 6 married couples, 29 members, 52 widows, and 21 orphan families, consisting of 62 children—had been upon the funds during the past six months, at a cost of £1072. The chairman was glad to say the association was going on increasing, notwithstanding the depression of trade.

Lord Cairns presided on the 8th inst. at Exeter Hall at the annual meeting of the Early Closing Association. He said great benefits had already resulted from the work of the association, but there was still much more to be done. He urged, upon ladies especially, that there should be no late shopping. A very satisfactory report was read and unanimously adopted.

The meeting of the friends and supporters of the projected "Actors' Benevolent Fund," at the Lyceum Theatre, on the 8th inst., proved remarkably successful. Twelve gentlemen present, chiefly London managers, subscribed at once £100 per annum each. The suggested voluntary tax upon actors' salaries appears to have been abandoned in favour of what is to be known as an annual "Actors' Saturday."

Alderman Sir R. W. Carden, M.P., presided yesterday week over a meeting, held at the Mansion House, for the purpose of promoting the claims of the Society for Training Teachers of the Deaf by the diffusion of the German system in the United Kingdom. The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, Cardinal Manning, and Lord O'Hagan spoke.

By permission of the Duke of Wellington, the annual meeting of the Society for the Suppression of Mendicity was held last Saturday at Apsley House. Lord Norton, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and Earl Fortescue were amongst the speakers.

At the annual meeting of the Home Hospitals Association, last Saturday, Mr. Walter, M.P., presiding, it was stated that as a commercial undertaking the Home in Fitzroy-square was a success, as it had paid 3 per cent upon the capital employed. There were many more applicants than could be admitted, and it had been, consequently, resolved to take the adjoining house. It is intended ultimately to establish a branch for fever patients and a convalescent home.

A scheme for the erection and endowment of a new free library and museum for Preston, by the trustees of the late Mr. Harris, Prothonotary of Lancashire, who left a large fortune for public purposes, has been approved by the Chief Clerk of the Chancery Court, London. It provides for the devotion of £60,000 to the erection of a building, £15,000 for the purchase of objects of science and art, and £15,000 to the Corporation of Preston for providing a site.

The third of the great military tournaments, under Royal patronage, given for the benefit of the Royal Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows, was opened on Monday at the Islington Agricultural Hall, and continued during the week. Princess Mary, the Duke of Teck, and family, were present on the opening day.

The date of the Dramatic Matinée, to take place at Willis's Rooms in aid of the Royal Hospital for Children and Women, Waterloo Bridge-road, has been altered to July 4.

An Oriental Palace Bazaar, in aid of the Working Lads' Institute, Whitechapel, was opened on Monday, at Cannon-street Hotel, by the Lord Mayor, accompanied by the Lady Mayoress, the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, and others. The object of the bazaar was to support the present work for the welfare of lads employed in the City, and to buy a plot of freehold ground upon which to erect a new institute. The Committee require £1050 for immediate payment.

The annual meeting of the Working Men's Club and Institute Union will be held this (Saturday) afternoon, at the College Hall, Westminster, Sir Thomas Brassey in the chair.

The following were the principal sums received at the Mansion House on Monday in respect to the Hospital Sunday Fund:—St. Michael, Chester-square, £691; St. Paul's Cathedral, £298; Westminster Abbey, £228; "Delta" (a further donation), £100; St. Peter, Vere-street, £116; St. Mark, North Audley-street, £193 3s.; St. Anne's, Soho, £185; Metropolitan Tabernacle, £202; Great Synagogue (on Saturday), £250; Union Chapel, Islington, £146; and at the City Temple, £120.

Help is urgently needed to take 600 children and 150 mothers of St. Andrew's, Newington, for a day into the country. The population is 8000, including Tabard-street, formerly Kent-street, all being poor. Address, Rev. S. Robinson, St. Andrew's Vicarage, New Kent-road, S.E.

At the Royal Hospital for Incurables, West Hill, Putney-heath, on Thursday, the 20th inst., and two following days, there will be a sale of the inmates' work, for their own benefit.—Lady Jessel will distribute the prizes to the girls in the work-rooms of the Jewish Board of Guardians on the 22nd inst.—The annual dinner on behalf of the Newspaper Press Fund will be held on Saturday, the 24th inst., at Willis's Rooms, the Duke of Albany in the chair.—Under the immediate patronage of her Most Gracious Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, the fifty-fifth anniversary of the Infant Orphan Asylum, Wanstead, will be held on Saturday, June 24, the Duke of Connaught presiding. The Duchess of Connaught will distribute the prizes.—The Lord Mayor will preside at the anniversary festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, to be held in the Pavilion, Brighton, on the 28th inst.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has consented to become president of the London and South-Western Railway Institute Industrial and Fine-Art Collection, to be held at Brunswick House, Vauxhall, during the month of September. The exhibition will be thrown open to all working men within the metropolitan postal district.

EGYPT AS IT IS.—FROM SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST

AN ARAB BAKER IN CAIRO.

A CORN MERCHANT IN CAIRO.

EGYPT AS IT IS: PLOUGHING IN LOWER EGYPT.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

OBITUARY.

SIR G. H. BEAUMONT, BART.

Sir George Howland Beaumont, ninth Baronet, of Stoughton Grange, in the county of Leicester, died at his seat, Cole Orton Hall, near Ashby-de-la-Zouch, on the 8th inst. He was born Sept. 12, 1828, the eldest son of Sir George Howland Willoughby Beaumont, eighth Baronet, by Mary Anne, his wife, daughter of Dr. Howley, Archbishop of Canterbury; succeeded his father in 1845, and married twice—first, in 1850, Paulina Menzies, daughter of Mr. W. Hallows Belli, H.E.I.C.C.S., and niece of Dr. Howley, Archbishop of Canterbury; and secondly, in 1872, Octavia Willoughby, widow of Major J. R. S. Wallis, of Drishane Castle, in the county of Cork. By the former (who died Dec. 9, 1870) he leaves three surviving sons and one surviving daughter, the wife of Major Rowan Hamilton, of Killyleagh Castle, in the county of Down. The eldest son, now Sir George Howland William Beaumont, tenth Baronet, Royal Horse Artillery, was born March 10, 1851, and is married to Lillie Ellen, daughter of Colonel G. A. Crafter, Royal Engineers. The Beaumonts of Houghton Grange, on whom the baronetcy was conferred the year after the Restoration, are a branch of the very ancient and ennobled family of the same name. Thomas, third Viscount Beaumont, died June 11, 1702, having devised Cole Orton and other estates to his kinsman, Sir George Beaumont, third Baronet, of Houghton Grange, M.P. for Leicester, and one of the Lords of the Admiralty.

BARON HEATH.

Baron Robert Amadeus Heath, Grand Officer of the Order of the Crown of Italy, and Consul-General in London for that kingdom, 1861 to 1879, died recently in Paris, aged sixty-three. He was the eldest son of the late John Benjamin Heath, F.R.S., F.S.A., who long held the Consular Office in which he was succeeded by his son, and who was granted by Victor Emmanuel an Italian Barony. The Baron whose death we record married, in 1847, Harriett, eldest daughter of Mr. Thomas Keen, of Croydon and Coulsdon, in Surrey, and leaves issue, one son and two daughters.

MR. WALTER M. P. BOURKE.

Mr. Walter Mathew Patrick Bourke, of Curraghleigh, county Mayo, and Rahassane Park, county Galway, J.P., M.A., barrister-at-law, was murdered near Athenry on the 8th inst. He was the second but eldest surviving son of Mr. Isidore Bourke, of Curraghleigh, for many years Crown Solicitor for Mayo, by Matilda, his wife, only daughter of Surgeon Matthew Crozier, 53rd Foot, and derived descent from a very ancient family, settled in Ireland in the time of Strongbow, to which also belongs that of the Bourkes, Earls of Mayo. Mr. Walter Bourke, whose melancholy fate we record, received his education at Stonyhurst, and at Clongowes Wood College, in the county of Kildare, and subsequently took his Arts degrees in Trinity College, Dublin. He was called to the Irish Bar in 1859, and, proceeding to India, became an Advocate of the High Court at Calcutta, where he realised sufficient to enable him to add Rahassane Park to his property in the West of Ireland. He succeeded his brother, Major Joseph Bourke, of the 29th Foot, in 1877. He was unmarried.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Mr. John Christian Curwen Boyd, of Merton Hall, Wigtonshire, N.B., on the 3rd inst., in Paris, aged seventy.

Mr. Simmons, engraver, who did much excellent work in his time, and had still in progress of engraving several important pictures.

The Rev. Charles Mackie, M.A., late of Christchurch, Canterbury, New Zealand, in his eighty-third year, on the 3rd inst., at Harford, Ottery St. Mary, Devon.

The Rev. Clement Gresswell, M.A., late Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford, and for forty-two years Rector of Tortworth, Falfield, Gloucestershire, on the 4th inst., aged seventy-four.

Mr. Scott Russell, F.R.S., at Ventnor, on the 8th inst., in the seventy-fifth year of his age. The memoir of Mr. Scott Russell is deferred until next week, when we shall give his portrait.

Mr. Cecil G. Lawson, the landscape-painter, on the 10th inst., of a pulmonary attack of a very acute form. Mr. Lawson, who was only thirty years of age, was an artist of great promise.

Mr. James Kemplay, Q.C., a Bencher of the Middle Temple, on the 4th inst., in Leinster-gardens, Hyde Park, in his seventy-second year. He was called to the Bar in 1852, and went the Northern Circuit.

Mr. John Barton, for thirty-eight years H.M. Consul to Peru, and for many years Acting Chargé-d'Affaires, on the 3rd inst., at The Grange, Welwyn, Herts, aged eighty-five. He retired from the diplomatic service in 1868.

James Spence, F.R.S., F.R.C.S.E., Surgeon-in-Ordinary to the Queen in Scotland, Professor of Surgery in the University of Edinburgh, on the 6th inst., in Ainslie-place, Edinburgh, in his seventieth year. He was author of "Lectures on Surgery," and contributed to several medical journals.

The Rev. Philip John Scudamore-Stanhope, M.A., Rector of Humber, in the county of Hereford, on the 2nd inst., at The Rectory, aged forty-three. He was the youngest son of Captain Sir Edwyn Francis Scudamore-Stanhope, Bart., R.N., and brother to the present Baronet, who is heir presumptive to the earldom of Chesterfield.

The Rev. William Brodie, M.A., Vicar of East Meon, Hants, on the 5th inst., at Bournemouth, aged sixty-one. He was second son of the eminent surgeon, Sir Benjamin Brodie, President of the Royal Society, Surgeon to William IV. and to Queen Victoria, created a Baronet in 1834. He married, in 1844, Lady Maria Waldegrave, daughter of William, eighth Earl Waldegrave, and had three sons and three daughters.

Colonel Robert Stewart, of Ardvorlich, Perthshire, late of the Bengal Staff Corps, on the 6th inst., in his fifty-third year. He served in the Punjab campaign of 1848-9; in 1852, in command of a detachment of the Sylhet Light Infantry and the Roorkee Levy, he engaged and defeated the Munnipore Princes at Bishenpore; and in 1857-8 he served in Cachar against the mutineers of the 34th Bengal Native Infantry.

The Rev. Solomon Donovan, A.M., Rector of Horetown and Precentor of Ferns, on the 7th inst., aged eighty. He was last surviving brother of the late Mr. Richard Donovan, of Ballymore, in the county of Wexford, and eighth son of Mr. Richard Donovan, of Ballymore, by Anne, his wife, daughter of Mr. Goddard Richards, of Grange. The Donovans of Ballymore are of ancient lineage and extensive estates in Ireland.

Lieutenant-Colonel James Steadman Hawker Farrer, formerly of the Coldstream Guards, on the 3rd inst., at The Willows, Fulwood, Preston, aged fifty-seven. He was only son of the late Major-General Farrer, and served during the Crimean War at Alma, Inkerman, and Sebastopol, for which he received medal with three clasps, the Turkish medal, and the order of the Medjidie. He served also in the Indian campaign of 1857, including Lucknow, and retired in 1861.

CHESS.

(Answers to correspondents are unavoidably deferred.)

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF M. LEBRETT'S PRIZE PROBLEM received from Adolphus and Albert Schuster (Naples), and E.L.G. of Dr. Gold's Problem, from R.H. Brooks; of No. 1995, from H. Stalling.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1996 received from L.R. Marchant, S. Finlay, E.L.G., D. Mayhew, and W.S. Hilary.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1997 received from J. Tucker, David Rowland (Bartlett), C. Chertoff, F. Ashbury, S. Finlay, Florence (Exeter), Smutich, F. Johnston, A. Lauder, and Rev. R. Gibbins.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1998 received from H.B. F.O.N.H. Shrapnell, Shadforth, E.L.G. Smutich, H. Stalling, F. Johnston, Norman Rumble, Alpha, E.J. Winter Wood, R.H. Brooks, Sudbury (Suffolk), J. Hall, Schuncke, Pilgrim, Cryptotype, A.F. Mosley, Anna M. Kinner, Gyp, C.S. Wood, Otto Fulder (Ghent), E. Louden, W. Foster, A.R. Johnson, Flova, F.M. (Edinburgh), Alice A. Lawton, C.W. Crocker, Florence (Exeter), S.W. Mann, A. Chapman, F.J. Wallis, W. Biddle, C. Chertoff, Cant. E.E.H. Bosworth, James Dobson, Jumbo, J. Tucker, Edward Cole, L.R. Marchant, D. June, F. Adley, W.S. Hilary, D. Mayhew, H.H. Noyes, A.M. Porter, Harry Spangthorpe, G.S. Oldfield, L. Sharswood, Ernest Sharswood, Etasella (Paris), A.W. Scrutton, R.L. Southwell, H. Reeve, S. Bullen, Jupiter, Junior, I. Falcon (Antwerp), G.W. Law, W. Hillier, T.H. Holden, Ben Nevis, C.S. Cox, Joseph Almsworth, A. Harper, S. Lowndes, F. Ferris, J. Tarleton, W. Rivers, B. Rutherford, C.W. Milson, H. Blacklock, T. Waters, and G.S. Oldfield.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1994.

WHITE.
1. Q to B 8th
2. Q to B 6th (ch)
3. R mates.
* If Black play either Knight, then 2. R takes P (ch), &c.

BLACK.
P to K 3rd
K moves

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1995.

WHITE.
1. Q to Kt 7th
2. Q to K B 3rd
3. P to Kt 4th. Mate.
NOTE.—The variations springing from Black's play are obvious.

BLACK.
R to Q 5th
P takes Q

PROBLEM No. 2000.
By F. O'NEILL HOPKINS (Liverpool).

BLACK.

WHITE.
White to play, and mate in two moves.

THE VIENNA TOURNAMENT.

Only five rounds were played in this tourney during the week ending June 10, and they have resulted somewhat disastrously for Blackburne and the American champion, Captain Mackenzie; but Winawer, Steinitz, and Mason have held their own, and it seems beyond a doubt that these five will be found among the six prize winners when the tourney is brought to a conclusion. The tables appended show the pairing and score of the players down to the date above referred to:—

TWENTY-FIRST ROUND.				TWENTY-SECOND ROUND.
Bird ...	0½	Mason ...	0½	Bird ...	1	Noa ...	0
Paulsen ...	1	Noa ...	0	Englisch ...	0½	Schwarz ...	0½
Schwarz ...	1	Fleissig ...	0	Meitner ...	0	Blackburne ...	1
Tschigorin ...	0½	Englisch ...	0½	Paulsen ...	0½	Mackenzie ...	0½
Ware ...	0½	Mackenzie ...	0½	Steinitz ...	1	Hrudy ...	0
Weiss ...	0½	Meitner ...	0½	Tschigorin ...	0	Mason ...	1
Winawer ...	1	Hrudy ...	0	Weiss ...	1	Fleissig ...	0
Wittek ...	1	Blackburne ...	0	Winawer ...	1	Wittek ...	0
Zukertort ...	0½	Steinitz ...	0½	Zukertort ...	1	Ware ...	0
TWENTY-THIRD ROUND.				TWENTY-FOURTH ROUND.
Bird ...	1	Mackenzie ...	0	Blackburne ...	0½	Schwarz ...	0½
Blackburne ...	1	Fleissig ...	0	Englisch ...	0½	Zukertort ...	0½
Englisch ...	0½	Weiss ...	0½	Fleissig ...	0	Steinitz ...	1
Hrudy ...	0	Wittek ...	1	Hrudy ...	1	Bird ...	0
Meitner ...	0	Winawer ...	1	Mason ...	0½	Mackenzie ...	0½
Paulsen ...	0	Zukertort ...	1	Meitner ...	1	Ware ...	0
Schwarz ...	0	Mason ...	1	Paulsen ...	0½	Wittek ...	0½
Steinitz ...	1	Ware ...	0	Tschigorin ...	0	Winawer ...	1
Tschigorin ...	1	Noa ...	0	Weiss ...	1	Noa ...	0
TWENTY-FIFTH ROUND.				TWENTY-SIXTH ROUND.
Bird ...	1	Blackburne ...	0	Schwarz ...	1	Noa ...	0
Fleissig ...	0	Mackenzie ...	1	Steinitz ...	1	Wittek ...	0
Englisch ...	0½	Mason ...	0½	Tschigorin ...	0	Weiss ...	1
Paulsen ...	1	Zukertort ...	0	Ware ...	1	Hrudy ...	0
		Wittek ...	1	Meitner ...	0

The total score of each player at the conclusion of this round on the 10th inst. was as follows:—Steinitz, 18; Mason and Winawer, 17; Mackenzie and Zukertort, 15½; Englisch, 15; Blackburne, 14½; Hrudy, Schwarz, Weiss, and Wittek, 12; Bird and Paulsen, 11; Meitner, 10; Tschigorin, 9½; Ware, 8. Messrs. Fleissig and Noa have retired.

The following remarkably interesting game was played in the Nineteenth Round between Herr Winawer, of Berlin, and Mr. Blackburne.

(Queen's Knight's Opening.)

WHITE (Herr W.)	BLACK (Mr. B.)	WHITE (Herr W.)	BLACK (Mr. B.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	27. R to Q sq	R takes Kt
2. Kt to Q B 3rd	Kt to K B 3rd	28. B takes R	B takes Q B P
3. Kt to K B 3rd	P to Q 3rd	29. B to Q B 2nd	R takes P (ch)
This move converts the opening into Philidor's Defence.		30. K to B sq	R to Kt sq
4. P to Q 4th	P takes P	31. Q to K 4th	R to Kt 5th (ch)
5. Q takes P	B to K 2nd
6. B to K Kt 5th	Castles
7. Castles	Kt to Q B 3rd
8. Q to Q 2nd	B to K 3rd
9. P to Q R 3rd	P to Q R 3rd
10. P to K R 3rd	P to Q Kt 4th
11. B takes Kt	B takes B
12. Kt to Q 5th	B takes Kt
13. P takes B	Kt to K 2nd
14. P to K Kt 3rd	Kt to Kt 3rd
15. P to K R 4th	R to K sq
16. P to R 5th	R to K 4th
17. Kt to Q 4th	P to Q Kt 5th
Apparently a sound sacrifice, although P takes P in reply, would have evaded the forcible attack which follows.
18. Q takes P	Q R to Kt sq
19. Q to R 4th	Kt to K B 6th
From this beautiful coup to the end Mr. Blackburne surpasses himself in brilliancy of attack.
20. Kt to Kt 3rd	Q to K 2nd
21. Kt to Q 3rd	R to Kt 3rd
22. P to Q B 3rd	K R to Kt sq
23. B to B 2nd	Q to K 7th
24. K R to B sq	Kt to Kt 4th (ch)
25. K to Kt sq	Kt to Q 7th (ch)
26. R takes Kt	B takes R
		32. K takes R
		33. Q to Q Kt 4th
		34. P takes B
		35. K to B sq
		36. R to Q 2nd
		37. B to Kt sq
		38. B to R 2nd
		39. K to Q sq
		40. K to K sq
		41. R to B 2nd
		42. K to Q 2nd
		43. K to K sq
		44. K to Q sq
		45. P takes P
		46. K to K sq
		47. K to Q sq
		48. R to Q B 4th
		49. K to K 2nd
		50. R to B 2nd
		51. P to B 4th
		52. K to K 3rd

and White resigned.

The return-match between the representatives of the Bath and Bristol Chess Clubs was played at the Grand Pump-Room Hotel, Bath, on Friday last. In the first match Bristol won by twelve games to eleven, and they were victorious on the present occasion by thirteen to the adversaries' twelve.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated Aug. 12, 1873), with four codicils (dated Dec. 13, 1879; Nov. 6, 1880; June 10, 1881; and Feb. 7, 1882), of the Right Hon. Thomas Egerton, Earl of Wilton, P.C., G.C.H., late of Heaton House, Lancashire, and of Egerton Lodge, Melton Mowbray, who died on March 7 last, was proved at the Manchester district registry on the 17th ult. by Lord de Ros and Sir Henry Dalrymple Des Vœux, Bart., the sons-in-law of the deceased, the executors, the value of the personal estate, including leasehold property, amounting to over £230,000. The testator leaves to his wife, in addition to the jointure secured to her by settlement, pecuniary legacies amounting together to £12,000, furniture and plate to be selected by her to the extent of £1000, the interest and dividends arising from £65,000 for life, and a further annuity of £1000 also for life; upon trust for his three daughters, Lady de Ros, Lady Katherine Coke, and Lady Alice Des Vœux, £10,000 each, and a further sum of £40,000 between them on the death of his widow; upon trust for his son, the Hon. Seymour John Egerton, his wife and children, £25,000; to his grandson, Reginald Grey Coke, on the death of his widow, £25,000; to Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Forrester, £100, as an acknowledgment of their friendship; to his house steward, cook, and valet, £100 each; and to his eldest son, the Viscount Grey de Wilton, who has succeeded to the earldom and also to the settled family estates, his freehold house, Egerton Lodge, his leasehold house in Grosvenor-square, and all his furniture, plate (with the exception of that selected by the widow), pictures, household effects, horses, and carriages, charged, however, with the payment of the annuity of £1000 to the widow. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held upon trust for his daughter, Lady Katherine Coke.

The will (dated June 24, 1869) of the Right Hon. Robert Shapland, Baron Carew, late of No. 28, Belgrave-square, and of Castle Bors, in the county of Wexford, who died on Sept. 8 last, was proved on the 23rd ult. by the Right Hon. Emily Anne, Baroness Carew, the widow and sole executrix, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £43,000. The testator gives to his second son, George Patrick John Carew, an annuity of £800, charged on his real estate, during the life of his wife, at whose death he will succeed to a provision under their marriage settlement; and, subject to such annuity, he devises all his real estate to his eldest son, Robert Shapland George Julius Carew. His leasehold residence in Belgrave-square and the rest of the personalty he bequeaths to his wife.

The will (dated Sept. 27, 1881) of Mr. Charles Robert Darwin, late of Down, near Beckenham, who died on April 19 last, was proved on the 6th inst. by William Erasmus Darwin and George Howard Darwin, the sons, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £146,000. The testator leaves to his son William Erasmus the family portraits and papers, all medals, the silver candlesticks presented to him by the Royal Society, his manuscript of the voyage of the Beagle, and his manuscript autobiography; to his son Francis, his scientific library; to his wife, Mrs. Emma Darwin, £500, all his furniture, plate, books, effects, horses and carriages, and his residence at Down for life; and to his friends Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker and Thomas Henry Huxley £1000 each, free of legacy duty. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held upon trust for his wife for life, and at her death as to twelve seventy-fourth parts for each of his five sons, and as to seven seventy-fourth parts for each of his two daughters; certain advancements made to his children are to be brought into account on the division.

The will (dated Nov. 26, 1875), with a codicil (dated March 31, 1882), of Mrs. Ann Harding, late of Sulgrave, Northamptonshire, who died on April 5 last, was proved on the 18th ult. by John Ward Harding, the executor, the value of the personal estate being over £45,000. The testatrix leaves £1000 to the Wolverhampton Orphanage; £500 each to the Church Missionary Society and the Church Pastoral Aid Society; the Advowson of the Vicarage of Sulgrave to her executor, upon trust, to present her nephew, the Rev. James William Harding, and, subject thereto, she wishes the patronage vested in the Simeon Trustees, or the Church Patronage Society, at the discretion of her trustee; and numerous legacies to her own and her late husband's relatives and others. The residue of her property she gives to her nephew, Walter Harding.

The will (dated Dec. 14, 1881), with a codicil (dated Jan. 24, 1882), of Mr. Richard Bowser, late of Bishop Auckland, Durham, who died on Feb. 13 last at Radcar, was proved on the 23rd ult. by William Thomas Scarth and Thomas Alexander McCullagh, the acting executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £43,000. The testator makes provision for his daughter, Mrs. Caroline McCullagh, and for his son Richard Alexander Bowser; and bequeaths legacies to his executors, friends, clerks, and servants. The residue of his real and personal estate he settles upon his son Harry Moreland.

The will (dated March 7, 1877), with a codicil (dated Oct. 22, 1880), of Mr. Michael Waterer, late of Belle Vue House, Bagshot, who died on Dec. 1 last, has been proved by Mrs. Eliza Waterer, the widow, and Harry George Poulter, the executors, the personal estate amounting to over £43,000. The testator bequeaths to his wife £500, and all his furniture, plate, household effects, horses and carriages. His real estate and the residue of the personalty, are to be held upon trust to pay the income to his wife for life, and then for all his children. In default of children, at the wife's death, the residue of the real and personal estate is to be divided between the children of his brother Frederick.

The will (dated June 5, 1874), with three codicils (dated Aug. 28, 1875, and April 28 and Nov. 30, 1877), of Dame Sarah Barry, late of No. 8, Cleveland-square, Hyde Park, who died on April 7 last, was proved on the 30th ult. by Charles Barry, the Rev. Alfred Barry, D.D., and John Wolfe Barry, the sons, the surviving executors, the value of the personal estate being over £12,000. Among the specific bequests we notice, the gift of the diamond box presented to her late husband by the Emperor of Russia, to her son Charles; of the medals presented to her late husband by the Emperor of the French, to her son Alfred; and of the medal presented to her late husband by the King of Sweden, to her son John. There are numerous pecuniary legacies to children, grandchildren, nieces, godchildren, and others; and the residue of her property she gives to her three daughters, Emily, Adelaide, and Sarah.

The will (dated July 31, 1868), with three codicils (dated Jan. 8 and 18, 1880), of Sir Henry Cole, K.C.B., late of No. 96, Philbeach-gardens, who died on April 18 last, was proved on the 27th ult. by Alan Sumner Cole and Charles Buller Granville Cole, the sons, the acting executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £7000. The testator gives his box at the Royal Albert Hall to the President and Council of the Society of Arts; various medals and papers, including his medal of the Exhibition of 1851 and his unique collection of papers relating to the penny postage, to the South Kensington Museum. The other legatees are testator's wife and children. At his wife's death, among the specific gifts to his children are several books presented to him by the Queen.

PAIN KILLER.

PERRY DAVIS'S VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER.

The PAIN KILLER is composed entirely of vegetable material, is a safe and valuable family medicine, wonderful in its quick action to relieve distress, and eminently adapted for internal use, being an almost never-failing remedy for diseases caused by or attendant upon Colds, Coughs, Fever and Ague, Headache, Bilious Fever, Pains in the Side, Back, Loins, Joints, Limbs; Neuralgia and Rheumatic Pains, Toothache, Pains in the Head and Face, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Liver Complaint, Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Kidney Complaints, Sick Headache, General Debility of the System, Piles, Asthma, or Phthisis, Cramp and Pain in Stomach, Painter's Colic, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Summer Complaint, Cholera, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, &c.

For external use it has no equal in cases of Scalds, Burns, Sprains, Bruises, Ringworms, Boils, Felons, Whitlows, Swelled Joints, Old Sores, Frost-Bites, Chilblains; also the Bites or Stings of Insects, Scorpions, Centipedes, and Venomous Reptiles.

It has been tested in every variety of climate, and by every nation. It is the almost constant companion and inestimable friend of the missionary, and no traveller should be without it.

In selecting letters, certificates, &c., of our long and well-known popular medicine, the PAIN KILLER, from the mass of matter we have on file, we have endeavoured to use only such as would in a simple and concise manner exhibit its peculiar properties, and show its adaptability to the wants of the people. Most of these documents are from intelligent, well-educated Christian men and women—among them many clergymen and missionaries, who, from a sense of duty or a desire to benefit, have given their experience in the use of the PAIN KILLER. To many of them it has been a "family medicine" for many years; and it is noteworthy, that they who have known it longest express the strongest confidence in its virtues.

UNSOLICITED RECOMMENDATIONS FROM HOME AND ABROAD.

In most cases, curative; in the worst, powerfully palliative.

"Dear Sir,—It is, I think, nearly one year since I first procured from you a small bottle of Perry Davis's Pain Killer, not being able to obtain another medicine. Very many of my poor people come to me for medicine; and I gave at times, especially for bowel complaints and the like, a few doses of Pain Killer. In a little time I began to receive unusual expressions of gratitude for the benefit derived from its use. This led me to more particular inquiries about it and about its effects, which resulted in my using it more largely, and for a variety of complaints; and wherever it was given, so far as I knew, without exception it was, by God's blessing, a means of good,—in most cases, curative; in the worst, powerfully palliative. Very young infants and very aged persons have been restored by it when apparently past all hope. It seems to me so peculiarly adapted to the constitution of our labouring people, that I feel constrained to endeavour to extend the knowledge and employment of it, which I can best do by such a communication as the present to yourself.

"You are at liberty to make any use of this letter; and I shall be thankful if in your hands it contributes to extend the use and the benefits of a very valuable medicine.

"I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

"W. I. READ, M.A.,

"Rector of St. Mary's, and Archdeacon of Antigua."

Severe attack of the Cholera immediately relieved.

"The late Rev. Dr. Granger repeatedly expressed his belief that he owed his life to the timely use of Perry Davis's Pain Killer. During his recent visit to the missions in Burmah he had a severe attack of the cholera, and was immediately relieved by the use of the Pain Killer."

A Rheumatic Affection.

"Rev. J. Phillips, formerly of the Orissa Mission, India, writes:—'My wife is using your celebrated Pain Killer for a rheumatic affection from which she has suffered for years, and with better effect than any other of the various remedies she has tried; and I am using it for dyspepsia and kidney complaints with good success.'

A Great Blessing to a whole Colony.

"Gentlemen,—Allow me, as an eye-witness of the great good which your excellent medicine, the Pain Killer, has done amongst the exiles of Madeira, to state, for the good of others, that it is now, and has been for five years, the great family medicine. We have found it excellent in fever and ague, in coughs, colds, dyspepsia, chronic and inflammatory rheumatism, croup, worms, piles, nervous headache, gravel, &c. The introduction of the Pain Killer has been a great blessing to the whole colony.

"MANUEL J. GONSALVES,

"Minister of the Gospel and one of the Madeirans."

Rev. I. D. Colburn, Missionary of Tavoy, Burmah, writes:—"I shall be happy to assist in extending a knowledge of a remedy so speedy and effectual."

Rev. T. Allen, writing from Tavoy, Burmah, says:—"Within the past four years I have used and disposed of about five hundred bottles, but am now out. Please send me a fresh supply as soon as you can—say two hundred bottles. I dare not be without it myself, and there are endless calls for it, both by Burmans and Karens. I always take it with me into the jungles, and have frequent occasion to use it both on myself and others. One night, while sleeping in an open bazaar, I was awakened by a most excruciating pain in my foot. On examination, I found I had been bitten by a centipede. I immediately applied the Pain Killer, and found instant relief. In less than an hour I was again asleep."

Rev. Mr. Hibbard, writing from Burmah to his father, says:—"I have used Davis's Pain Killer for coughs, colds, summer complaints, burns, and for the sting of scorpions, with uniform success. We always keep it where we can lay our hands on it in the dark, if need be."

Chronic Gout: Miraculous Effect.

"53, North-street, Exeter, England, July 27, 1871.

"Sir,—I think it is only right to inform you of the most miraculous effect your Pain Killer has had on me. For twenty years I have been a dreadful sufferer from chronic gout. Hundreds of pounds have been spent, and almost every kind of medicine has been tried, but all to no purpose. In the first week of March last I was struck down with a most frightful attack; and for nine weeks I scarcely had a wink of sleep, for such was the agonising pain during the whole of that time, that, had I come within reach of any destructive instrument, I dread to think what the consequences might have been. Although I had never heard any one speak of the Pain Killer, it struck me to give it a trial; and I have every reason to thank the Almighty that I did so, for such was its wonderful effect that in a few minutes I went off to sleep, and I slept soundly for ten hours. When I awoke I was perfectly free from the slightest pain, and have continued to be so up to the present time. I may add that I did not take the medicine internally, but rubbed a whole bottleful into my feet at once.

"I remain, your obedient servant,

"JAMES INGHAM,

"Lay Vicar of Exeter Cathedral."

Antidote to the Poison of Centipedes, Scorpions, Hornets, &c.

"Davis's Pain Killer seems particularly efficacious in cholera morbus, bowel complaints, and other diseases to which the natives of Burmah, from their unwholesome style of living, are peculiarly exposed. It is a valuable antidote to the poison of centipedes, scorpions, hornets, &c.

"Rev. J. BENJAMIN,

"Late Missionary in Burmah."

Thomas S. Ranney, writing from Rangoon, Burmah, says:—"It is becoming more popular; and in several instances I am assured that the cholera has been arrested, and life preserved, by its use. The late prevalence of cholera here has swept off about all the Pain Killer I had, and purchasers looking to me for a supply will be disappointed by my inability to supply them. Please send me an invoice of 150 dols. worth by the first opportunity."

Proved its Efficacy.

"Bridgeman's-place, Bolton.

"Gentlemen,—I can with confidence recommend your excellent medicine, the Pain Killer, for rheumatism, indigestion, and also toothache, having proved its efficacy in the above complaints.—Yours, &c.,

"REUBEN MITCHELL."

After taking a few Doses of it, was completely Cured.

"Bolton, England.

"Gentlemen,—I have very great pleasure in recommending your medicine, the Pain Killer. I was suffering severely a few weeks since with bronchitis, and could scarcely swallow any food, so inflamed was my throat. I was advised by a friend to try your Pain Killer, and, after taking a few doses of it, was completely cured.

"T. WILKINSON."

Colds, Coughs, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Toothache, almost instantly relieved, and ultimately Cured.

"Woodside, Aberdeen, Oct. 22, 1867.

"Gentlemen,—Having used your Pain Killer in my own family, and been intimately acquainted with its extensive use in Australia for thirteen years, witnessing in numerous instances the marvellous power it has over disease, I was led on my return to advise its use among my neighbours and friends; and I am happy to say it is now extensively used here, and giving entire satisfaction. Colds, coughs, neuralgia, rheumatism, toothache, and many other pains, are almost instantly relieved, and ultimately cured, by it.

"MRS. CHEYNE."

Neuralgia and violent Spasms of the Stomach.

"Green's Sailors' Home, Poplar-street, London, England.

"I take this method of making known the perfect cure I have obtained from the use of your valuable medicine, the Pain Killer.

"I had been afflicted three years with neuralgia and violent spasms of the stomach, which caused a constant rejection of food. The doctors at Westminster Hospital gave up my case in despair. Then I was urged by a friend to try your Pain Killer, which gave me immediate relief from pain and sickness; and I regained my strength, and am now able to follow my usual occupation of a sailor. One bottle cured me.

"With sincere thanks, I am, yours, &c.,

"CHARLES POWELL."

Indigestion and violent Sick Headache.

"Bolton, England.

"This is to certify that I have been a sufferer from indigestion and violent sick headache for upwards of four years. I have consulted many of the faculty, but have derived no material benefit from any source, until I tried Perry Davis's Pain Killer, which, I am happy to state, has done me more good than all I ever tried before.

"ESTHER BRIGGS."

Sore Throat, Pains in the Face, Hoarseness, &c.

"Manchester, England.

"Gentlemen,—Having used your Pain Killer for the last two years, for attacks of indigestion and for cold, with perfect success, I have pleasure in testifying to its efficacy. I have also given it to my friends in various attacks of sore throat, pains in the face, hoarseness, &c., and always cured them. I consider it a valuable medicine.

"F. P. WALKER."

Attacked with Bronchitis.

"Liverpool, 10, Whittle-street, Jan. 2, 1869.

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by the physicians as past cure. I was then induced to try your Pain Killer, and leave off all other medicines, which I did; and from the time I commenced the use of it the child rapidly got better, and is now strong and healthy.

"JOHN WINSTANLEY."

Suffered the greatest agony from Neuralgia.

"Dublin, Ireland.

"Gentlemen,—I am much gratified in being able to testify to the efficacy of your Vegetable Pain Killer. For the past twelve months I have suffered the greatest agony from neuralgia, so as to deprive me of all energy in the pursuit of business. Accidentally meeting your agent here, I procured a bottle of your medicine, from which I derived great benefit and instantaneous relief; and I have no hesitation in recommending it to all sufferers from this disease of the day.

"JOHN KELLY."

Suffered severely with Rheumatism.

"Melbourne, Australia.

"Gentlemen,—We have to report an increasing demand for the Pain Killer. Inquiries for the article are frequent. We have taken the liberty of distributing a few bottles among our friends, who have suffered severely with rheumatism (which is very prevalent in this country), and in every instance it has given great satisfaction. Every box we sell makes an opening for a larger supply.

"WILLS, HOLDEN, and CO."

(N.B.—We now ship to Melbourne, in quantity, about ten thousand gross a year.—PERRY DAVIS and SON.)

Saved Hundreds of Lives.

"Twantai, India, June 15, 1857.

"My dear Sir,—I have but a very small quantity of Perry Davis's Pain Killer, and I regret to say that I have been obliged to refuse aid to my people, who are continually applying to me for it. In my circuit this year, through my division, I really believe I saved hundreds of the lives of my people, when the cholera was raging, by following the advice of Mrs. Ingals. I happened to meet this good lady at Kattiah, and I shall never forget her words:—'One teaspoonful of the Pain Killer and one teaspoonful of castor oil will act like a charm.' From Kattiah I passed on to Yandoom, and met Lieut. — and —, on the topographical survey. When speaking of this medicine they laughed at me. This was on a Saturday night. They were dining with me in my tent. On the following morning the latter, Lieut. Pearson, wrote to me that one of the Lascars had been taken during the night with cholera, and asked me for some Pain Killer. I sent him a bottle, and directed him to administer it as prescribed by Mrs. Ingals. I went to dine with them in the evening, and, on inquiring after the patient, I found he was quite well.

"H. W. LEWIS."

From the Mediterranean.

The following correspondence will show something of the estimation in which Perry Davis's Pain Killer is held on the shores of the Mediterranean. It is not surprising that a medicine that receives such testimonials as this from abroad should find well-sustained and increasing appreciation at home:—

"U.S. Consulate, Tunis, Dec. 27, 1865.

"Gentlemen,—The inclosed has just been received from my friend Tulin, late Consul-General of Norway and Sweden, and of Prussia, in this place. No comment is needed.

"Truly yours,

"AMOS PERRY."

"Genoa, Dec. 16, 1865.

"Dear Sir,—Accept thanks for this third supply of Davis's Pain Killer. This medicine has often relieved me of serious indisposition; and I would not on any account consent to be without it, both for myself and my family. I have recommended it to my late colleagues and friends in Tunis and Genoa; and, at my request, one of the largest druggists in this city has sent an order to New York to meet the demand in this place.

"Yours truly,

"G. A. TULIN,

"Ex-Consul-General of Sweden, Norway, and Prussia, in Tunis.

"Hon. Amos Perry, Consul-General, Tunis."

Major Sherman, British Consul at Pondicherry writes to a Madras paper, "The Indian Agriculturist":—"That Perry Davis's Pain Killer is a radical cure for scorpion sting. The Burmans, or rather the Karens of Burmah, are never without a bottle of this valuable remedy in their houses. When I was stationed at Raipur, in the Central provinces, a station famous for scorpions, I constantly used it with the usual good effect amongst my servants; so I can speak from experience as to its worth. The part that is stung must be kept well saturated with Pain Killer on a rag for a few seconds."

Invaluable Family Medicine.

"Queen-street, Honolulu, H. I.

"So long and favourably known on these islands as a household medicine for both natives and foreigners, it still maintains its reputation as an invaluable family medicine, too well known and highly esteemed to need any 'puffing' from us. Its constant and steady sale is sufficient guaranty of the favour it obtains among all classes of people.

"It is sold by all druggists and grocers, and in quantities by the agents.

"A. W. PIERCE and CO."

"Henthada, Burmah, March 17, 1866.

"Gentlemen,—I am sorry to say the last box of Pain Killer sent me has not yet come to hand. The expense of getting the medicine is something 'these hard times,' but the want of it is of far more importance. . . . Send me as soon as possible another box of the same size—viz., 50 dols. worth. I enclose an order on the Treasurer of the Missionary Union for the amount.

"B. C. THOMAS."

"Shwaygyeln, Burmah, March 6, 1866.

"Dear Sir,—Such is the great demand for the Pain Killer, that I write you to send me, as soon as possible, in addition to what I have hitherto ordered, twenty-four dozen boxes (two dozen bottles in a box), and a bill for the same, that I may give you an order on the Treasurer of the Union for amount of the same.

"Rev. N. HARRIS."

Importance of having Davis's Pain Killer always at hand.

Wonderful Cure of the Rev. D. L. Brayton, Missionary in India, who was stung by a scorpion.

Extract from his letter, dated Mergui, June 13, and published in "The Baptist Missionary Magazine" for December, 1849:—"For the first time since I have been in India, I have been stung by a scorpion. I went out this morning to my exercises, as usual, at early dawn, and, having occasion to use an old box, on taking off the cover I put my hand on a scorpion, which immediately resented the insult by thrusting its sting into the palm of my hand. The instantaneous and severe pain which darted through the system is quite incredible; what an awfully virulent poison their sting must contain! I flew to my bottle of Davis's Pain Killer, and found it to be true to its name. The relief was almost as sudden as the pain; after a few moments' relief, I saturated a small piece of sponge, bound it on my hand, and went about my exercises, feeling no more particular inconvenience."

Extracts from letters received from Rev. B. C. Thomas:—

"Tavoy, Nov. 18, 1853.

"Dear Sirs,—The Karens here have no more confidence in the charms of their ancestors. They desire rational remedies for the sick. By various means, principally through the agency of the Rev. D. L. Brayton, these Karen people have become acquainted with your medicine, and their demand for it is to me very surprising. I have now by me orders for more than fifty bottles, but I have not got one bottle; I therefore wish you to send me a quantity. I could dispose of at least one hundred bottles this year. Send it, and I will pay you through the Treasurer of the Missionary Union. I hope we shall be favoured with some of it as soon as possible. There is no medicine which stands so high in the estimation of the Karens of these provinces as the Pain Killer; and I feel willing to gratify them, as I entertain a very high opinion of its worth.

"B. C. THOMAS."

A Cure for Diphtheria.

All interested, please read the following extract from a letter from Mrs.

Ellen B. Mason, wife of Rev. Francis Mason, Toungboon, Burmah:—

"My son was taken violently sick with diphtheria, cold chills, burning fever, and sore throat. I counted one morning ten little vesicles in his throat, very white, and his tongue, towards the root, just like a water-melon full of seeds; the remainder coated as thick as a knife-blade. So many children have died around here, I was afraid to call a physician, and thought I would try your Pain Killer for a gargle, with small doses inwardly. I did so, and found the gargle invariably cut off the vesicles, and he raised them up, often covered with blood. He was taken on Sunday; on Wednesday his throat was clear, and his tongue rapidly clearing off. I also used it as a liniment, with castor-oil and hartshorn, for his neck. It seemed to me a wonderful cure, and I can but wish it could be known to the many poor mothers in our land who are losing so many children by this dreadful disease. I have found your Pain Killer one of the most valuable medicines ever used in Burmah. Once I was stung by a very large black scorpion; the pain was insupportable. I immediately applied the Pain Killer (for I never travel without it) again and again, and in half an hour my foot was well."

The Rev. J. M. Johnson, Missionary at Swatow, China.

"Dear Sirs,—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the Pain Killer, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain Killer was given; and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed recovered. It has, too, been very useful in various other diseases. It has proved an innumerable blessing to multitudes of poor people throughout all this region. Our native preachers are never willing to go out on their excursions without a supply of the Pain Killer. It gives them favour in the eyes of the people, and access to families and localities by whom otherwise they would be very indifferently received.

"Believe me, dear Sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,

"Rev. J. M. JOHNSON,

"Missionary at Swatow, China."

Asiatic Cholera in China. Almost every Case Cured with Pain Killer.

(From Rev. R. Telford, Missionary in China, now visiting his home in Pennsylvania.)

"Dear Sirs,—During a residence of some ten years as a missionary in Siam and China, I found your Vegetable Pain Killer a most valuable remedy for that fearful scourge, the cholera. In administering the medicine, I found it most effectual to give a teaspoonful of Pain Killer in a gill of hot water, sweetened with sugar; then, after about fifteen minutes, begin to give about a teaspoonful of the same mixture every few minutes until relief was obtained. Apply hot applications to the extremities. Bathe the stomach with the Pain Killer clear, and rub the limbs briskly. Of those who had the cholera, and took the medicine faithfully in the way stated above, eight out of ten recovered.

Truly yours,

"R. TELFORD.

"If attacked with the diarrhoea, dysentery, cramp, colic, don't delay the use of the Pain Killer."

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, of Bassein, India, writes:—"Here let me assure you that we prize your Pain Killer very highly. For the first two or three years of our residence in India we were ignorant of its valuable properties, and did not use it, but now would hardly feel safe to be without it for a single day. Only a few nights since, Mrs. Van Meter was stung by a scorpion; and intense pain was instantaneous throughout the arm, and soon a numbness of the finger followed. By the continued application of the Pain Killer for an hour or more, and at intervals during the night, the alarming symptoms were subdued; and in the morning only a slight soreness was felt in the finger.

"I gave it in a severe case of fever and ague, according to directions, and it acted like a charm, breaking it up at once. The Karens have great confidence in it."

The Pain Killer an indispensable necessity.

The United States Consul, at Crefeld, writes to Perry Davis and Son,

the following letter:—

"United States Consulate, Crefeld, Rheinisch Prussia,

"Feb. 8, 1881.

"Gentlemen,—I find it impossible to obtain, in this part of Germany, the 'Pain Killer,' and I request you to send me the inclosed order. I desire this medicine for the purpose of giving it away to persons whose special ailments and distress I know will be relieved by its use, and whose sufferings are needless, when this most efficient remedy can be obtained. I have known the 'Pain Killer' (in Massachusetts) almost from the day it was introduced to the public, and, after long years of observation and use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient, as a healing remedy, for exterior wounds, bruises, and sprains; and is not less efficient in relieving the many interior pains and troubles arising from colds and from imprudence, and excesses in eating and drinking. I regard the 'Pain Killer' as an indispensable necessity, and, when it is gone, feel much as does the owner of a house in a dangerous neighbourhood, after his policy of insurance has expired.

I am, very truly yours,

"J. S. POTTER,

"American Consul."

A well-known New York Sportsman bitten by a Rattlesnake. His Life saved by the Pain Killer.

"To the Editor of the 'New York Sun'—Sir, I suppose you and other friends fancy me dead on account of my long silence. Said silence was forced on me by a rattlesnake. For some time I have been on the shelf. I had a fight with a Florida snake. Gozons and I were shooting near Enterprise. We had killed forty-seven quails and were going back to the wagon, when my dog took a trail and walked me up to a bunch of birds in the scrub. When they arose I killed a pair. I went to pick them up. My gun was in my right hand. I reached for the quail with my left, and would have got them, only the snake was there before me, and reached for me and got me. He hit me on the left thumb, rattling after he struck. In ten minutes my hand swelled as big as a balloon. It kept getting bigger for two days, and then subsided.

"Strange as it may seem, we had no whisky, although we were twelve miles from home. Lucky for me, however, the old coloured coon who drove us found a bottle of 'Pain Killer' in his pocket. He said that it was a great remedy for snake bites. He insisted upon my drinking the greater portion of it, and I did so. I also rubbed a little on the wound. It saved my life, and I am now well. Long live the coon, and long live the 'Pain Killer.' My recovery makes this cure a legal tender in Florida. The snake measured four feet and two inches. I have the skin and rattles, and shall present them to the Smithsonian Institute. Please send John McBride Davidson a paper with this in.

Yours truly, ERNEST STAPLES.

"De Bary's Plantation, Fla., Feb. 3, 1882."

The Pain Killer is put up in panel bottles, having the words "DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER" blown in each. Each bottle bears also a finely-engraved label, with portrait of Mr. Davis, and our trade mark—"PAIN KILLER."

PERRY DAVIS and SON, Sole Manufacturers and Proprietors, Providence, R.I., United States.

Price—Pain Killer, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. per Bottle. And is sold by Chemists and Medicine Vendors throughout the civilised world. Directions for use in twenty-eight Foreign Languages. Pamphlets to any address.

JOHN M. RICHARDS, Great Russell-street, London, Wholesale Agent for United Kingdom and Continent of Europe.

EGYPT AS IT IS.

The political crisis in Egypt has this week become acute, and has been attended with grievous acts of violence. The newly-arrived Turkish Commissioner, Dervish Pasha, claiming full authority from the Sultan, both as Sovereign of the Ottoman Empire, of which Egypt is a feudal dependency, and as Caliph or Commander of Islam, has confronted Arabi Pasha and the Egyptian rebels with great apparent determination. On the other hand, the fanatical and licentious Mussulman rabble of Alexandria broke out last Sunday in formidable riots and fierce attacks upon the European residents in that important commercial city; fifty or sixty persons were killed, while the British Consul and Judge of the Consular Court, Mr. C. A. Cookson, C.B., was beaten and wounded, as well as the Italian and Greek Consuls; and many of the shops, warehouses, and dwelling-houses of the Europeans were plundered and partially destroyed. The later news of the actual state of affairs will be found at another page of this week's publication.

The Turkish Special Commissioner arrived at Alexandria on Wednesday week, but did not proceed to Cairo till next day. On landing at Alexandria from the Sultan's yacht Izzedin, which had conveyed him from Constantinople, with two Assistant-Commissioners and a numerous staff, Dervish Pasha was saluted by the forts and Egyptian ships in the harbour; he was met by the Grand Master of the Ceremonies and another high official of the Khedive, and was lodged in the Ras-el-tin Palace. At noon on Thursday he arrived at Cairo, where he was received by Talaat Pasha, Chief Secretary, and Kairi Pasha, Keeper of the Seals of the Khedive. While driving to the Palace of Ghezireh, the Commissioners were preceded by a rabble of the donkey boys and shoeblacks of the town, led by a few soldiers disguised as labourers, and all shouting "Deen el Islam!" ("the Mussulman faith!") They accompanied this cry, as they passed the hotels and groups of Europeans, with jeering and threatening gesticulations. This insulting demonstration, arranged by Mahmoud Samy, excited for the most part good-humoured laughter among the Europeans. The native onlookers, however, showed an interest in the procession, which, though unusual, was in its conduct perfectly orderly. Following the boys came a carriage with Dervish Pasha, Sheikh Essad, Talaat Pasha, and Yakoob Bey Sami, Sub-Minister of War, representing Arabi. The presence of this man in the carriage was much commented on, the Khedive having given orders that he was not to be presented, or to come in the special train. The Khedive's own representatives, Kairi Pasha and Zulfikar, officials of the highest rank, followed in another carriage. The rebel colonels in separate carriages came next, and then two battalions of infantry, who marched past quite inoffensively. Dervish Pasha the same afternoon paid a formal visit to the Khedive, presenting a letter from the Sultan, and another from the Grand Vizier, both containing expressions of friendship, and stating that the object of the Mission was to re-establish his authority. Whether similar promises had been made to Arabi is not known, but on that day the attitude of the military party was more jubilant and aggressive than ever; and the rebel Ministers went on Friday to call upon the Sultan's Commissioner. They were, however, received coldly by Dervish Pasha, whose attitude was firm. He refused to have Egyptian troops for duty in the interior of the Palace, stating that he did not wish to have soldiers about him who did not know his language. It is said that he made a significant allusion, in the hearing of the military officers belonging to Arabi Pasha's faction, to the severe manner in which the Mamelukes were treated by Mohammed Ali, seventy or eighty years ago. On Saturday, the Ulema, or ecclesiastical heads of the Mussulman University and Law, visited Dervish Pasha, ready to protest that they were sincerely devoted to the Sultan and the Khedive. But four of them rose to speak against the presence of the Allied Fleets in the port of Alexandria, and to declare that Arabi Pasha had saved the country from foreign invasion. To this Dervish Pasha answered haughtily, that the Allied Powers thus mentioned were friendly Powers, and that the Ulema must remember they were addressing the Sultan's Envoy. He then ordered the four members of the Ulema who had thus offended to quit his presence, but instantly resumed his amiable bearing to the others who remained behind. This display of firmness made an excellent impression. The most

Boat laden with Pottery from Kenneh.

View of Girgeh (the Pigeon-houses).

Tombs of Sheikhs, on Right Bank of Nile.

EGYPT AS IT IS.—FROM SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

powerful Bedouin chiefs were afterwards introduced, and declared that they recognised no authority but that of the Sultan and Khedive. They offered to put at the disposal of Dervish Pasha 60,000 armed men. The Commissioner, when receiving the European Under-Secretaries and the European officers of the Army, said that the Khedive and himself wanted the help of all loyal men to restore order to the country. On Saturday morning Dervish Pasha, in presence of a large number of officers, demanded if they respected the orders of the Sultan. The officers having replied in the affirmative, Dervish, in the name of the Sultan, declared himself, after the Khedive, the supreme chief of the Egyptian army. The officers respectfully adhered to this declaration.

The riots at Alexandria on Sunday were most deplorable. The mob began the attack on the Europeans about half-past one in the afternoon. They were armed with a great variety of weapons—some carrying knives and some bludgeons; while a few had fire-arms. Their method of proceeding was burglarious rather than revolutionary. They broke into the houses and shops of the Europeans where there was any prospect of getting booty. Whatever they found that was worth taking away they stole; what was not valuable enough to steal they wantonly destroyed. The worst havoc was in the Rue des Sœurs, which is completely wrecked and sacked. The main street is chiefly inhabited by Europeans, but the side and back streets are densely populated by Arabs. The Europeans fired from the windows, killing many of the Arabs, who, in turn, dealt terrible havoc among the Europeans in the streets. There are two stations for a few soldiers in the Rue des Sœurs. These men behaved well, but were lost amidst the thousands of fighting Arabs and Europeans. The Governor, the Prefect of Police, the Sub-Prefect, and the officials showed much zeal; and, on the arrival of all the troops from the different barracks, the tumult was quelled before dark. Soldiers were then posted along the streets, and the principal banks were guarded by soldiers outside and inside. At least twenty-five wounded persons were carried into the French Consulate, while a number of English ladies and children were passing the night at the British Consulate, to which they fled for refuge. Several assaults were made on Europeans in the streets leading to the Ras-el-tin Palace and the Marina. It was in one of these that Mr. Cookson, who was going to the Governor's house, was attacked and dragged out of his carriage and beaten. His janissary had his leg broken in the encounter. Dervish Pasha and Arabi Pasha left Cairo for Alexandria by special train on the intelligence of the outbreak reaching them. It is believed that in the event of a renewal of the disturbances at Alexandria the English and French Diplomatic agents will give orders for marines to be landed from the fleets. In so critical a condition of affairs, and with so much excitement amongst both the native population and the Europeans, it is almost impossible to forecast what will take place.

The Sketches of our Special Artist in Egypt, M. Montbard, which appear in this Number of our Journal, represent "Egypt as it is," but rather in the ordinary peaceful mood of its native population. Their domestic life and habits, and the occupations of the peasantry, are illustrated by the Sketch of "Ploughing in Lower Egypt," and by those of a corn-dealer and a baker in the city of Cairo. The Sketches given on our front page were all taken at Siout, or Asyut, the capital of Upper Egypt, which is a town of 25,000 people, with a good deal of trade; it consists of substantial and regularly built mud huts, with a few better houses, and two mosques adorned with graceful minarets. The situation of the town is pleasing to look at, upon a curving reach of the Nile, with the rich green plain spreading far around, and a wide canal, having trees planted along its raised embankment, while there is a beautiful range of the Libyan hills partly inclosing the scene behind. Not less attractive is the situation of Girgeh, a hundred miles further up the Nile, facing a grand cliff of the Arabian mountains. It is at no great distance from Sohag, which was recently chosen by the British scientific astronomical expedition, Mr. Norman Lockyer and others, for their station to observe the total eclipse of the sun. Sohag has, in fact, superseded Girgeh as the chief town of its province, much loss and damage having accrued to Girgeh by the Nile eating away its banks, as was shown in our Artist's Sketch of a riverside village destroyed by an inundation. The Coptic settlement in that neighbourhood, with its goldsmiths, dyers, and other handicraftsmen, contrives to flourish pretty well; but there is much that is ruinous in these country towns or villages of Upper Egypt. We now learn that half the land tax in Upper Egypt, due in June, which amounts to a quarter of the entire land revenue, has been suspended until July, in consequence of there being no grain operations, the dealers having left the country. In July another five twenty-fourths of the land tax becomes due, and it is scarcely likely that both levies will be paid. Thus the anticipated effects of military rule, anarchy, and rebellion are beginning to react on the fiscal and financial position of the country.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2251.—VOL. LXXX.

SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1882.

WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE.
By Post, 6d.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT: THE MEN FOR ARABI PASHA—ENGLISH AND FRENCH SAILORS AT ALEXANDRIA.—SEE PAGE 622.

BIRTHS.

On the 22nd ult., at Santa Cruz, Tenerife, the wife of Hugh H. Hamilton, of a daughter.

On the 14th inst., at Rosewin, Truro, the wife of Robert Harvey, Assoc. M. Inst., C.E., late of Iquique, of a daughter.

MARRIAGE.

On the 1st inst., at St. John's, Kilburn, by the Rev. J. MacCartie, Frank Edward, the youngest son of the late J. Heyward Hawkins, Esq., Bignor Park, to Kate Dullam, youngest daughter of the late George Blackman, Esq.

DEATHS.

On the 10th inst., at 2, Annerly Park, Annerly, Mary Ann, wife of Henry Newton Rew.

On the 19th inst., after a lingering illness, borne with unflinching patience and Christian fortitude, George Clarke, beloved son of Henry Clarke, of 31, Belsize Avenue, Hampstead, and 17, Gracechurch-street, aged 13.

* * The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 1.

SUNDAY, JUNE 25.
Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m.	St. James's, noon.
Morning Lessons: I. Sam. ii. 1-27; Acts vii. 1-35. Evening Lessons: I. Sam. iii. (or iv. 1-19); I. John i. St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m.; Rev. D. Moore; 3.15 p.m., Archdeacon Hessey; 7 p.m., Rev. E. C. Wickham.	Whitehall, 11 a.m., Rev. V. H. Stanton; 3 p.m., Rev. Dr. Thornton (Boyle Lecture, VI.) Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Henry White, the Chaplain; 7 p.m., Rev. R. T. Davidson.
MONDAY, JUNE 26.
East India Association, 8 p.m., Mr. E. J. Khory on "An Englishman in India." Geographical Society, 8.30 p.m., Commander V. L. Cameron on the	Ancobra and Prince's Rivers and of the Takwa Range, Gold Coast; and Captain R. F. Burton on the Kong Mountains.
TUESDAY, JUNE 27.
Anthropological Institute, 8 p.m., Papers by Mr. F. Stuart, Dr. Becher, and Mr. E. H. Man. Photographic Society, 8 p.m. Statistical Society, anniversary, 4 p.m. Licensed Victuallers' School, anniversary dinner.	Worcestershire Agricultural Society Show, Dudley (three days). Boston Society Show (horses, dogs, &c.). Royal Mersey Yacht Club, annual Regatta (two days). Races: Four Oaks Park, Gosforth, Worcester, and Curragh.
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28.
Queen's Coronation, 1838. State Concert, Buckingham Palace. Horticultural Society, 11 a.m., evening fête, 8 p.m. Royal Society of Literature, 8 p.m. Royal Academy of Music, Students Orchestral Concert, 8 p.m. Society of Arts, anniversary, 4 p.m.	Reedham Asylum for Fatherless Children, memorial stone. Doncaster Agricultural Society Show (two days). Barnstaple Agricultural Show (two days). Edinburgh Agricultural Association Show (two days).
THURSDAY, JUNE 29.
St. Peter, Apostle and Martyr. Society of Antiquaries, 8.30 p.m.	Mansion House, grand rose show for a Convalescent Home, &c..
FRIDAY, JUNE 30.
Alexandra Park Races. United Service Institution, 3 p.m.	Captain H. J. Fletcher Campbell on Naval Brigades).
SATURDAY, JULY 1.
Full moon, 6.8 a.m. Royal Canoe Club, annual regatta.	Albert Hall, Opera and Ballad Concert, 3.30 p.m.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.
Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W. Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF					THERMOM.		WIND.		General Direction.	Miles.	Inches.
	Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Temp. of the Soil.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum.	Minimum.	Force.	Direction.
June 24	29.852	52.6	41.3	98	8	59.7	48.3	W. WNW.	WSW.	251	0.145	0.145
25	29.795	49.8	37.2	104	5	57.4	45.9	WSW. W. WNW.	WSW.	275	0.010	0.010
26	29.919	49.5	40.1	72	10	57.9	49.9	WSW. WSW.	WSW.	334	0.135	0.135
27	29.783	55.2	46.8	78	8	62.1	49.9	WSW.	WSW.	426	0.000	0.000
28	29.935	52.3	41.6	65	7	62.5	49.8	WSW. W.	WSW.	331	0.000	0.000
29	29.955	52.3	41.6	68	8	64.5	41.8	WSW. WSW.	WSW.	190	0.000	0.000
30	30.017	55.0	42.8	65	7	65.3	41.7	WSW.	WSW.	242	0.080	0.080

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock, a.m.:
Barometer (in inches) corrected ... 29.852 | 29.795 | 29.919 | 29.783 | 29.935 | 29.955 | 30.017 | 30.008
Temperature of Air ... 52.6 | 49.8 | 49.5 | 55.2 | 52.3 | 52.3 | 55.0 | 54.0
Temperature of Soil ... 41.3 | 37.2 | 40.1 | 46.8 | 41.6 | 41.6 | 42.8 | 41.0
Direction of Wind ... W. WNW. | WSW. | WSW. | WSW. | WSW. | WSW. | WSW. | WSW.

BRIGHTON.—THE NEW PULLMAN LIMITED
EXPRESS, lighted by Electricity, and fitted with the Westinghouse Automatic Brake, now runs between Victoria and Brighton.
From VICTORIA, WEEKDAYS, at 10.0 a.m. and 3.30 p.m.
From BRIGHTON, WEEKDAYS, at 1.30 p.m. and 5.45 p.m.
This new Train, specially constructed and elegantly fitted up by the Pullman Car Company, consists of four Cars, each over 35 ft. in length.
The Car "Bedroom" (Drawing-room) contains also a Ladies' Boudoir and Dressing-room.
The Car "Lounge" (Parlour) contains also a separate compartment for a private party.
The Car "Victoria" contains a Buffet for Tea, Coffee, and other Light Refreshments, also a Newspaper Counter.
The Car "Maid" is appropriated for Smoking.
The whole Train is lighted by Electricity, the system being that of Edison's Incandescent Lamps in connection with a system of Accumulators.
Lavatories are provided in each Car, and a separate compartment for servants is also provided in one of the Cars.
The Staff attached to this Train consists of a Chief Conductor, Assistant Conductor, a Page Boy, and Two Guards.
There is Electrical communication between the several Cars and the Conductors; a passenger travelling in any one of the Cars can therefore call the attention of the Conductor by pressing one of the small Electric discs.
There is a covered gangway communication between each Car, thereby enabling the Conductors to pass from Car to Car.

BRIGHTON.—EVERY SUNDAY.—A Cheap First-Class
Train from Victoria at 10.45 a.m., calling at Clapham Junction and Croydon.
Day Return Tickets, 10s.
A Pullman Draw-room Car is run on the 10.45 a.m. Train from Victoria to Brighton, returning from Brighton by the 3.30 p.m. Train. Special Cheap Fare from Victoria, including Pullman Car, 13s., available by these Trains only.
Tickets and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Office, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly, and 8, Grand Hotel-buildings, Trafalgar-square; City Office, Hays Agency, Cornhill; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations.
(By order) J. P. KNOTT, General Manager.

MIDLAND RAILWAY.—Tourist Arrangements, 1882.
TOURIST TICKETS will be ISSUED from MAY 1 to OCT. 31, 1882.
For Particulars, see Time Tables and Programmes, issued by the Company.
Derby, June, 1882. JOHN NOLAN, General Manager.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
BRILLIANT SUCCESS OF THE
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS'
SUMMER ENTERTAINMENT.
Houses crowded to repletion at every performance.
The great Baritone, of the Imperial Opera, Berlin,
HAS ACHIEVED AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH ALMOST WITHOUT PRECEDENT.
His engagement can only be continued until September, when he has to return to Berlin.
The New Bill EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, SATURDAY, at Three and Eight.
Tickets and places at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall. No fees.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity.")—The Times and "THE ASCENSION." "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRETORIUM." "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM" with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 25, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 12, 1s.

THE EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF PICTURES, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket.—Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The NINETY-SEVENTH EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, 5, Pall-mall East, from Ten till Six. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d.; Illustrated do., 1s. ALFRED D. FAIRF, Secretary.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN from Nine till Seven. Admission, One Shilling; Catalogue, 6d.—GALLERY, 63, Pall-Mall. H. F. FAIRF, Secretary.

OUR HOLIDAY NUMBER.

AN ORIGINAL NOVEL,

THEY WERE MARRIED!

BY MESSRS. BESANT AND RICE,

Will be Published next Tuesday, June 27.

This complete Novel has a special interest in having been the last work in which the late Mr. Rice was engaged with his collaborator, Mr. Besant; and it is adorned with numerous Illustrations by leading Artists of the day, Engraved by the best Engravers in London and Paris.

A COLOURED PICTURE.

MARRIED FOR LOVE,

By MARCUS STONE, R.A.,

Painted especially for this Holiday Number, has been admirably reproduced by Messrs. Leighton Brothers, and a copy will be presented gratis to every purchaser of the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS HOLIDAY NUMBER.

This Holiday Number is published apart from the ordinary issue.

Price One Shilling. Postage, Threepence-Halfpenny.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND, LONDON.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.—SUMMER
EXHIBITION NOW OPEN, from Nine till Seven. Admission, 1s. Season Tickets, 5s.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT.—Managers, Messrs. Alfred Reed and Corney Grain.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place. NOBODY'S FAULT, by Arthur Law; Music by Hamilton Clarke; and SMALL AND EARLY, and New Musical Sketch by Mr. Corney Grain. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight; Thursday and Saturday at Three. Admission, 1s. and 2s.; Stalls, 3s. and 5s. No fees.

LYCEUM.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving. Every Evening, at Eight, ROMEO AND JULIET. Romeo, Mr. Irving; Juliet, Miss Ellen Terry; Nurse, Mrs. Stirling; Messrs. Fernandez, Terris, Howe, &c. Box-office (Mr. Hurst) open from Ten till Five. Benefit of Miss Ellen Terry and 100th Performance of "Romeo and Juliet." To-Night, Saturday, June 21.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1882.

Although there has happily been no renewal of outrages at Alexandria or elsewhere in Egypt, the situation is one of extreme tension. A very large proportion of the European residents having left the country, business is everywhere paralysed. As this means that thousands of natives are thrown out of employment, and that for some time to come they will have no means of subsistence, there is only too much reason for continued anxiety, although Arabi Pasha and Dervish Pasha together guarantee the preservation of order. The anarchy which comes of one day's bloodshed saturnalia may take weeks, if not months, to overcome. The best proof of the ascendancy of law and order would be the summary trial and punishment of a portion, at least, of the four hundred rioters now in custody. But for that result we have yet to wait. The interregnum has ceased, by Ragheb Pasha, a former Minister of the ex-Khedive, being authorised to form a Cabinet. In this transition Administration Arabi Pasha will be the Minister of War, and, of course, the principal figure. Tewfik Pasha and Dervish Pasha alike recognise the necessity of investing anew the leader of the revolutionary party with responsible power. Any idea of compromise with the man who has brought about all the mischief is scouted by those who see in the renewal of the Joint Control the only means of restoring confidence and tranquillity. But they do not explain how Arabi is to be effaced, or by what agency the master of twenty legions is to be coerced?

The great hope of the European Cabinets centres in the Conference, the basis of which is to be the status quo ante, "combined with a due regard to the development of the institutions of Egypt." All the Powers have accepted it; and the greatness of the emergency, and the attitude of Turkey, imperatively require prompt and unanimous agreement. After much fencing with the question, the Porte unequivocally rejects a Conference, on the grounds that such an assembly would be "unnecessary, inopportune, and inconsistent with the interests of Turkey." Unnecessary, because, to quote the astounding assertion of the Sultan's Foreign Minister, "the Egyptian question might be considered as settled by the compromise which had been accepted by the Khedive and Arabi Pasha and approved by Dervish Pasha." If, then, a Conference is held, what becomes of Abdul Hamid's authority as Suzerain, which he has been fondly hoping would assume a more substantial form? And who is to carry out the decisions of the Powers, if Arabi should still adhere to the Turkish alliance? Pending the solution of this intricate problem, the French and English fleets at Alexandria will be reinforced with a body of Marines; and Admiral Seymour has been furnished with full instructions which, "it is believed, will meet all the exigencies of the case."

In and out of Parliament, the Irish question awakens increased anxiety. The seizure of large quantities of arms and ammunition at Clerkenwell—the nominal owner of which, a Fenian head-centre, is now in custody; the rigid precautions that are being taken at our dockyards and arsenals; the military preparations against a sudden rising in Dublin; and the known presence of numbers of Irish-American "strangers" in Ireland, indicate either the proximity of real danger to the public peace—which is hardly credible, or the playing off of a gigantic hoax on the Executive—which is quite incredible. The Crime Bill makes sure but very slow progress in the House of Commons, and the mysterious activity of the Fenians does not abate the hostility of the Land Leaguers to a measure which is alone able to frustrate the machinations of the revolutionists, whom they disown. Whether the bill will be expedited by an abatement of Mr. Parnell's obstructive tactics, or by the omission of some of its less urgent provisions, is still uncertain. If neither alternative is accepted, further protracted discussions and prolonged delay are unavoidable.

To the carrying of the Crime Bill and the Rent Arrears Bill, the Government are unalterably pledged. It also appears, from the Prime Minister's statement on Tuesday night, that a further measure for amending certain clauses of the Irish Land Act relating to leases, labourers, and purchase, is to be introduced, and that the Budget proposals and the Corrupt Practices Bill are to be persevered with. Most of the Estimates have yet to be passed—votes on account having, for the present, sufficed to keep things going. But how about the much-contested and long-deferred Procedure Resolutions? They are to be dealt with this year under any circumstances—if not before Parliament rises, which may be impracticable, then at an autumn Session. This is, indeed, a dismal prospect. But who can condemn a Government that refuses to be a consenting party to a renewal next year of a state of things that has brought deep discredit on Parliamentary institutions?

On Saturday evening last the Mansion House was, if we may say so, redolent of Mayors. In accordance with a recent practice that has now become an honoured precedent, Sir J. W. Ellis entertained his provincial brethren in the Egyptian Hall. Under that hospitable roof were gathered the chief magistrates of more than two hundred cities and towns, arrayed in scarlet robes and massive chains—the foremost representatives of those free municipalities which the Lord Mayor of London praised as the guardians of civil and religious liberty, law and order, and the rights of property. The interest of the scene was heightened by the presence of the Prince of Wales, who had just before been unveiling, at the Royal Exchange, the statue of Sir Rowland Hill, the great postal reformer. Time was when Royalty and civic functionaries were not always in complete accord, and when the sturdy independence of the lieges at times gave umbrage to an imperious Sovereign. But this is no more than a fading tradition. His Royal Highness, to whom the guests of the evening were duly presented, and by whom they were fitly eulogised, did, indeed, so far sustain the old rôle of his ancestors as to gently prefer a request to the assembled "Provosts and Mayors of the United Kingdom." With laudable pertinacity, the Prince is bent on placing upon a firm foundation the Royal College of Music, of which he is the President. To make it a complete success, the college needs national support, and in asking the co-operation of representative officials from all parts of the country he was availing himself of one of the most likely means of promoting that great object. The grand ball at the Guildhall on Monday night—for even Mayors in our days do not disdain dancing—brought to a happy close a series of inter-municipal festivities which testify to the princely hospitality of Lord Mayor Ellis.

It is well that the self-absorbed denizens of the great metropolis should be familiar with the strong current of national life that flows through our provincial centres. Only now and then are they or the public in general able adequately to estimate the rapid progress of our large towns in all that promotes the comfort, culture, and refinement of society—their great public works, their vast sanitary improvements, and their municipal enterprise. Not a few of the Mayors present at the Egyptian Hall on Saturday last wield an authority as great and beneficial as the Chief Magistrate of London. One of the agencies that has brought about this striking change is the extension of a free and ably-conducted press. To most people it will be news that Birmingham has a "Press Club" superior to any similar organisation in Great Britain. We find this statement in a report of the annual dinner of that institution. At the time when Lord Mayor Ellis was expatiating on our free municipalities, Mr. G. A. Sala, as the special guest of his admiring confrères in Birmingham, was describing in his entertaining fashion some of the characteristics of English journalism. We have not space to follow the vivacious speaker in his lively autobiographical review. As one who has for some thirty years been "essentially a member of the Press," Mr. Sala can speak with authority as to a profession which he has so long adorned, and with the trials and secrets of which no one is more familiar. He pointed out that journalists in France and America, perhaps owing to the knowledge of their personality, rise much higher in the social scale than journalists at home. But then he hinted that the editorial "we" gives fearlessness, power, influence, and weight apart from the author's name. Mr. Sala judges his brethren of the quill by his own high standard. And when he expresses his conviction that the lofty position of English journalism is due to an incorruptibility "that Cæsar is not powerful enough to coerce, nor Rothschild rich enough to buy," he gives play to a generous charity which it were to be wished could as easily and universally be made to cover the party polemics of the newspaper press.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

I fled my country (which is Cockaigne) last Saturday and went down to Birmingham. It poured impartially in the Midland Metropolis during the major part of the thirty-six hours or so during which I abode there; still, I enjoyed myself immensely; and, I daresay, was much happier than a goodly number of Kings have been, or, for the matter of fact, are. You see that the esteemed friend at Edgbaston with whom I stayed has solved the problem of getting a quart—I might almost say a gallon—into a bottle normally possessing only the capacity of a pint; in other words, he has managed to bestow a splendid library, rich in almost every department of literature, ancient and modern, and, above all, Shakspearean, within the compass of a trim little bijou residence. I am not prepared to deny that the Bollandists may have been up the chimney, and Dodsley's "Old Plays" in the fender; that Bayle, Moreri, and Picart's "Rites and Ceremonies" may have been in the pantry, and Hobbes' "Leviathan" under the second best bed; but the master of this housefull of books knew perfectly well how to put his finger, without hesitation, on the particular volume he required; and the result was that, although there seemed some peril of one's getting submerged in books, he always succeeded, as Neptune did, ages ago, in restraining the papery billows and teaching them obedience to his reign. I mean that he very soon restored the books to their shelves again. After that we had a nice little second service of rare autographs; and finished with a sweet dessert of old engravings.

I went to "Brunnagem" for a special purpose, unnecessary to mention in this place; but, so far as I was able, I further utilised the few hours of leisure at my disposal by taking attentive note of the astonishing structural transformation which, during the last twenty years, Birmingham has undergone. The city seems altogether changed, and infinitely so for the better. That dreadfully uncomfortable pavement, which one was wont to liken to "petrified kidney potatoes," has altogether disappeared; new and spacious streets—one of these thoroughfares, "John Bright Street," has cost, I think, over a million sterling—have been driven through what were once dingy slums; three beautiful new parks have been laid out in the environs of the town; a number of colossal hotels have thrown the historic "Hen and Chickens" into the densest of shade; and the grand old Townhall is now the centre of what may be called the Forum of Birmingham, comprising as it does the Josiah Mason University, the Council House, and the buildings of the restored Free Library, to which will soon be adjoined the new Art Gallery. The population of Birmingham is now four hundred thousand. I wonder what it was in the year when her Majesty ascended the throne!

Do not laugh at me for expressing wonder and admiration at the sight of an English provincial city. There are very few countries in Christendom in which I have travelled so seldom and so unobservingly as I have in England.

For three octavo volumes, all of them replete, from end to end, with sprightliness, kindly humour, and shrewd perception, further enlivened by a spice of eccentricity, commend me to Mrs. Frances Anne Kemble's "Records of Later Life," which Mr. Bentley has just published. As a letter-writer Mrs. Frances Anne Kemble leaves Lady Morgan very far behind. Indeed, she narrowly approaches Mrs. Delany; and, here and there, she almost comes within measurable distance of the liveliest of all English lady letter-writers—the English Madame de Sévigné—Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. There are anecdotes enough in Mrs. Kemble's volumes, especially those touching on Rogers, Sydney Smith, and Thackeray, to make the fortune of a professional diner out.

Mr. Dion Boucicault, I should say, will smile when he reads, in a letter addressed by Mrs. Kemble (vol. ii., p. 70), on April 2, 1841, to her "dearest H——," the following:—

You ask me if the new comedy ("London Assurance") is sufficient to warrant the author's purchase of Henry's horse. I heard, but, of course, cannot vouch for the truth of the report, that his fixed remuneration was to be three hundred pounds for the piece; and when, as I also hear (but again will not vouch for the truth of my story), besides Henry's, that he has bought another horse; and, besides that other horse, a miraculous Cab, and, besides that miraculous Cab, ordered no less than seven coats, I think you will agree with me that the author of "London Assurance," successful as his piece may be, ought to have found a deeper mine than that is likely to prove, to serve so many ends.

"Henry" was Mrs. Kemble's brother, who had been Mr. Boucicault's schoolfellow at Westminster. The allusion to the seven coats is delicious. Since the day when "Yours ever, Fanny" questioned the ability of the clever young dramatist to pay for a park hack, the author of "London Assurance" must have made half a dozen large fortunes. The last three or four, I hope, he has kept.

Mem.: The last time, a few months since, that I had the pleasure to see Mr. Boucicault he was talking about a certain "miraculous" carriage built from his own designs, and which he had brought with him from America. So far as I could make out, this phenomenal vehicle was convertible at will into a barouche, a "rockaway," a brougham, and a private hansom. This was clearly the largely-developed descendant of the "miraculous cab" of 1841. The Child is Father of the Man.

"M. H." (Reigate) inquires as to "the origin of the superstition that peacocks' feathers in a room bring bad luck to their possessor." The superstition, my correspondent adds, is very general in her neighbourhood, and is shared equally by ladies of position and by their "little country housemaids." Anyhow, it seems "rough upon" the Æsthetes. We shall be told next that sunflowers are vegetables of ill omen, and that the Evil Eye winks from the Japanese "eight mark" tea-pot.

"R. W." writes from Leicestershire to ask why I lately spoke of "Delolme on the Constitution of England" as a "windy" work? "In what respect," continues "R. W.," "do you apply the epithet? Do you apply it as a party man, or as an unprejudiced student of the growth of the English constitution?"

In reply I beg to state that I read and re-read very carefully, at stated seasons, the overpraised work of the Genevese advocate; and I read him with a pen in my hand, seldom failing, in the course of each fresh lecture, to note some new proof of "windiness." I open Delolme at page 373, and read—

A remarkable circumstance in the English Government (and which alone evinces something peculiar and excellent in its nature) is that spirit of extreme mildness with which justice, in criminal cases, is administered in England: a power with regard to which England differs from all other countries in the world.

Let us glance at the "extreme mildness" with which justice, in criminal cases, was administered in England at the period when Lawyer Delolme wrote his book. At the time in question the spikes over Temple Bar were yet embellished by the blackened skulls of "Jemmy" Dawson and other Jacobite rebels of the "Forty-five." Those unfortunate gentlemen had been drawn to Kennington Common, and hanged and quartered there; that is to say, they were cut down before they were dead, disembowelled, their hearts torn out and flung into a fire. They were then decapitated, and their bodies divided into four quarters, "to be disposed of according to his Majesty's pleasure."

At the same blissful period women convicted of the murder of their husbands, or of counterfeiting the coin of the realm, were liable to be burned alive. They were commonly whipped at the cart's tail, and as commonly scourged with merciless severity in Newgate and in every Bridewell in the kingdom. When a man was put in the pillory he was so pelted by a ferocious populace that he was often maimed for life. Sometimes he was killed. It was death to steal beyond the value of forty shillings. It was death (under the "Black" Act) to molest the King's deer in his Royal park and chases. It was death to injure linen in a bleaching ground. Burglary, highway robbery, forgery, piracy, horse and sheep stealing, and at least twenty other offences were punishable by death; and suicides, in cases where a verdict of felo de se had been returned, were burnt at the intersection of four cross roads with a stake through their hearts. A system of "extreme mildness" surely.

If you require another instance of Delolme's "windiness," take the following little instance, at page 377:—

A very singular instance occurs in the history of the year 1405 of the case of the English Legislature not to suffer precedents of cruel practices to be introduced. During the time that those concerned in the Gunpowder Plot were under sentence of death a motion was made in the House of Commons to petition the King that execution might be stayed in order to consider of some extraordinary punishment to be inflicted on them, but this motion was rejected.

The "windy" Advocate does not mention the trifling circumstance that the Gunpowder Plot conspirators had been so horribly racked and otherwise tortured (Guido Vaux especially) in the Tower that the Government made haste to hang, draw, and quarter them lest they should cheat the gallows by dying in their dungeons. I shall return to Delolme next week in order to refer to the very comic preface attached to the edition of 1764, in which he amusingly expresses his disappointment at not having obtained as many subscriptions as he expected from the British aristocracy for a work which was dedicated to George III., and which, from beginning to end is redolent of toadyism.

"E. M. P." (I will not give her address) writes me a very touching note respecting her experience of the Home for Convalescent Ladies established at Bognor, Sussex, by the bounty of the Merchant Taylors' Company. Slowly recovering from a painful malady, my correspondent (a poor clergyman's widow in the country) could not afford a trip to the seaside at her own cost. Seeing something about the Convalescent Home in this page, she came to town, presented herself to the Clerk at Merchant Taylors' Hall, was most courteously received, and was there and then sent down to Bognor for a month. But she shall speak for herself:—

I cannot speak too highly of the Home, its comforts, and management. I thoroughly enjoyed the society of cultivated women, besides gaining health and strength daily, as the air suited me exactly. So I am drinking the health of the Worshipful Company of Merchant Taylors in a Loving Cup of the very best Black Writing Fluid.

"F. I. C." (Heavitree, Devon) is inclined to think that "Sir Roger de Coverley" dates, as a dance, from far before the days of Addison (but Steele says so, Ma'am, in the Spectator). "F. I. C." has heard an American lady call "Sir Roger" the "Virginia Reel," and, according to transatlantic authority, the dance and music were known to the earliest settlers in the "Old Dominion." The German officers, adds "F. I. C.," enter into the Sir Roger de Coverley dance with great spirit. My correspondent concludes, rather indignantly, "apropos of 'Napoleon's Midnight Review,' why is the Chevalier Neukomm's magnificent cantata to be forgotten? Surely it is better than the inane or slang trash often listened to."

Mem.: "J. M. E." tells me that among the translators of the "Midnight Review" was that very tuneful Irish bard, Clarence Mangan, and that his version of the "Herrschaft" appears in John Mitchell's edition of Mangan's poems, published in New York about twenty-five years ago.

A military correspondent, "J. H. W.," writing from Cowley Barracks, Oxford, is anxious to find some military songs—English ones—for soldiers to march to. When he was last abroad with his regiment, and the men made a long march, they appeared to have but one tune—"John Brown"—which became rather wearisome when sung, say, twice a day for a fortnight. My correspondent is going to India shortly, and would like to take some stirring marchable-to ditties with him, if they are to be obtained.

But, surely, the regimental bandmaster or some firm of music publishers accustomed to deal in the polemiká salpinx and other instruments of martial music should be better able to answer the question than I am. 'Twould be ridiculous to bid my correspondent bear in mind "The British Grenadiers,"

"The Girl I Left Behind Me," or "Why, Soldiers, Why should we be Melancholy, Boys?" In a catalogue of military songs of the end of the last century I find "Behold Poor Will, just come from Drill;" "Briskly Beat the Hollow Drum," "The Soldier who to Battle goes," "When first I heard the Drum and Fife," "Merry Plays the Drummer-Boy," and "To Win all the Fair Ones the Soldier's the Trade is" (how shocking!); but I know not what the airs of these songs may be.

The best marching songs that I can remember are foreign ones. The "Prends donc le Sabre," from the "Grande Duchesse," is a splendid march. Why not put English words to it? I have heard (in the war time) "John Brown" sung by a Massachusetts regiment two thousand strong; and the effect was tremendous. But the words thundered forth by the Federal warriors were not the vulgar strophes of the "dime song-book," but the magnificent stanzas of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe. They are too Biblical to be quoted here. The "Secesh" song, "Maryland? My Maryland!" (the beautiful air is that of the old German student's song, "Gaudefamus igitur"), makes a capital march, but it requires words different widely from those of the "Secesh" version.

But far beyond all these in purity of melody, vivacity of movement, and general brilliance and vigour is a military march called (I cannot remember which) the "Marche Hongroise" or the "Marcia Ungharese." I fancy that I have heard it played by the Austrian military bands on St. Mark's Place, what time the "Austrian Hautograph," as Mr. Thackeray put it in his story of "The Professor," was dominant in Venice. The little niece who, in later days, used to play this march to us is far away at Nishni-Novgorod in Russia; and I am half ashamed to say that my dim recollection of the real name of the composition is still further clouded by the circumstance that, in the domestic circle, the enlivening air went by the dreadful name of "The Cat's Meat Man;" lending itself, almost irresistibly as it did, to such appallingly vulgar words as—

And she fell in love with the Cat's Meat Man,
The Cat's Meat Man,
The Cat's Meat Man;
And she fell in love with the Cat's Meat Man,
The Man that sold the Meat.

Count the "feet" on your fingers, ladies; and try whether, from the rhythm you can tell the tune. It stirs my heart now like a drum, as I hum it.

"The Whole Duty of Man." Surreum corda! I will endeavour, within a necessarily limited compass, to do justice to at least a few among the legion of correspondents who (with unvarying courtesy) have addressed me on the subject of the W. D. of M.

"C. L." (Snaresbrook) tells me that her mother's copy, which was very old even in 1804, contained "A Portrait of the Author"—described as "a lady of dignified appearance, with a very high forehead." "J. S." (Carlisle) directs my attention to a book, bearing the imprint of 1723, entitled "The Lively Oracles, Given to us; or the Christian's Birth-right in the Custody and Use of Holy Scripture, by the Author of the W. D. of M." My correspondent is disposed to the belief that the authoress of the W. D. was Dorothy Lady Packington, as he thinks that "such books can be written by pious and sincere ladies only."

"F. H." (Holbeach Vicarage) informs me that his copy of the "W. D. of M." is the folio edition of 1684, and contains what were at that day supposed to be the writings of the author; and very good reasons are given for the supposition. The works are, adds my rev. correspondent—(1.) The W. D. (2.) "The Causes of the Decay of Christian Piety," 1683. (3.) "The Gentleman's Calling," 1683. (4.) Tracts (1684). (5.) "The Ladies' Calling." (6.) "The Government of the Tongue." (7.) The Art of Contentment. (8.) "The Lively Oracles." If Dorothy, Lady Packington, wrote all these tractates, assuredly she must have been not only a pious and sincere, but one of the most voluminous of ladies. Well; it was an age of voluminous ladies. Think of Madame Ducier, who, as a translator of the classics, may be likened to Pope, Dryden, Francis, and Clifford rolled into one. Think of Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, who wrote thirty volumes (mostly folios) of plays, poems, orations, philosophical discourses, and biography. Think of Mademoiselle de Scudéri, who inundated France with ponderous romances between 1636 and 1698.

Mem.: Boileau called the Scudéri "la boutique de verbiage." Did you ever read "the Grand Cyrus?" "Clélie" is worth looking into, if only for the sake of the prettily fantastic "Carte du Pays du Tendre," or Map of the Land of Love, which the Abbé d'Aubignac ungallantly plagiarised in his "Relation of the Kingdom of Coquetry." The Scudéri was notable as the ugliest lady in France; and she fell passionately in love with the ugliest gentleman therein, Pelisson. She was a sweet, candid, harmless, dear soul, and made one of the best bons mots, to my thinking, ever improvised in an epoch of witty sayings. Somebody remarked in her hearing that Versailles was an enchanting place. "Yes," she replied, "when the Enchanter is there." Have you not usually found Versailles, without a King or a Court, vast, gilded, and empty, to be the abomination of wearisome desolation?

Mem.: Was it not Dr. Barrett who one day sent out his ancient woman-servant with a penny to purchase three-farthings' worth of milk and "change out." Crossing the college quadrangle while returning with the milk, the luckless old lady slipped and broke her leg. Prompt assistance was at hand; but while she was being carried to the hospital Dr. Barrett came shuffling up in his slippers, and demanded, "Katie, ye ould divil, Where's the farden?" I think the story was told by Ensign O'Donoghue (Dr. Maginn) in one of the earlier numbers of "Blackwood." G. A. S.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT.

ALEXANDRIA, FROM THE SEA.

THE HAMILTON PALACE SALE.

The great auction sale, by Messrs. Christie, Manson, and Woods, of the large and valuable collection of pictures, works of art, and decorative objects, the property of the Duke of Hamilton, brought from Hamilton Palace, Lanarkshire, began at the auctioneers' rooms, in King-street, St. James's-square, on Saturday last. The first portion was sold in three days, Saturday, Monday, and Tuesday; the sale of the second portion begins this Saturday, and will be continued next Monday and Tuesday. There are five sections, taken in weekly succession; but the fifth and last will occupy five days, from Saturday, July 15, to Thursday, July 20, making seventeen days altogether; which is rather more than half the time taken in the disposal of Mr. Bernal's collection in 1855 by the same auctioneers, and much less than the Strawberry Hill sale by George Robins in 1842, the Stowe sale in 1848, or the sale at Fonthill Abbey in 1801; with which this has its associations in the numerous works of art that belonged to Mr. Beckford's treasures, and passed with the famous Beckford library to his daughter, the Duchess of Hamilton, wife of Alexander, tenth Duke of Hamilton, who was grandfather to the present Duke.

The public are admitted to inspect each section during three days preceding its sale. There are separate shilling catalogues of the different sections; and there is a guinea "Illustrated Catalogue" of the whole, adorned with a great number of photographs of the most interesting objects, some of which are represented in our Engravings. Those we have selected for this purpose are a few of the most remarkable works of decorative art-manufacture, Sèvres and Oriental porcelain, Henri Deux ware, furniture of carved ebony and ivory, vases, cups, and ewers, of plate or of crystal, richly ornamented; clocks of the Louis XVI. fashion, and the writing-table of Queen Marie Antoinette, which was sold on Tuesday for £6000. The marble bust of Napoleon, by Thorwaldsen, is also included among the subjects of our illustrations; but this and several others we have delineated belong to later divisions of the sale.

Among the pictures sold in the first day's auction, by Mr. Woods, were that important work of Rubens, "Daniel in the Den of Lions," which was purchased for £4900 by Mr. Beckett Denison; with another Rubens, "The Birth of

THE GRAND SQUARE, ALEXANDRIA, CHIEF SCENE OF THE RIOTING.

Venus," at 1600 guineas; a portrait of Rubens' wife, by her husband, which fetched £1837; one of King Edward VI., by Holbein, bought for the Queen at £798; a fine Hobbema, landscape with mill and figures, £4252; and several bought by Mr. Burton for the National Gallery. The first day's sale yielded £43,200 for eighty pictures. The sale on Monday was of Japanese and Chinese porcelain, bronzes, carvings, and decorative furniture, which produced £25,000. The third day's sales, including the three pieces of marquetry furniture made for Queen Marie Antoinette, realised £23,485; these were, besides the writing-table, an upright secretaire, by Riesener, sold for £4620; and a commode, to match with it, which fetched 4100 guineas. The sale of the Beckford Library will be commenced, by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge, on Friday next, the 30th inst., and will continue twelve days.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, June 20.

The Parisians are still asking whether summer is coming this year or not. As it is, St. Medard still holds his own, and for one fine day we have two that are rainy and cold. In order to realise the importance of this weather question, one must bear in mind the Parisian habits of outdoor life. Now almost all the theatres are closed, and amusement ought to be sought in the concerts in the Champs Elysées; but one cannot risk catching bronchitis for the pleasure of listening to Elise Faure; and when umbrellas are absolutely necessary it is no longer amusing to jeer at the statue of Henri IV. on the Pont-Neuf because, as the song of the day runs,

Il n'a pas de parapluie (bis).
On ne fait rien quand il fait beau,
Mais quand il fait de la pluie,
Il est trempé jusqu'aux os.

Imagine, too, the discomfort of the anglers, who, since the 15th, have been once more allowed to offer innocent distraction to the wily gudgeons. To the stranger in Paris the banks of the Seine from Bercy to the Point du Jour present the same epigrama as the innumerable cafés of the city: When do the Parisians work? At almost any hour of the day you will find the cafés more or less full of loungers, and from sunrise to sunset every available spot along the quays is occupied by anglers, whose patience is all the more wonderful as they never take any fish. When do the Parisians work?

A very interesting volume, entitled "Rachel d'après sa Correspondance," has just been published by Jouaust. Rachel was a great letter-writer in all senses of the word. One can see from the specimens selected by M. d'Heylli for this volume that she loved to write. But, curiously enough, on the part of a woman who had received no education to speak of, who never regularly learnt her own language, and who never became sure of her spelling, Rachel wrote with a facility, a natural wit, and a charm quite remarkable. In M. d'Heylli's volume we make the acquaintance of Rachel, the woman, in private life, in déshabillé, with her natural instincts, her personal character, her charming qualities of heart and of head. By way of a curiosity, I extract the following little note, written by the victor of Waterloo to Rachel during her visit to London in 1842. The note has not hitherto been printed, and the Duke's French is remarkable:—

A Mademoiselle Rachel.

Londres, 9 Juillet, 1842.

Le Maréchal Duc de Wellington présente ses hommages à Mlle. Rachel; il a fait prévenir au théâtre qu'il désirait y retenir sa loge afin de pouvoir y assister à la représentation pour le bénéfice de Mlle. Rachel. Il y assistera certainement si il lui devient possible de s'absenter ce jour là de l'Assemblée du Parlement dont il est membre.

Il regrettera beaucoup si il se trouve impossible ainsi d'avoir la satisfaction de la voir et l'entendre encore une fois avant son départ de Londres.

The Salvation Army is gradually establishing itself in Paris. The head-quarters are in a big hall, 187, Quai Valmy, where lectures are given four days a week. The staff consists of "Madame la maréchale" (Miss Booth), captains, lieutenants, &c., and of "le général commandant en chef de l'armée du salut (le père de Mlle. Booth)." The Salvation Army publishes a newspaper in French, called En Avant—a queer mixture of religious enthusiasm and commercial prudence. On the first page is a picture of the meeting-house, with the notice: "Here you lose 'ennui,' trouble, sadness, cares, uncertainty, despair, fear of death. Here you find peace, joy, consolation, liberty, certainty, happiness, the assurance of eternal life." On the next page we read: "We offer to establish a post in a provincial town (at least two hours distant from Paris) if satisfactory propositions are made to us." In England, I am told, the Salvation Army has an income of over £30,000 a year.

Great preparations are being made in view of the national fête on July 14. This year the rejoicings are to begin on the 13th by the inauguration of the new Hôtel de Ville, which, by-the-way, will not be finished till 1884. Nevertheless, the Municipal Council will give a grand banquet and reception, and on the three following days the public will be admitted to visit the building. The programme of the fête of the 14th will, as usual, comprise a review of troops at Longchamps, free performances at the theatres, regattas on the Seine, illuminations, fire-works, and a pleasure-fair, along the exterior boulevards and in the squares of each district of the city. The dealers are already displaying their stock of flags, lanterns, and patriotic emblems.

On Monday the Chamber of Deputies adopted the Divorce Bill on a second reading, by 336 votes against 150 out of 486 voters. The adversaries of the institution have now only one hope left: the bill may be thrown out by the Senate. The discussion of the articles of the bill has taken up nearly all the attention of the Legislature during the past week. Arabi Pasha and the Egyptian Conference of course occupy the professional politicians; but in these affairs the rôle of France is confined to following suite.

Victor Hugo has published a vigorous denunciation of the Russian outrages on the Jews. "What we see rearing up before us," he says, "is not a crime; it is a monstrosity. A nation is becoming monstrous. It is a horrible phenomenon."

The Prix du Salon in sculpture has been awarded to M. Léon Longepied, a pupil of Mathurin-Moreau, for his "Fisherman bringing to land the head of Orpheus."

General de Cissac died last Thursday, at the age of seventy-two. Since the Cissac-Kaulla scandal, this officer, who was several times Minister of War under the Thiers and de Broglie Administrations, had taken no part in political life except as a Senator.

T. C.

The ballad concert at the Royal Victoria Coffee Hall on Thursday week was given by Miss Emily Shaw-Lefevre and Miss Montefiore. The last ballad concert of the summer season is announced for next Thursday, when, in addition to the concert, there will be a military band, a singing quadrille, arranged by Mr. F. R. Benson, and an illustration in four tableaux of the popular ballad, "Auld Robin Gray." Next Saturday there will be a monster variety entertainment, for which E. W. Mackney has been engaged.

THE PLAYHOUSES.

There being just at present a lull in the production of new pieces of importance, the time would seem to be appropriate for the brief discussion of one or two matters which intimately concern, not only the actors' profession, but the public at large who support the Playhouses, and who are, I rejoice to know, giving every year a more extensive support to our theatres.

On Wednesday, the 14th inst., was held at the Mansion House, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, a public meeting in furtherance of the proposed School of Dramatic Art. The assemblage was practically an adjournment of the meeting held a short time since at the Lyceum Theatre, at which Mr. Dion Boucicault, Mr. Henry Neville, Mr. J. L. Toole, Mrs. Stirling, and, in particular, Mrs. Kendal spoke so admirably. These distinguished comedians were not present at the Mansion House; but it is satisfactory to learn from the address of the Earl of Wharncliffe that it is intended to open the School early in October next, and that among the eminent professionals who have signified their willingness to give their assistance to the committee are Mrs. Stirling, Mrs. Dallas-Glyn, Mr. T. Creswick, Mrs. Alfred Mellon, Mrs. Chippendale, Mr. Horace Wigan, Professor Plumtre, and Mr. Clifford "Harris." I quote from the printed report; but if the Mr. "Harris" mentioned be Mr. Clifford Harrison, a son of a once favourite English tenor, I think that those who have had the advantage to hear him read and recite will agree with me that Mr. Clifford Harrison is one of the most brilliant and the most finished of the younger school of elocutionists. The public are to be appealed to for funds wherewith to maintain the new School of Dramatic Art; but it is hoped that after a year or two the institution may be made thoroughly self-supporting. The aims and ends of the undertaking were exhaustively set forth in speeches from the Lord Mayor, Lord Wharncliffe, Mr. Alderman Cotton, Mr. Hamilton Aïdè, and others; but, seeing that the report of these allocutions fills more than three columns of my well-informed contemporary the Era, it is obvious that it would not be practicable to give in this column even the most compendious epitome of this remarkable display of oratory. My business to-day, indeed, is simply with the veteran tragedian, Mr. John Ryder (whom I have known nearly all my life, and whom I have always sincerely admired both as an actor and a man), who "hammered," "slated," "slogged," "bonneted," "caved in" the head of, jumped upon, and otherwise did his best to demolish the proposed School of Dramatic Art, as a chimera, a phantom, a mockery, a delusion, and a snare. "In the first place," quoth Mr. Ryder, "you cannot teach acting at all: it is totally impossible. Acting is a gift." Rachel, then, was not a pupil in St. Aulaire's class of declamation; she was not subsequently the pupil of Michelot, Sanson, and Provost. Mlle. Georges was not the pupil of Mlle. Raucour, nor Mlle. Plessy a graduate of the Paris Conservatoire; Ligier was not taught by Talma; and, equally of course, there have never been any great actors nor actresses in France. If Mr. Ryder had told his hearers that genius is a general capacity directed into a particular channel, and that one of the channels into which genius is often directed is the dramatic art, he would have been talking sense and not nonsense. Acting is a "gift" in the same sense that painting, music, oratory, poetry, and the mathematical faculty are gifts; but they are usually very barren boons unless they are strengthened and developed by systematic training. Another deliverance of Mr. Ryder was equally amazing, and (to my thinking) equally mischievous: "What are your professors going to teach?" he asked. "Are they going to teach blank verse? The public do not want blank verse; and if they did there are plenty of actors who could speak it, because actors have as much brains now as they had forty years ago." They have, Mr. John Ryder, and as little. Blank verse, I suppose, is a "gift"; juvenile actors lip the numbers, for the numbers come; and they are all as intuitively as proficient in heroic metre as was that impecunious poet of the last generation who was said to be able, impromptu, to borrow seven and sixpence in the Spenserian stanza. I may just hint that Mr. Ryder owes his ability to speak respectably sonorous blank verse to his long professional association with William Charles Macready, to listen to whom was a liberal education in elocution. For the rest, worthy Mr. John Ryder, when he played Kent in "King Lear" last week, in the deplorable exhibition at Her Majesty's Theatre, was not surrounded by a company showing any exceptional capability for the delivery of blank verse.

The School of Dramatic Art has my very best wishes, and I shall always do whatever in my power lies to serve its interests; but I am afraid that for a while the undertaking must look for material support not to the theatrical profession, but to the public. It would be to ignore the existence of the sun at noonday to blink the fact that by a considerable section of professionals the Dramatic Art School is regarded either with open or with covert jealousy and dislike; and that the hostile feeling springs from an uneasy apprehension of the stage being invaded by a mob of ladies and gentlemen, who, if they do not "write," will at least "act with ease." It is not quite outside the domain of possibility to understand the reluctance of hard-working actors and actresses—many of them having children, who in time will probably adopt the profession of their parents—to co-operate in the establishment of a factory in which clever amateurs may be converted into problematically clever professionals. For my own part, I should most strongly object to the foundation of a "School of Journalistic Art," if there be any art in piling up words full of sound and fury, signifying little, if anything.

Another dramatic scheme, the exposition of which will cause, I should say, but very little difference of opinion, is that of an Actors' Benevolent Fund, to discuss the organisation of which an influential meeting (confined exclusively to members of the profession) was held recently at the Lyceum Theatre, the chair being occupied by Mr. Henry Irving. It seems to be generally felt that, notwithstanding the admirable ministrations of the Royal General Theatrical Fund and the Dramatic and Musical Sick Fund, an association of the profession is needed, which shall be at once a provident and a Samaritan character, and which shall not only grant annuities to subscribing members, but also administer immediate relief, in the way of gifts or loans in really necessitous cases. The fund starts on no insecure basis. No less than ten London managers have promised an annual contribution of a hundred pounds so long as they continue in management in the metropolis; and the fund will thus have an assured income of a thousand a year to begin with. This peculium should be largely supplemented by the subscriptions of members, and by an "Actors' Saturday," which it is proposed to celebrate once a year, when all members of the profession, in country as well as in town, will be asked to make a donation, large or small, to the Charity. The Actors' Benevolent Fund should go far and fare well. That, all friends of the drama should earnestly hope.

I learn that a dramatic matinee will be held at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Tuesday, July 4, at three p.m., in aid of the Royal Hospital for Children and Women, Waterloo Bridge-road, S.E., under the special patronage of the Duchess of Edinburgh, the Duchess of Connaught, the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, and a list of distinguished ladies patronesses. Mr. Henry Irving and Miss Ellen Terry will give the Trial Scene from the "Merchant of Venice." Mr. J. L. Toole, "Trying a Magistrate" and "The Pleasure Trip." Miss Ada Cavendish, Mrs. Billington, Miss Elizabeth Philp, and others have promised their kind assistance. Tickets for the matinee are procurable at Mitchell's, at Willis's Rooms, and of Mr. Kestin, the secretary, at the hospital in the Waterloo-road. I have known all about it for a very long time. It is one of the most beneficent, the most unpretending, and the poorest charities in London.

G. A. S.

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

"I Puritani" was given on Thursday week with the brilliant performance of Madame Albani as Elvira; the cast having included Signori Marini, Pandolfini, and De Reszke, respectively, as Arturo, Riccardo, and Giorgio. Madame Albani's fine delivery of the arias "Son vergin vezzosa" and "Qui la voce" was, as heretofore, a special feature.

On the following evening Madame Adelina Patti appeared as Semiramide, and sang the florid music of the part with that bright vocalisation and fluent execution of its elaborate difficulties which have before rendered her performance of the character specially attractive in these respects. Among many prominent features was the fine delivery of the bravura air (with chorus) "Bel raggio"—the duet, "Ebene à te ferisce," with Arsace, having been another specialty. In the last-named character Mlle. Tremelli was very efficient, not only in the instance just specified, but also throughout the opera, the cast of which included M. Gailhard as Assur, Signor I. Corsi as Idreno, M. Gresse as Oro, Signor Scolaria as the Ghost of Nino.

Saturday's performance of "Le Nozze di Figaro" included the specialties of Madame Albani's performance as the Countess, and that of Madame Pauline Lucca as Cherubino; each of the highest excellence in its respective kind. Signor Cotogni was, as often before, an energetic Figaro, M. Dufriche was a somewhat ponderous Count, and M. Dauphin was a spirited Doctor Bartolo.

On Tuesday Meyerbeer's "Le Prophète" was given, and Mlle. Stahl essayed the arduous part of Fides; Signor Sylva having been the Jean of Leyden. Other details call for no comment, with the exception of Madame Valleria's excellent performance as Bertha, which was the most important feature of the evening. The opera was given with the splendour usual at this establishment.

GERMAN OPERA, DRURY LANE THEATRE.

The last specialty of the season at this establishment took place on Tuesday evening, when "Tristan und Isolde" was produced. Selections from the opera have been given in concert-room performances, but this was its earliest hearing on the stage in this country. The work is the fifth (in order of performance) of Wagner's great opera-dramas, having been preceded (in production) by his "Rienzi," "Der Fliegende Holländer," "Tannhäuser," and "Lohengrin," and followed by "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg;" all, excepting "Rienzi," having been given during the present memorable season at Drury Lane Theatre, which has also included fine renderings of the more estimable works, Beethoven's "Fidelio," and Weber's "Euryanthe." "Tristan und Isolde" is, perhaps, as thoroughly Wagnerian as any of the composer's works, not even excepting the "Nibelungen" Trilogy, and its introductory "Das Rheingold," produced at Bayreuth in 1876, and given here during last month by the German company at Her Majesty's Theatre.

The plot of the opera is based on the old legend. King Mark, monarch of Cornwall, dispatches his favourite Tristan to fetch Isolde, a beautiful Irish maiden of whom the King is enamoured. Previously to this an encounter had taken place, in which Morold, the betrothed of Isolde, was slain by Tristan, who is severely wounded, his life being preserved by her in ignorance of what he had done. She is borne on shipboard by the recovered warrior, the lady and her attendant, Brangane, being shown in the first act bewailing their lot, Isolde determining to poison herself and Tristan. The attendant prepares the draught, which is offered to Tristan as a cup of expiation, but she substitutes a love-potion. Its effects are, on each, the inspiring of mutual love. Isolde is conveyed to apartments in King Mark's castle and becomes Queen—meetings of the lady and her secret lover take place; they are betrayed by Melot, a jealous courtier, and are surprised by him and the King. Tristan is wounded in an encounter with the former, and is disgraced and banished. In the third act, we find him at his castle in Brittany, attended by his faithful follower, Kurwenal; awaiting the arrival of Isolde, who has followed her lover. In his excitement, he tears the bandage from his wound, and Isolde arrives only in time to hear his dying words. A second ship comes, bearing King Mark, Melot, and Brangane, the latter of whom has revealed the deceit that has been practised in administering the love-potion; the King thereupon having followed the fugitive lovers with the intention of pardoning them. The faithful Kurwenal, opposing the entry of the Royal party, slays Melot and is himself slain. Pardon comes too late; Tristan is dead and Isolde dying. Here are materials for the horrible and repulsive, such as would appear to be Wagner's favourite subjects for musical illustration; and in this work he has ignored vocal melody and constructive form to almost as great an extent as in his subsequent "Nibelungen" opera-dramas. Gloomy declamation and formless recitative are the prevailing features.

Among the most striking effects may be specified the scene in the first act between Isolde and Tristan, in which she refers to the slaying of Morold, and proposes the draught of reconciliation—the great duet between the lovers in the garden scene—the dialogue in the last act, between Tristan and Kurwenal, including the death laments of the former; and, above all, the celebrated dying scene of Isolde, at the close of the opera, which has so frequently been given in concert performance. Other points were occasionally impressive; but the lengthened declamation which prevails over melody and constructive art, and the unvaried gloom of style, are felt as monotonous long before the opera ends; and, by the time it is over, leave a predominant feeling of weariness. The performance was excellent throughout. Frau Sucher, as Isolde, acted and sang admirably, and gave a factitious effect to declamation that has no intrinsic musical value. Almost as much may be said in praise of Fraulein Brandt as Brangane, Herr Winkelmann as Tristan, and Herr Gura as the King, the character of Melot having been very efficiently filled by Herr Wolf, and the small part of the shepherd sufficiently well by Herr Landau. There are but few choral passages—for sailors—and these are generally boisterous and commonplace. Like the "Nibelungen" opera-dramas, "Tristan und Isolde" depends for its effect almost entirely on excellence in declamation and action and the strong colouring of the orchestral details, in which latter, however—as in the vocal (or, rather, unvocal) writing—there is much tiresome reiteration and con-ventionalism. The performance was ably conducted by Herr Richter, and there were the usual demonstrations of applause from the Wagner enthusiasts.

The fifth of the symphony concerts at St. James's Hall (conducted by Mr. Charles Hallé) took place on Thursday week, when Berlioz's "Harold" symphony was given. We have heretofore spoken in detail of the work (one of the best of the composer's most elaborate productions), and need now only record its efficient performance, the incidental viola obbligato having been well played by Herr Straus. A specialty at this concert was the admirable performance, by Madame Norman-Néruda, of Mendelssohn's violin concerto; the remainder of the programme having consisted of Beethoven's third "Leonora" overture and Mozart's "Haffner" serenade. The last concert of the series took place on Thursday evening, when Beethoven's mass in D ("Missa Solennis") was announced, with Madame Albani as the soprano soloist.

The close of the season of Saturday afternoon concerts at the Crystal Palace was supplemented last week, as usual, by a special performance, for the benefit of Mr. Manns, the conductor. The programme having closed with Beethoven's choral symphony, the orchestral portions of which were finely rendered; those for solo voices and chorus in the final setting of Schiller's "Ode to Joy" having been efficiently rendered by Madame Peschka-Leutner, Miss Hope Glenn, Mr. B. McGuckin, and Mr. F. King, and the Crystal Palace choir. Madame Peschka-Leutner, Miss H. Glenn, and Mrs. Hutchinson contributed vocal pieces to the previous part of the programme, which began with Professor Macfarren's "Festival Overture," composed for the Leeds music meeting of 1874. Mr. Manns received the usual enthusiastic greeting on occupying the conductor's desk. After the concert, a testimonial was presented to Mr. Manns, consisting of a purse of £700, and an album containing the signatures of the subscribers. Professor Macfarren presided.

The fifth and last of Mr. Ganz's orchestral concerts took place at St. James's Hall on Saturday afternoon, when effective performances were given of Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony and familiar overtures; M. Vladimir Pachmann having given an effective rendering of Beethoven's pianoforte concerto in G, and unaccompanied solos by Chopin. In the duet for two pianofortes, composed by Mendelssohn and Moscheles, on the Gipsy March from Weber's "Preciosa," the pianist just named was associated with Mr. Ganz, who proved himself worthy of such co-operation. Vocal solos were successfully rendered by Madame Rose Hersee.

The eighth (and last but one) of the Richter Concerts took place at St. James's Hall on Monday evening, when very fine performances were given of Schumann's overture to Schiller's "Bride of Messina," Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," Liszt's first "Hungarian Rhapsody," and Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphony. The "Rhapsody" was repeated by desire—having pleased so greatly at the fifth concert—and was again encored.

Mr. Kuhe's annual concert at St. James's Hall—on Monday afternoon—was again of special interest, having included fine performances by Mesdames Albani, Pauline Lucca, Trebelli, Marie Roze, Sterling, and several other eminent artists. Madame Sembrich was prevented by indisposition from appearing, and the disappointment was compensated by extra pieces contributed by Madame Trebelli and Miss Robertson. Mr. Kuhe played a pleasing pianoforte solo, and was associated with M. Hollman in a portion of Rubinstein's sonata in D, for piano and violoncello. M. Musin also contributed effective violin performances to a programme too long for detailed comment; one of the specialties having been a new song, "Time and Tide," composed by the concert-giver and sung by Mr. F. B. Foote. It was much applauded.

The French Musical Festival and competitions of Fanfares and Orphéons began at the Royal Albert Hall on Tuesday. An inaugural ceremony took place at mid-day, when the united societies joined in singing the English and French National Anthems; speeches were delivered; competitions of vocalists and brass bands followed; and a miscellaneous concert was given in the evening. Wednesday's proceedings included competitions in reading music at sight, an afternoon concert; and the distribution of prizes and commemorative medals, with speeches in the evening.

The 144th anniversary festival of that excellent institution, the Royal Society of Musicians, took place at St. James's Hall, on Wednesday evening, under the presidency of Lord O'Neill; Mr. Arthur Sullivan's recent bereavement having prevented him from presiding.

Mr. George Watts's concert at St. James's Hall—last week—went off very successfully, notwithstanding some small disappointments. Madame Christine Nilsson, although not quite recovered from her recent indisposition, sang with much effect, as did Mesdames Trebelli and Marie Roze, Mdlle. Olga Berghli, M. Massart and Signori Foli and De Reszké—the absence of Madame Sembrich, Mr. E. Lloyd, and Madame Sophie Menter (from indisposition) having been replaced by Mdlle. Scharwenska singing, with much success, an air from "I Puritani," and extra violin and pianoforte performances respectively by Mdlle. Eissler and Mr. Coenen.

Among the concerts of last week was that of Signor Scambati, the eminent Roman pianist.

A concert was given at St. James's Hall on Tuesday afternoon, by Cavaliere Pirani, for the benefit of the widow and children of Signor Campana, whose recent sudden death was much regretted.

M. Jules Lasserre, the eminent violoncellist, gave a matinée at Steinway Hall on Tuesday, with the co-operation of Madame Lasserre and Signor Scambati (pianists), M. Marsick and Gibson (violinists), and Mr. Burnett (viola).

Pianoforte recitals were given during the week, at St. James's Hall, by Madame Sophie Menter, M. Gustav Pradeau, and M. Vladimir de Pachmann.

An interesting concert was announced to be given at St. James's Hall—yesterday (Friday) afternoon—by Madame Christine Nilsson, in aid of the funds of the English church in Paris; the programme including her own performances and those of other eminent artists.

The first grand operatic concert at the Crystal Palace takes place this (Saturday) afternoon; Madame Pauline Lucca and other artists of the Royal Italian Opera being announced.

Herr Hermann Franke has decided not to give the concert in the Royal Albert Hall on June 24, as recently intimated.

Messrs. Dunning and Wallace, of the Royal Opera House, Melbourne, have been here some months for the purpose of engaging a Comic Opera Company. Among the many artists returning with them are M. Lorédan, of the Strand Theatre, Miss Chard, of Carl Rosa's Opera Company, Mr. D. Brand, and Miss Agnes Mitchell. Mr. Leopold Jordan has been retained by Messrs. Dunning and Wallace to write dramatic works for them for a term of three years.

THE SILENT MEMBER.

It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good. The boisterous Eastern wind, laden with Egyptian troubles for the Government, has made the leading members of the Opposition in the House of Lords quite cheerful. On the principle that nothing can give them greater pleasure than the political misfortunes of their Liberal friends, the noble Lords on the front Opposition bench now and again become radiant. Under the soothing influences of the unhappy news from Alexandria, the Marquis of Salisbury—seldom the personification of bonhomie—has been seen to hold smiling colloquy with Lord Cranbrook and the Earl of Carnarvon, just to prepare, mayhap, for those private Cabinet Councils in Downing-street at which Opposition chieftains invariably fancy they could shine with greater lustre than the actual Ministry in office.

Lord Salisbury undoubtedly made himself the mouthpiece of the prevailing sentiment on the 15th inst., when he animadverted tersely upon the deplorable fact that British subjects were slain in the Alexandria riots whilst an English Squadron was off the harbour, and did nothing. Earl Granville naturally deprecated premature discussion. But, all the same, the Foreign Secretary has had since then to be ready at a moment's notice to avoid these impromptu attacks with more or less adroitness.

It is Sir Charles Dilke who has, however, had to bear the brunt of the attack. The Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs possesses in an eminent degree those phlegmatic qualities which may be considered peculiarly requisite in a Minister intrusted with the delicate duties Sir Charles Dilke is called upon to discharge. Perhaps, the right hon. Baronet has fallen a little too readily into the official habit of divesting his answers on foreign matters of a touch of human sympathy. Yet this coldly judicial way of regarding things may not be altogether a disadvantage when, at a critical juncture calculated to stimulate a bellicose spirit to a dangerous extent, the questioners of the Under-Secretary are wont to assume the stinging and pertinacious character of wasps. Save that Sir Charles Dilke has been now and then led to shortly brush aside a waspish query from those important personages, Baron Henry De Worms and Mr. Ashmead Bartlett, he has preserved, on the whole, an exceptional command of self during the siege of Egyptian questionings.

The Egyptian kaleidoscope has each week presented so different a combination that it is impossible to forecast what may happen in that disturbed country. On Monday and Tuesday, the information was vouchsafed us by the Prime Minister or Sir Charles Dilke that Germany, Russia, Austria, and Italy had accepted the invitations of France and England to send representatives to a Conference at Constantinople; and that, although the Sultan had repeated his declaration that the Conference was unnecessary, the Great Powers would still meet, probably on Thursday. A forthcoming despatch from Sir Beauchamp Seymour will explain the steps taken by the Admiral for the protection of British life and property at Alexandria on the 11th inst.; and, in case of the renewal of hostilities, "instructions have been sent which," in the opinion of the Government, "will meet the exigencies of the case." Mr. Gladstone assured Sir Stafford Northcote that the Conference would "be confined to the limits of the Egyptian question proper," the basis of discussion being "the maintenance of all established rights in Egypt, with due regard to the reasonable development of the institutions of that country;" it being explicitly added by the Under-Secretary that "the neutralisation of the Suez Canal would be outside the purposes of the Conference." It was with satisfaction the House learnt that full reparation would be demanded from the responsible authorities in Egypt for the outrages committed in Alexandria. With no mean dexterity, it may be remarked, has Baron De Worms sought during this Egyptian crisis to fasten on to the Government the responsibility of fostering the desire of Italy to acquire the sovereignty of Assab Bay—a soft impeachment disowned by Sir Charles Dilke.

Reverting to the House of Lords, I should mention that on Monday Lord Lamington seasonably brought the Suez Canal under their Lordships' notice, stating that 78 or 79 per cent of the ships passing through it carried the British flag; and elicited from Earl Granville the emphatic assurance that her Majesty's Government "attach absolutely the same importance that the noble Lord does to the enormous interests which England possesses in the Suez Canal." The Upper House had met that afternoon a little earlier than usual to enable Lord Selborne, the Earl of Breadalbane, and the Earl of Cork, as Her Majesty's Commissioners, to signify Royal Assent to a cluster of private bills. Their Lordships on Monday and Tuesday again set the Lower House an example of dispatch by advancing a stage Lord Coleridge's useful Bills of Sale Act Amendment Bill, and, among the measures, Lord O'Hagan's Irish Intermediate Education and Irish County Courts Bills. In view of these obvious proofs of industry, and a commendable avoidance of the mischievous loquacity of the Lower House, the Earl of Camperdown had grounds for his appeal that a greater number of bills should be introduced in the Upper House. That their Lordships can be smart and expansive when they like, however, was shown by the impromptu Egyptian discussion and debate on Irish evictions on Tuesday.

Mr. Gladstone on Tuesday began the "slaughter of the innocents." It was a battue. All the prominent bills enumerated in the Queen's Speech fell at one shot. The Premier first claimed precedence for the Arrears Bill, amended in certain essentials. Reluctantly admitting that all the promised Ministerial measures would have to be dropped, the right hon. gentleman announced the intention of the Government to proceed, after the passing of the Irish Repression of Crime Bill and the Arrears Bill, with the Carriage Tax Bill, the Irish Sunday Closing Bill, the Irish Land Act Amendment Bill, the Corrupt Practices Bill, and the Procedure rules, the Premier strongly advising the House to send the various Agricultural Holdings Bills and the Scottish Entail and Endowment Bills to grand Committees to be dealt with this Session. The rod in pickle for an autumn sitting for the passing of the Procedure resolutions was a form of punishment Sir Stafford Northcote protested against. But time continues to be monopolised by the Repression of Crime Bill, the clauses for which regarding search for arms and the censorship of Irish newspapers have been somewhat lessened in severity under the persevering pressure of the Home-Rule members.

According to an official emigration return, the exodus from Liverpool during May has been quite unprecedented for one month, being over 40,000, making a gross total for five months of the present year of over 100,000. Of those who left last month over 21,000 were foreigners, Jews and Scandinavians figuring largest, and of English over 14,000, and Scotch only 281. The Irish emigrants number over 4000, but of course a very large number picked up at Queenstown are not included in this return.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Blomfield, Alfred, Archdeacon of Essex, to be Archdeacon of Colchester. Brent, R., Chaplain to the Infirmary, Newcastle-on-Tyne; Vicar of Holmids. Doyne, Charles Goddard; Vicar of All Saints', Branksome Park, Dorset. Drake, William Hinton, Rector of Ruan Lanyhorne; Rector of Bridestowe and Sourton. Dunkley, Charles, Curate of St. Alkmund's, Derby; Vicar of St. Mary's, Wolverhampton. Eustace, William FitzEustace; Vicar of Bishops Lydeard. Faber, Edward Augustus, Vicar of Kirkleavington; Rector of Kettlethorpe. Howes, John George; Prebendary of Barton St. David in Wells Cathedral. Hyde, John Thomas, Rector of Wallington; Rector of Ruan Lanyhorne. Jarvis, Francis Amcotts, Rector of Kettlethorpe; Rector of Flaxborough with Burton-upon-Strather. Jones, Morgan, Vicar of Camo, Montgomery; Vicar of Llandinam-with-Banbadlog. Kilpeck, W. J., Senior Curate of St. Paul's, Maidstone; Vicar of Tissinghurst, Cranbrook, Kent. Majendie, Stuart Rontledge; Precentor of Gloucester Cathedral. Martin, William; Vicar of East Barham. McLachlan, James; Rector of Sevington, Kent. Morgan, Ernest Kennedy Buckley; Vicar of St. John's, Sevenoaks, Kent. Pott, A., Archdeacon of Berks; Vicar of Sonning, Berks. St. John, H. Beauchamp; Vicar of Holy Trinity, Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Streetfield, H. B., Vicar of Holy Trinity, Skirbeck, Boston; Honorary Diocesan Inspector of Elementary Schools. Thomas, J. H., Vicar of Hillingdon; Rural Dean of Uxbridge Deanery. Thompson, R. B., Curate-in-Charge of the St. Giles-in-the-Fields Mission; Vicar of Pudesey. Tudor, Charles Edward; Vicar of Swallowcliffe, Wilts. Turner, C. H., Vicar of St. Saviour's, Fitzroy-street; Rector of St. George's-in-the-East. Wadmore, James Alfred William; Perpetual Curate of Barrow Gurney. Watson, John, Incumbent of St. John's Hanley; Vicar of Scolcoates, Hull. Wilkes, T. W., Curate of James's, Wolverhampton; Curate of Heathtown, Wolverhampton. Wilkinson, James Blunt; Rector of Holy Trinity with St. Peter's, Shaftesbury, Dorset. Willson, V. F., Curate of Rotherfield, Sussex; Chaplain of the Suffolk Hospital, and Curate of St. Mary's, Bury St. Edmund's.—Guardian.

The annual meeting of the National Society was held at the society's office, Westminster, on Wednesday. The Archbishop of Canterbury presided.

The Ven. Archdeacon Blomfield will be consecrated to-day (Saturday) as Suffragan Bishop of St. Albans, with the title of Bishop of Colchester, at St. Alban's Cathedral.

Mr. Justice Chitty yesterday week granted an injunction restraining Archdeacon Dunbar from officiating at St. Andrew's Church, Tavistock-place; but suspended its operation for a month to allow of an appeal.

In a Convocation held at Oxford University last week the proposal to confer the degree of D.D. by diploma upon the Rev. Ernest R. Wilberforce, M.A., Exeter College, Bishop designate of Newcastle-on-Tyne, was unanimously approved.

The Rev. George Butler, who has recently resigned the principalship of the Liverpool College, has received from Mr. Gladstone the appointment to the canonry of Winchester, vacant by the elevation of the Rev. Canon Wilberforce to the sea of Newcastle.

The Church of St. Mary, Hayton, near Maryport, Carlisle, has received a valuable addition by the completion of the west window, which has been given by Mr. Joseph Hetherington, of Midtown. The window is composed of four lights, and is from the studio of Messrs. Gibbs and Howard.

In the presence of a large assembly of the leading families of Blackheath last Saturday afternoon, the Venerable Samuel Cheetham, D.D., Archdeacon of Rochester, laid the foundation-stone of a partly-erected Mission-hall and School in the parish of St. John, Blackheath, of which the Vicar is the Rev. J. W. Marshall.

A musical festival was held in the parish church at Chelmsford on the 15th inst. The choir of this division of the county were present. Mr. G. Martin, sub-organist of St. Paul's Cathedral, conducted, and four trumpeters of the Guards accompanied. The sermon was preached by the Bishop of Bedford, and the benediction pronounced by the Bishop of St. Albans. There was a large congregation.

The one hundred and eighty-first anniversary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel was held at St. Paul's Cathedral on the 14th inst. by a celebration of the Holy Communion and a special sermon by the Bishop of Carlisle. The Archbishop of Canterbury was also present.—A special service was held in connection with the anniversary in the nave of Westminster Abbey in the evening.

A meeting of the friends of the Church of England Funeral and Mourning Reform Association was held at Grosvenor House yesterday week—the Duke of Westminster in the chair—at which the Earl of Dartmouth, Mr. Hubbard, M.P., and the Archdeacon of Llandaff were amongst the speakers, who pointed out the importance of promoting a better appreciation of the idea of Christian burial, and of discouraging ostentatious and expensive arrangements at funerals.

A conference of the clergy and laity was held on Tuesday evening at Sion College to consider the various measures for the amendment of patronage and the abolition of purchase in the Church which are now before Parliament. Mr. Albert Grey, M.P., presided. A resolution was carried to the effect that no measure for the reform of Church patronage would be satisfactory which did not give the parishioners a voice in the selection of the Incumbent, to which a rider was added insisting upon the total abolition of the purchase and sale of livings.

The Queen has promised a subscription of £100 towards the fund for the enlargement of the Royal church at Kew. It is proposed to increase the accommodation to 737 sittings, and in every way to improve the church. The scheme has been unanimously approved at a public meeting of the inhabitants of Kew, presided over by the Duke of Cambridge, who has also subscribed £100. The subscription-list includes the names of the Duchess of Teck and the Grand Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The work will cost £5500.

A flower service for children took place on Sunday afternoon at Christ Church, Woburn-square, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The Sunday scholars of six Sunday-schools were present, and numbered, with their teachers and friends, about 1500. The flowers were collected by senior scholars, who, at the commencement of the service, went in procession up the centre aisle to present the flowers, which consisted of over 1000 bouquets. At the close of the service the flowers were sent to the Children's Hospital, Great Ormond-street, the children's ward in the University Hospital, and to some of the poor.

The Archbishop of Canterbury presided at a Court of Assistants of the Sons of Clergy Charity at the Corporation House, Bloomsbury-place, last Saturday. The main business before the Court was the distribution of the Midsummer benefactions of Dr. Taylour, Mr. Myddelton, and Mrs. Ann Cum, amongst the poorer clergy throughout the various dioceses of England and Wales, having families of three or more children, with an income insufficient for their maintenance and education. Mr. Paget Bowman, the Registrar, presented a list of 123 applications, almost without exception of a very pressing nature, and in every well substantiated case a grant was made, the total sum distributed, inclusive of £275 in educational and outfit grants to clergy children, amounting to £2045.

EGYPT AS IT IS: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

1. Promenade at Alexandria, on the right bank of the Mahmoudieh Canal.

4. House at the Old Port, and Mosque.

5. View of Alexandria, from Ramleh.

2. The Mills of the Meks.

6. The Rosetta Gate, Alexandria.

3. The Karmous suburb, with Pompey's Pillar.

7. Left bank of the Mahmoudieh Canal.

EGYPT AS IT IS: STREET SKETCHES IN ALEXANDRIA, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

1. Arab Shoeblacks in Alexandria.
6. Seller of Water.

2. Night Watchman.
7. Street Coffee-Seller.

3. Water-Carrier.
8. Seller of Sweetmeats.

4. Street Barber.
9. Porter.

5. Liquorice-Water Seller.

MONTBARD.

THE COURT.

The last few days of her Majesty's stay in the Highlands were occupied in paying farewell visits to the numerous recipients of the Queen's kindness among the residents on the Royal domain. Drives were also taken to some of her Majesty's favourite haunts, including the Glassalt Shiel, and to Birkhall and Ballater, the Queen, with Princess Beatrice and Princess Irene of Hesse, driving through the Pass. The officers stationed at Ballater, Captain A. G. Wauchope, C.M.G., and Lieutenants Lord Alexander Kennedy and N. Macleod, 42nd (Black Watch) Royal Highlanders, dined at Balmoral, and were afterwards received by her Majesty. Divine service was performed on Sunday at the castle by the Rev. Archibald Campbell, of Crathie, the Queen, Princess Beatrice, and Princesses Elizabeth and Irene of Hesse being present. Mr. Campbell joined the Royal dinner circle. Mrs. Campbell was visited by her Majesty at the Manse the previous day.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and Princesses Elizabeth and Irene, left for the South on Tuesday, travelling by special train from Ballater to Perth, where the Royal party dined, as usual, at the station. The journey being afterwards resumed, the border town of Carlisle was passed about midnight, and Windsor reached shortly before nine on Wednesday morning, when a warm welcome greeted her Majesty on the road to the castle.

The forty-fifth anniversary of the Queen's accession was duly observed on Tuesday.

The Queen has appointed the Very Rev. John Tulloch, D.D., LL.D., Principal of the University of St. Andrews, to be Dean of the Thistle, and Dean of the Chapel Royal in Scotland, in the room of the Rev. John MacLeod, D.D., deceased.

COURT ENTERTAINMENTS.

The last Levée of the season was held by the Prince of Wales, on behalf of her Majesty, last Saturday, at St. James's Palace. The Duke of Cambridge and Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar were present, and upwards of 300 presentations were made.

A State Ball was given at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday, under the auspices of the Prince and Princess of Wales.

A State Concert will be given next Wednesday at Buckingham Palace.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The notably busy life of the Heir-Apparent has of late been busier than usual, his Royal Highness having identified himself with objects artistic, charitable, scientific, social, and useful. The schooner, yawl, and cutter matches of the Royal Thames Yacht Club were witnessed by the Prince, who embarked at Gravesend on board Mr. Pierce's steam-yacht Boadicea, which accompanied the competing vessels. On returning, his Royal Highness and the Princess, with Princess Christian, went to a dance given by the Russian Ambassador at Chesham House. The Prince, after presiding at the annual dinner of the London Fever Hospital, to which funds he contributed 100 guineas, was present at a conversation given by Sir William Jenner, president, and the council of the Royal College of Physicians at their hall in Pall-mall East. His Royal Highness and the Princess and Princess Christian visited the bazaar in aid of the distressed Irish ladies, held at the Horticultural Gardens, South Kensington, and also were present at a symphony concert at St. James's Hall, at which Mr. C. Hallé conducted, Countess Erbach being with their Royal Highnesses. Yesterday week the Prince and Princess and Princess Christian went to Wellington College for the "Speech Day" and presentation of prizes. Their Royal Highnesses lunched with the head master (the Rev. Dr. Wickham) and Mrs. Wickham, returning to London in the afternoon. Prince Edward and Prince Gustav of Saxe-Weimar dined with their Royal Highnesses at Marlborough House; and the Prince and Princess and Princess Christian went to a ball afterwards given by Colonel Stirling and Viscountess Clifden at Dover House, Whitehall. His Royal Highness, after holding the Levée last Saturday, went into the City and unveiled a statue of the late Sir Rowland Hill, which has been erected at the Royal Exchange by the Mansion House Memorial Committee. The Prince was received by the Lord Mayor; the Postmaster-General being present. A guard of honour formed of the Post-Office division of the Civil Service was on duty. The Lord Mayor having presented an address, and the Prince having replied, Mr. Pearson Hill, a son of Sir Rowland, was introduced to his Royal Highness, as was also Mr. Onslow Ford, the sculptor of the work. The Prince then drove to the Mansion House, where a guard of honour of the Hon. Artillery Company, of which his Royal Highness is Captain-General, with their band, was drawn up; a double file of the corps lining the staircase and lobby to the entrance of the dining-hall, the Lord Mayor having invited the Mayors and Provosts of the United Kingdom, to the number of 300, to meet his Royal Highness at dinner. Divine service was attended, as usual, on Sunday by the Prince and Princess and their daughters and Princess Christian. The Duchess of Edinburgh and Countess Erbach lunched with their Royal Highnesses. The Prince inspected the Corps of Commissionaires in the garden at Marlborough House, it being Waterloo Day. The Princess and her daughters were present, and a Chelsea Hospital man ninety-seven years old, wearing the Waterloo medal, was led into the house to shake hands with her Royal Highness. On Monday the Prince and Princess went to Aldershot, passing the night there. Their Royal Highnesses were present at an inspection by the Duke of Cambridge of the batteries of the Royal Artillery quartered at the camp. The Prince dined with Colonel Reilly and the officers of the Royal Artillery, and, accompanied by the Princess, went afterwards to a concert given by the officers of the Royal Artillery (Aldershot division) at the club-house, and to a dance given by the officers at their mess. Their Royal Highnesses witnessed a sham fight on Tuesday. The Prince on his return to town visited the Duc d'Aumale at Claridge's Hotel; and dined with Major-General Higginson at his residence in Wilton-crescent. The Princess, with Princess Christian and the Duchess of Teck, went to the Gaiety Theatre. Her Royal Highness and her daughters, with Princess Christian and the Duchess of Teck, were present at the sale of work from the Royal School of Art Needlework at Grosvenor House on Wednesday.

Professor Costa's works at the Fine Art Society's Rooms, New Bond-street, have been inspected by their Royal Highnesses and Princess Christian; as also Mr. Lowell's collection of American paintings and low tiles.

Mr. Wallis has submitted for the inspection of the Prince and Princess the picture of Napoleon I. by Meissonier.

Their Royal Highnesses have fixed July 15 for laying the first stone of new buildings for homes for orphans at Swanley, Kent, in connection with the Home for Little Boys.

Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, with Princess Christian and Countess Erbach, were present at the military tournament given at the Agricultural Hall in aid of the funds of the Royal Cambridge Asylum. The young Princesses have enrolled themselves as members of the Humane Society established in connection with Little Folks' Magazine.

Princes Albert Victor and George of Wales sailed in the Bacchante from Corfu for Palermo on Monday.

The Duke of Edinburgh, who has gone to the coast of Spain, in command of the Reserve Squadron, was accompanied by the Duchess to Plymouth to take leave. The Duke of Connaught, who has been for some time past indisposed, has joined his brother in his cruise for change of air. The Royal party when off Weymouth landed from the Hercules at Portland, and drove to Abbotsbury, lunching at the Ilchester Arms Hotel, after which they visited the swannery belonging to the Earl of Ilchester, returning to the Hercules in the evening. The Duke dined with the Port Admiral at Devonport yesterday week. The Duchess, who returned to town on Saturday, was at the Gaiety Theatre in the evening. Her Royal Highness and her children left Clarence House on Monday, for Brussels, en route for Coburg.

The Duke of Cambridge visited Lichfield a few days since, and inspected the Queen's Own Royal Staffordshire Yeomanry and the Leicestershire, Derbyshire, and Staffordshire regiments of militia on Whittington Heath. His Royal Highness dined at the George Hotel with officers of the various regiments, and afterwards returned by special train to London. The Duke presided at the annual festival of the National Hospital for Diseases of the Heart and Paralysis, of which the Duke of Albany is patron, held at Willis's Rooms yesterday week.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck dined with Lord and Lady Howard of Glossop on Monday, at their residence, Rutland-gate.

The Duc d'Aumale arrived at Claridge's Hotel from Paris on Sunday.

Intelligence was received at St. James's Palace on Sunday that the Hereditary Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz was safely confined of a son and heir.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

Lord Rossmore and Miss Mittie Naylor, eldest daughter of Mr. R. C. Naylor, of Kilmarrish Hall, Northampton, were married on the 14th inst., at All Saints' Church, Ennismore-gardens. The bridesmaids were Miss Candy, niece of the bridegroom, Lady Constance Hastings and the Hon. Maud de Moleyns, cousins of the bridegroom; Lady Evelyn and Lady Violet Gordon Lennox, and the Hon. Marie Hay. The Hon. Peter C. Westenra acted as best man to his brother. Captain and the Hon. Mrs. Stirling received the wedding party at their residence, Ennismore-gardens. Lord Rossmore and his bride left for Rufford Abbey, Mr. Augustus Savile's seat in Nottinghamshire.

The marriage of Colonel the Hon. Cuthbert E. Edwardes (Rifle Brigade), brother of Lord Kensington, with Lady Blanche Butler, youngest daughter of the late Marquis of Ormonde, took place at St. George's Church, Hanover-square also on the 14th inst. The bride was given away by the Marquis of Ormonde. Her bridesmaids were the Hon. Elizabeth and the Hon. Caroline Edwardes, sisters of the bridegroom; Lady Beatrice and Lady Constance Butler, and Miss Marie Fitzwilliam, nieces of the bride; the Hon. Sybil Edwardes, niece of the bridegroom; Lady Jane Alexander and Lady Emma Bernard. Captain Cholmondeley (Rifle Brigade) was best man. The Dowager Marchioness of Ormonde received the wedding party at breakfast at her house in Park-lane. Colonel Edwardes and his bride went to Up Park, Miss Fetherstonhaugh's residence, near Petersfield, for the honeymoon.

The Hon. Arthur Henry Henniker Major (Coldstream Guards), youngest son of John, fourth Lord Henniker, and brother of the present peer, and the Hon. Florence Ellen Milnes, youngest daughter of Lord Houghton, were married on Tuesday at St. Mark's Church, North Audley-street. The bridesmaids were the Hon. Daisy Henniker, niece, and Lady Emily Stanhope, cousin of the bridegroom; Miss Hilda Graham, Miss Eleanor Bland, Miss Cotes, Miss Florence Hankey, and Miss Olive Stephen.

The marriage of Don Alfonso Doria Pamphilj, Duca d'Avigliano, with Lady Emily Pelham Clinton, takes place to-day (Saturday), at St. Mary's Church, Cadogan-terrace; that of the Hon. Alfred Talbot and the Hon. Emily de Grey will take place next Wednesday, in Westminster Abbey; and that of Lord Capell and Miss Harford on July 12.

A marriage is arranged between Mr. George Rashleigh, eldest son of the Rev. Henry Rashleigh, Vicar of Horton Kirby, Kent, and Lady Edith Bligh, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Darley.

The Warden and Senate of Durham University have conferred the dignity of D.C.L. on Sir George Elliot, Bart., M.P. for North Durham.

The portrait of the Mayor of Bradford, Mr. John Hill, in this Number of our Journal, is from a photograph by Mr. Albert Sachs, of Manningham-lane, Bradford. That of Miss North is from a photograph by Messrs. Elliott and Fry.

In our account, recently, of the Duke of Hamilton's ancestral titles, some reference was made to the once-disputed claim to the French title of Duke of Châtellerault. It was erroneously stated that the Duke of Abercorn, who claims the ancient French title by inheritance, is "descended in the female line from Duchess Anne," who married Lord William Douglas, afterwards created Earl of Selkirk and Duke of Hamilton for life, and who was the ancestress of the present Duke of Hamilton. The Duke of Abercorn is the direct and nearest lineal male heir, from father to son, as registered in the Scottish Courts, of James Hamilton, second Earl of Arran, Regent of Scotland during part of the minority of Queen Mary Stuart, and then declared by the Scottish Parliament to be heir presumptive to the Crown, being grandson of Princess Mary, Countess of Arran, eldest daughter of King James II. of Scotland, and wife of the first Lord Hamilton. The Earl of Arran, in 1549, was created by Henry II. of France, Duke of Châtellerault, and the Duke of Abercorn is his direct successor. The title of Châtellerault bestowed on the Duke of Hamilton by Napoleon III., in 1864, is a new creation.

A conference was held in the Westminster Palace Hotel on the 15th inst. with a view to devise means for urging the Government to facilitate some measures this Session for intermediate and higher education for Wales. Lord Aberdare presided; and, in addition to most of the members of Parliament representing Welsh constituencies, there were present the Earl of Jersey, Lord Dynevor, Lord Sudeley, Lord Kensington, M.P., and the Bishops of Bangor and St. Asaph. The chairman said he believed the Welsh Education Bill promised in the Queen's Speech was draughted, but had not yet received the final imprimatur of the Cabinet. Mr. G. Osborne Morgan, M.P., and Mr. Richard, M.P., bore testimony to the anxious desire of Mr. Mundella and the Educational Department to introduce legislation on the subject if the circumstances of Parliament permitted it. It was resolved that those present should form a deputation to wait upon Lord Carlisle and Mr. Mundella. On Tuesday last Mr. Mundella, in the absence of Lord Carlisle, received the deputation. He said there was little hope of any legislation on the subject this Session. He thought that elementary schools, which were recommended by the committee, might be established if only the Welsh people were in earnest. The department were prepared to take off the £10 limit and ask the Treasury to make a reasonable loan for this elementary class of school.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

ITALY.

On Monday evening the King and Queen left for their summer residence at Monza. His Majesty, however, returns, and will stay till the close of the Parliamentary Session.

The committee of the Senate recommends the adoption of the Army Organisation Bill as it passed the Lower House. The debate on the bill began on Monday.

In the Chamber of Deputies it has been decided to take into consideration the motion for the recognition of the Garibaldian invasion of the Papal States in 1867 as one of the national campaigns.

THE NETHERLANDS.

The Second Chamber of the States General will meet on the 26th inst. The Prince of Orange has been elected Grand Master of the Dutch Freemasons by the representatives of the various Masonic lodges in the Netherlands.

GERMANY.

The Emperor William left Berlin on Saturday for Ems, by way of Cassel.

Prince Bismarck entertained at dinner, on Sunday, the Ambassadors of the Great Powers, Madame de Courcel being present. He left for his country seat at Varzin on Tuesday.

Prince Bismarck spoke for two hours, on the 14th inst., in the Reichstag; but, notwithstanding his arguments, the Tobacco Monopoly Bill was rejected by 276 to 43, the minority being smaller than the lowest previous estimate. Next day a resolution was adopted by 155 to 150, after a debate lasting eight hours, declaring that in view of the increase of the tobacco-tax on July 16, 1879, any further measure burdening and harassing the tobacco trade did not appear to be admissible. The Reichstag has been prorogued to Nov. 30.

Herr Bitter, the Prussian Minister of Finance, is said to have resigned because of disagreement with his colleagues on the Surplus Application Bill.

Dr. Mommsen has been acquitted by the Berlin tribunal on the charge of having insulted Prince Bismarck in an electoral address delivered last year. The German Public Prosecutor has appealed against the acquittal.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

The population of Austria, according to the returns of the Census taken at the end of 1880, but only now made public, is 21,794,231, and this total, classified according to nationalities, is subdivided into 8,008,864 Germans, 5,180,908 Czechs, 3,238,534 Poles, 2,792,667 Ruthenians, 1,140,304 Slavonians, 568,615 Servian Croats, 668,653 Italians, 190,799 Rumanians, and 9877 Magyars. There are, therefore, four distinct races—the Germans, the Slavs, the Latins, and the Magyars, but as the two latter do not number a million between them, the two former may be said to compose the population of Austria proper. Comparing the Census of 1880 with that of 1869, it will be found that the greatest increase has been among the Poles, the Italians, the Germans, and the Czechs, while the Rumanians and the Slavonians have decreased in numbers.

RUSSIA.

The Empress is progressing satisfactorily.

An Imperial Ordinance has been sent up to the Senate, fixing the number of recruits to be raised this year for the Army and Navy at 212,000.

An Imperial Ukase has been issued dissolving the committee of inquiry into the condition of the rural population, and transferring its duties to the respective departments of the Council of the Empire and the Senate.

Persons who are not Christians are henceforth to be prohibited in Russia from trading in holy pictures and vessels used in Christian worship.

AMERICA.

The United States Senate has passed a bill returning the indemnity fund to Japan which the United States has held for eighteen years. The bill returns only 785,000 dol., the principal, retaining the interest, which has accumulated.

The House of Representatives has passed the Appropriation Bill, sanctioning credits to the amount of one hundred million dollars. A measure has also passed the House authorising the Treasury until July 1, 1884, to give standard silver dollars in exchange for trade dollars, and repealing the coinage of the latter.

Judge Bradley, of the United States Supreme Court, has refused the application of Guiteau's counsel for a writ of habeas corpus, holding that the District Court of Columbia had full jurisdiction.

The number of immigrants from Europe to the United States last month was 141,000. On Sunday 5520 landed at Castle Garden, New York, from seven steamers.

The bill regulating the conveyance of immigrants has been approved by both Houses of Congress. It provides for the enforcement of sanitary regulations, and for the better accommodation of immigrants on board ship. The House of Representatives has adopted the bill imposing upon the steamship companies a tax of 50 cents per head for the care and relief of immigrants on landing in the United States.

Congress being of opinion that education is not so universal as it should be in the Union, and that it is expedient to lend assistance to some of the less wealthy States, recently requested the "Committee of Education and Labour" to prepare a report on the subject. This report has been laid upon the table of the House, and the purport of it is that a sum of ten million dollars should be voted annually for a period of five years for educational purposes. This sum would be divided proportionately among the different States of the Union which have the greatest number of uneducated inhabitants. The Committee report that according to the returns of the last Census there were 6,230,000 persons over ten years of age—or an eighth of the total population—who could neither read nor write, and three fourths of this number are inhabitants of what were formerly the Slave States. More than a fourth of the total population of these States is uneducated.

Recent cyclones have done enormous damage in the Western States. Half the town of Grinnel, in Iowa, is reported to be destroyed, while at least seventy persons were killed. A goods-train was blown off the line during the hurricane, the guard and another official being killed.

CANADA.

The nominations for the elections to the Dominion Parliament have been fixed for July 3, and the polling for the 23rd.

The western section of the Occidental Railway was on Monday morning transferred to the Canadian Pacific Company.

It is announced that the last rail of the Canadian and Pacific Railway between Prince Arthur's Landing and Winnipeg was to be laid on the 17th inst., and the railway will be opened on July 1.

The British Columbia Ministry has been reconstructed, with Mr. Brien (the Hon. R. Beaven) as Premier and Minister of Finance and Public Works, Mr. Kett as Attorney-General, and the Hon. T. B. Humphreys as Provincial Secretary.

Enormous loss has been caused by the recent floods in British Columbia. The prairies have the appearance of inland seas, and the inhabitants are flying to the higher grounds.

BRAZIL.

The Minister of Finance has made his Budget statement in the Chamber, in the course of which he expressed his belief that the year's revenue would be greatly in excess of the estimates, owing to the large increase in the imports. The total deficits he set down at 6,711,000 milreis. The Minister recommended a 2 per cent reduction in the tax on coffee, and the gradual withdrawal of the currency.

SOUTH AFRICA.

The Maritzburg correspondent of the Daily News states that the first Dutch speech was made in the Cape Parliament on the 14th inst., when the member speaking expressed his satisfaction at the legalisation of the Dutch language, but declared his intention to use English in future.

According to a Durban telegram of Tuesday's date, civil war has broken out in Zululand. Dabuko, a brother of Cetewayo, is in the field, against Usibepu and Oham, and has defeated the latter. There seems every probability that John Dunn will also be attacked by Dabuko. Basutoland is still in a disturbed condition.

INDIA.

It is announced from Simla that the reductions made in the salt tax in India have been so successful financially that it is intended to make a still further reduction in the impost for the next Budget.

The Queen has approved the appointment of Mr. Jones Quain Pigot, Barrister-at-Law, as a Puisne Judge in the High Court of Calcutta, in the room of Mr. Justice White, resigned.

The British Envoy to Cabul, Muhammad Afzal Khan, has been cordially welcomed by the Ameer, but the cordiality is said not to have been shared by the populace.

AUSTRALIA.

Mr. Francis, member for Warrnambool, has introduced a resolution in the Victoria Legislative Assembly expressing disapproval of the remissions of taxation proposed in the Colonial Treasurer's financial statement. The hon. member, at the same time, disclaimed any feeling of hostility towards the Government. The Premier, however, declared that he must regard the motion as tantamount to a want of confidence.

The reorganisation of the volunteer force in Victoria is contemplated. The annual expenditure for the defences of the colony amounts to £70,000.

NEW ZEALAND.

The Hon. H. A. Atkinson, the Colonial Treasurer, made his financial statement in the Legislative Assembly last Saturday. The revenue for the last financial year amounted to £3,800,000, or £174,500 above the estimate. The actual expenditure was £3,610,000, being £77,000 below the estimate. The customs realised £125,000, the stamp duty £11,000, and depaturing license £56,750 above the estimates. The surplus at the close of the financial year was £215,000.

The Treasurer estimates the revenue for the current year at £3,900,000, and the expenditure at £3,700,000, including temporary charges amounting to £100,000, thus leaving a surplus, including the balance for last year, of £258,000. Of this sum £170,000, derived from sales of land, will be appropriated to local public works. The gross revenue from the railways last year was £884,000, and the net revenue £368,500, yielding nearly 4 per cent on the capital expended. The railway revenue for next year is estimated at £940,000. There is a large increase in the savings banks deposits and in the number of depositors. The total deposits amount to over £1,500,000. The unexpended balance of former loans amounts to £924,000. It is proposed to borrow £3,000,000, which is to be raised at the rate of not more than £1,000,000 per annum, and to be expended on specific railway and other works, which will be decided upon before the money is borrowed. The public debt on March 31 amounted to £31,400,000, and the annual sinking fund was fixed at £2,260,000.

The Bordeaux Wine Exhibition was opened on Tuesday by M. Léon Say, Minister of Finance, accompanied by the Prefect, the deputies of the Gironde, and the principal civil and military authorities. It is the largest provincial exhibition ever held in France, and is expected to be a great success.

In the loss of the large iron steam-ship Pera, while on her voyage from Quebec to London, we have startling evidence of the dangerous masses of ice which are now littering the Atlantic Ocean highways. This steamer, when off Cape Race last Saturday afternoon, struck a huge iceberg, filled, and sank a few hours after the collision. Three boats having been lowered, the crew of thirty-two persons and eight passengers entered them. The Lake Manitoba on Sunday picked up two boats with thirty men, and took them to Father Point. The other boat, containing ten men, commanded by the boatswain Connolly, is believed to have been lost. The Pera's passengers were cattle-men, tending the live stock on board.

The National Life-Boat Institution has decided to supply owners or masters of fishing-vessels with aneroid barometers of a trustworthy character at less than half cost, which must make these useful instruments welcome additions to the equipment of decked fishing-boats. We understand that the Life-Boat Institution has been moved to take this important step on account of the fact that a very large number of the fishing-vessels which are lost every year have no aneroid barometer on board, as a rule, to indicate the approach of bad weather, while those smacks which have them on board prepare themselves in time for the fearful storms which sometimes overtake them in mid-ocean.

The Oxford local examinations for the present year have taken place at Oxford, and simultaneously at Barnsley, Bath, Bedford, Birmingham, Boston, Brighton, Bristol, Cheltenham, Chipping Campden, Crystal Palace, Harrogate, Leeds, Leicester, Lincoln, Liverpool, London, Lytham, Manchester, Norwich, Nottingham, Preston, Ramsgate, Reigate, Salisbury, Southampton, Streatham-hill, Swansea, Taunton, Thame, Truro, Warwick, Watford, and West Buckland. In the senior department there was a general total of 720, of whom 318 were boys, and 402 girls. The juniors, as usual, exceeded the seniors in point of numbers, the general total of juveniles reaching the large number of 1453—viz., boys, 1058; girls, 395.

The Lord Mayor and the Committee of the Mansion House Fund for the relief of the persecuted Jews of Russia in their report state that in response to the public appeal £75,250 has been raised, £17,433 having been received from Paris, Vienna, Frankfurt, Brussels, and Firth. The expenses of 6691 persons who have been forwarded to the United States and Canada have been defrayed out of the fund, and money has been devoted to the settling in various European countries of individuals unfitted for emigration. The total cost of administration of the fund up to date has been less than £200. Committees have been formed in the capitals and larger cities of France, Germany, Austria, America, and other countries, which have collected and are still collecting considerable sums in aid of the movement. The committee adds that at the present rate of dispatch—nearly 1000 souls per week—the fund will speedily be exhausted, certainly within the next three weeks.

GENERAL HOME NEWS.

Henley Regatta has been fixed for July 6 and 7.

Lord Derby will preside at the annual dinner of the Cobden Club, which is to be held at Willis's Rooms next Saturday.

The Duke of Buccleuch has been elected Governor of the Royal Bank of Scotland.

Mr. R. W. Duff, the newly appointed Lord of the Treasury, has been re-elected for Banffshire without opposition.

At the Aust fishery, in the Severn estuary, a salmon over four feet in length was caught last week. It weighed 45 lb.

To-day Mr. Mundella, M.P., will distribute the awards in connection with the Normal School of Science and Royal School of Mines.

At the Agricultural Hall, Islington, last Saturday the military tournament was brought to a close after a week of uninterrupted success.

The directors of the Bank of England have promised a contribution of £500 towards the funds for the new building of the City of London College.

At the annual festival of the Poplar Hospital, held on Tuesday evening at the Freemasons' Tavern, subscriptions were announced to the amount of £1600.

The annual meeting of the British Archaeological Association is to be held at Plymouth in August. The Duke of Somerset, Lord Lieutenant of Devon, is president for the year.

The intermediate education examinations in Ireland began on Monday. The number of boys entered for examination is 5677, as compared with 5147 last year. The number of girls competing this year is 1648, the entries last year being 1805.

The Mayor of Gloucester on the 15th inst. presented Mr. McDonald, the master of the steamer Ballochbud, with a marine telescope, forwarded by the Emperor of Germany, as a reward for gallant services rendered to the German schooner Alwine, in the Baltic.

New waterworks, at a cost of nearly £12,000, for the supply of the town of Henley-on-Thames, were opened last Saturday by Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P. The occasion was of some scientific interest on account of the successful application to these works of a process for softening the water.

The erection of the memorial (a Sicilian marble Gothic headstone) raised by subscription among the members of the Metropolitan Police and the general public over the remains of Constable Atkins, who was murdered at Kingston-hill while on duty, has been completed at Walton-on-Thames.

The Council of the Society of Arts have awarded the Albert Medal of the Society of the present year to Louis Pasteur, Member of the Institute of France, For. Memb. R.S., for "his researches in connection with fermentation, the preservation of wines, and the propagation of zymotic diseases in silkworms and domestic animals."

The Ven. the Archdeacon of Middlesex presided at the half-yearly club dinner of the old boys of the Merchant Taylors' School on Monday night; when the Rev. Prebendary Whittington, who has been connected with the school as a master for twenty-eight years, was presented with some silver plate as a testimonial from present and past pupils of the school.

Another addition was made on Monday to the educational institutions under the control of the School Board for London. The new premises are situate in Oldridge-road, Balham. Accommodation is afforded in the buildings for 240 boys, for the same number of girls, and for 322 infants, making a total of 802. The cost of the site is stated to be £2234.

Dr. Tristram, Q.C., Chancellor of London, sitting at St. Paul's Cathedral on Monday, granted a faculty or license to convert the old, disused burial-ground of St. John the Evangelist, Westminster, into an ornamental garden for the recreation of the inhabitants, numbering some 30,000, of whom 5000 were school children.

There were 2493 births and 1335 deaths registered in London last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 20, and the deaths 55, below the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The fatal cases of smallpox in London, which had been 6 and 10 in the two preceding weeks, further rose to 15 last week.

The twenty-seventh general anniversary meeting of the Soldiers' Daughters' Home, Hampstead, was held on Tuesday afternoon in the grounds of the institution, General Sir Lintorn Simmons presiding. The claims of the home were ably advocated by the chairman, by Lord Chelmsford, General Sir H. Lefroy, and other officers.

A meeting in furtherance of the scheme for establishing a School of Dramatic Art was held last week at the Mansion House, the Lord Mayor presiding. The Earl of Wharcliffe said the school will be opened in October, and that the instruction will comprise elocution, dancing, fencing, and rehearsal. Special advantages will be given to actors' children.

M. de Pressensé, of Paris, gave on Saturday last, at the request of the Christian Evidence Society, his second lecture on "The Origin of Man," at Willis's Rooms, the Archbishop of Canterbury presiding. On Sunday he gave what was termed a religious and popular lecture at St. Andrew's Hall, Newman street, for the especial benefit of French-speaking foreigners resident in London.

In the Sheldonian Theatre at Oxford last week the honorary degree of D.C.L. was conferred upon Sir William Muir, K.C.S.I., member of the Council of the Secretary of State for India; Mr. Goldwin Smith, M.A., formerly Regius Professor of Modern History; Mr. Robert Browning, M.A., Honorary Fellow of Balliol; Mr. Allen Thomson, M.D., F.R.S.; and Mr. George Frederick Watts, R.A.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the Gas Institute, which was attended by nearly 300 gas managers from all parts of the kingdom, was concluded at Westminster on the 15th inst. by the reading of further papers. Mr. William Woodall, gas engineer to the Leeds Corporation, was awarded the first premium and silver medal for the paper read by him at last year's meeting on "Economy in Gas Manufacture."

Last week three steamers reached the Mersey with live cattle and the same number with fresh meat from the United States and Canada, having on board 953 cattle, 3015 quarters of beef, and 62 carcasses of mutton. As regards sheep, there were no arrivals. The totals show a large decrease in cattle and an increase in fresh meat, in comparison with the figures of the previous week.

The annual inspection of the Exmouth training-ship, at Grays, Essex, under the Metropolitan Asylums Board, was made last Saturday. The ship, which is a successor to the old Goliath, burnt a few years ago, is maintained at the "common charge" of London generally. Mr. Galsworthy (the chairman of the board) addressed those present. He congratulated the committee of management, Admiral Robertson, Captain Bouchier, and the officers upon the admirable result which had been brought about by their efforts. A watch was presented by Mrs. Brewer, widow of the late chairman, to the best boy.

Yesterday week the twenty-first annual prize-meeting of the Norfolk Volunteer Service Association was brought to a close at Great Yarmouth. The principal event was the championship of the county, which was won by Private Clover, of the 1st N.R.V., Norwich Battalion.—The annual inspection of the Inns of Court Rifle Volunteers took place last Saturday afternoon in the Temple Gardens.

A special meeting of the Edinburgh School Board was held on Tuesday for the purpose of electing a Rector of the Royal High School, in the room of Dr. Donaldson, who was recently appointed to the professorship of Humanity in the University of Aberdeen. There were six candidates. Mr. John Marshall, Principal and Professor of Classics in the Yorkshire College, Leeds, was elected by a majority.

Stock Exchange rumours of resignations in the Ministry was the subject of amused comment in the House of Commons on Monday night. Amongst other stories current on the subject is one to the effect that, by an error in the transmission of a telegram, the message "Bright and Chamberlain resigned" was delivered to a large operator in railway shares as "Brighton chairman resigned," and that he promptly proceeded to sell Brighton Stock.

The School Board for London reassembled on the 15th inst. after the Whitsuntide recess. There were three candidates for the vacancy caused in the representation of the Tower Hamlets by the retirement of Mr. Scrutton. The names of two of them—Mr. Edward Bond, barrister-at-law, and Captain Bedford Pim—were put to a vote. The former gentleman was elected by a large majority. For the nomination of the third candidate there appeared no seconder.

The receipts on account of Revenue from April 1, 1882, when there was a balance of £5,976,585, to June 17, 1882, were £16,963,681, against £17,423,163 in the corresponding period of the preceding financial year, which began with a balance of £5,923,682. The net expenditure was £16,198,759, against £16,476,278 to the same date in the previous year. The Treasury balances on June 17 amounted to £6,280,021, and at the same date in 1881 to £7,027,115.

The Masters of the Middle Temple Bench have awarded the following scholarships for Trinity Term: Common Law—A. C. Salter, first scholarship of 100 gs.; F. Kitter, second scholarship of 30 gs. Real and Personal Property: R. F. Harrison, first scholarship of 100 gs.; R. D. Setina, second scholarship of 30 gs. Equity: S. S. Moore, first scholarship of 100 gs.; F. M. Whitehouse, second scholarship of 30 gs. International and Constitutional Law: W. Clark, first scholarship of 100 gs.; L. J. Robertson, second scholarship of 30 gs.

A gold chain of office for the use of the Mayors of Margate was presented to the Corporation on the 15th inst. The chain is of the value of 500 guineas, weighs 33 ounces, and consists of about a dozen shields and links bearing the names and years of office of all the Mayors since the incorporation in 1857. Mr. George Lunsell, a native of Margate, presented the chain, which was made from gold obtained from his mines in Sandhurst, Victoria, Australia. The maker was Mr. Ayres, of Northampton-square, Clerkenwell.

As the result of the general examination of students of the Inns of Court, held in Lincoln's-inn Hall in May, the Council of Legal Education have awarded to David Calder Leck, Middle Temple, and James Edward Hamilton Beun, Inner Temple, studentships in jurisprudence and Roman law of 100 guineas, to continue for a period of two years; and to Lindsay John Robertson, Middle Temple, a studentship in jurisprudence and Roman law of 100 guineas for one year. The council have also awarded to Thomas Edward Scrutton, Middle Temple, the Barstow Law Scholarship; and to Thomas Bateman Napier, Inner Temple, a certificate of honour.

The troops to take part in the autumn manoeuvres which will be carried out in the vicinity of Aldershot, from July 24 to Aug. 19, will be divided into two army corps, under the command of Lieut.-General Hamley, Royal Artillery, and Lieutenant General Willis. Each corps will be composed of two divisions, commanded by Major-General the Duke of Connaught, Major-General Sir Evelyn Wood, Major-General Willis, and Major-General Newdigate. Colonel Fraser, 1st Life Guards, and Colonel Lord Ralph Kerr, will command the brigades of cavalry. One of the army corps will be encamped at Chobham.

Last month the officers of the Fishmongers' Company seized at the new Billingsgate Market, as unfit for human food, 18 tons 5 cwt. of fish, of which 13 tons 12 cwt. came by land and the remainder by water. Eleven tons of the whole quantity were shell fish. The weight of fish delivered at the market during the month was 13,272 tons, 9612 tons of which came by water, and 3660 by land. The fish seized included 3 barrels of crabs and 2 of oysters, 39 bags of scallops, 19 of mussels, 85 of periwinkles, and 7 of welks, 28 baskets of shrimps, and 2 boxes of brenn, 1 of coal fish, 25 of cod, 3 of eels, 52 of haddocks, 2 of halibut, 1 of pickled herrings, 11 of lobsters, 7 of mackerel, 5 of plaice, 1 of salmon, 6 of skate, 8 of white-bait, and 1 of whiting.

The fifty-second annual meeting of the British Association will be opened at Southampton on Wednesday, Aug. 23. At the general meeting on the opening day Sir John Lubbock will resign the chair; and Mr. C. W. Siemens, the president elect, will assume the presidency, and give an address. On Friday evening, Aug. 25, Sir W. Thomson will give a discourse on the tides, and on Monday evening, Aug. 28, Mr. H. N. Moseley will read a paper on pelagic life. Thursday evening, Aug. 24, and the following Tuesday evening will be devoted to soirées. The concluding general meeting, at which the place of meeting for 1884 is to be fixed, will be held on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 30. Excursions to places of interest in the neighbourhood of Southampton will be made on the afternoons of Saturday, Aug. 26, and Thursday, Aug. 31.

The annual meeting of the Victoria (Philosophical) Institute took place at the house of the Society of Arts on the 15th inst.—Lord Shaftesbury in the chair. It was very fully attended. Prior to the delivery of an address, "On the Scientific Aspects of the Last Palestine Survey," by Mr. Trelawney Saunders—who gave a careful analysis of the valuable results of the survey of Palestine, especially noticing the accord of the results with the Bible narrative—the hon. secretary read the report, from which it appeared that the total number of members was now upwards of 950, Professor Pasteur and many other well-known men of science having joined the society in the past year, during which papers and short communications written in furtherance of the society's objects—namely, the investigation of philosophical and scientific questions, especially those said to militate against the truth of Revelation—had been contributed by several scientific men at home and abroad. The report also referred with especial satisfaction to the formation of a similar society in the United States by the Institute's American members, who, however, still maintained their individual connection with the institute in England. Amongst the speakers were Bishop Short, Sir J. Fayer, Mr. J. F. Bateman, and Mr. D. Howard.

MISS MARIANNE NORTH,
DONOR OF THE BOTANIC PICTURE GALLERY, KEW GARDENS.

THE LATE MR. SCOTT RUSSELL,
CIVIL ENGINEER.

MISS MARIANNE NORTH.

This very accomplished and clever lady, a scientific botanist, traveller, and artist of rare talents, and of varied and extensive attainments, has generously presented to the nation, at the Royal Botanical Gardens, Kew, such a gift as well merits a public vote of thanks by general acclamation. Miss Marianne North, whose portrait is this week put before our readers, is the recent donor of the valuable and instructive collection of her own pictures of an interesting series of botanical subjects, painted from nature, now placed on view in a new building which has been erected for the purpose, also at her expense, at Kew Gardens. In following the order of the pictures as given in the catalogue, one proceeds as it were upon a botanical expedition all round the world. Teneriffe, Brazil, Jamaica, New York, California, India, Ceylon, Borneo, Singapore, Java, Japan, Australia, and New Zealand have been more or less explored by this indefatigable observer and delineator of nature.

The subjects chosen are for the most part rare and curious, and of particular scientific interest; but Miss North does not altogether disregard the picturesque, and there are a number of fine landscapes and striking bits of natural scenery in the collection. Glimpses, too, of the social aspects of life in the distant countries in which she has journeyed are here and there afforded. A picturesque view under the ferns at Gongo, Brazil, depicts in the foreground a slave woman who brought the artist's provisions over eight miles of forest road. The catalogue has been compiled by Mr. W. B. Helmsley, and is furnished with an appreciative preface by Sir J. D. Hooker, the Director of the Gardens. It contains much information, both descriptive and technical, about the plants, and, as it is provided with a copious index, it constitutes quite a little manual of botany. Adjoining the gallery is a little side room, elegantly furnished for the use of students who may wish to paint pictures of specimens in the grounds outside.

THE LATE MR. SCOTT RUSSELL, C.E.

The death of this eminent constructive engineer, in the seventy-fifth year of his age, was lately recorded. Mr. John Scott Russell was eldest son of the Rev. David Russell, of Errol, Perthshire, a clergyman of the Scottish Kirk. He studied at more than one of the Scottish Universities, but was also apprenticed in his youth to a mechanical engineer. In 1832, he held the temporary appointment of Professor of the Natural Sciences at Edinburgh University. About the same time he began his important researches into the nature of waves, with the view to improving the forms of vessels. His first paper on this subject was read before the British Association in 1835. A committee was appointed by the Association to carry on the experiments. Mr. Scott Russell discovered the existence of the wave of translation, and developed the wave-line system of construction of ships. In 1837 he read a paper before the Royal Society of Edinburgh,

THE YACHTING SEASON: THREE-TONNER RACE ON THE THAMES.—SEE PAGE 618.

THE DEATH OF GARIBALDI: CONVEYING A BUST OF GARIBALDI TO THE CAPITOL OF ROME.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE NEW TECHNICAL SCHOOL, BRADFORD, OPENED BY THE PRINCE OF WALES.—SEE PAGE 621.

"On the laws by which water opposes resistance to the motion of floating bodies." For this he received the large gold medal of the Society, and was elected a member of the Council. The first vessel on the wave system was called the Wave, and was built in 1835; it was followed in 1836 by the Scott Russell, and in 1839 by the Flambeau and Fire King. Mr. Scott Russell was employed at that time as manager of the large ship-building establishment at Greenock, now owned by Messrs. Caird and Co. His system was employed in the construction of the new fleet of the West India Royal Mail Company, and four of the largest and fastest of those vessels—viz., the Teviot, the Tay, the Clyde, and the Tweed—were built and designed by him. In 1844 Mr. Scott Russell removed to London. In 1847 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society and member of the Institution of Civil Engineers, of which open the doors, and found about four hundred stand of Snider rifles and needle guns with bayonets, besides twenty-five large boxes of six-chambered revolvers, some by Colt, and others marked Harcourt, United States of America. All were apparently new, and, in addition to a large quantity of gunpowder, stored in kegs bearing an official mark, from 50,000 to 100,000 rounds of fully-charged ammunition were found. Late on Saturday night a man was observed to go to the building and endeavour to unlock it. He was followed to his home in Charles-street, Hatton-garden, where he was arrested, and where afterwards more arms and ammunition were found. The man's name is given as Thomas Walsh, of 12, Charles-street, Hatton-garden. He is an Irishman, and is said to be known in connection with certain secret societies. He was examined at the Clerkenwell Police Court on Monday morning. Evidence was given by the proprietor of the stables in which the goods were stored, and by Inspector Peel, who made the seizure, as to the identity of the man and character of the weapons found, after which the magistrate remanded the prisoner, refusing to take bail, until the 27th inst.—Due precautions have been taken at Portsmouth as well as at Plymouth against a Fenian rising.

Venilia, 6h. 41 min. The Minnehaha and the Mascotte were not timed. Throughout the day, the wind, west-south-west, was very gusty, with heavy squalls of rain. This weather brought out the power of the boats, and much credit is due to the amateur crews, for their able handling and steering.

"PANDORA."

The story of Pandora—one of the most beautiful and suggestive of the "immortal myths" of ancient Greece—has woven itself into the thoughts and fancies of all succeeding civilized nations; and, like other classical fables—or rather should we not say poetical embodiments of abstract or concrete truth?—it has a dim resemblance to the sacred narrative of the book of Genesis. Pandora, like Eve, was the first woman on earth, and brought upon the human race all the evils it has since suffered. Zeus, in revenge for Prometheus having stolen the fire from heaven, caused Hephaestus to make a woman who by her charms and beauty should bring misery upon mankind. She was called Pandora, or All-Gifted, because each of the gods had given her some power by which she was to work the ruin of man. Aphrodite adorned her with beauty; Hermes bestowed upon her boldness and cunning, and so forth; Hermes took her to Epimetheus, who, forgetting the advice of his brother Prometheus that he should receive no gifts from Zeus, made her his wife. In the house of her husband was a closed jar, which he had been forbidden to open; but the curiosity of a woman could not resist the temptation to know its contents; she opened the lid, whereupon all the evils incident to man poured out; she only had time to close the lid and prevent the escape of Hope. Other ancient writers represent Pandora herself to have brought a box, not a jar, from heaven.

Such is the suggestive myth which Mr. Alma Tadema has treated in the small water-colour gem we have engraved, which figured in the last exhibition of the Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours as the artist's "diploma," or gift-work, on his election to the society. Like all Mr. Alma Tadema's pictures from classical history or fable, and small as is the field of representation in this instance, it evinces a scholarly and poetical mind. He probably followed those writers who represent Pandora to have brought the box from heaven. In the drawing it is constructed of the ancient material of bronze, and on the lid is a sphinx—at once an archaic and a most significant symbol of the mystery it covers. The nude figure by the shore suggests the Greek belief that all that is created came out of the sea. Like Venus, she is born from the waves: her hair seems still wet with the salt spray. Round her head are wreathed clusters of the wild hyacinth—the floral emblem of youth, as sung by Sappho, and the curved, sweet-scented petals of which furnish the poetic epithets "hyacinthine locks" or curls. The sky is ominously overcast, save where penetrates one little rift of light—a remaining ray of hope.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

There has been very little doing in the way of racing since Ascot. The old-fashioned Beverley Meeting was well patronised, and Sophist won a couple of events in such good style that he is greatly fancied for the Northumberland Plate, in spite of the penalty he has incurred, and has also been backed for a little for the St. Leger at extreme outside prices. Royal Stag, about the best of the north-country juveniles, could not quite concede 15 lb. to Mazarin in the Bishop Burton Stakes, but partially atoned for this defeat by cantering off with the Londesborough Plate on the following day. There were the usual holiday crowds at Windsor and Hampton, and, at the latter fixture, "the Cup," as the Queen's Plate is grandiloquently termed, was won by Isabel, who stayed far better than might have been anticipated, and beat Fortissimo easily enough.

A very large attendance round Mr. Tattersall's rostrum on Saturday gave promise of a very successful sale of her Majesty's yearlings; but, as they were scarcely so good a lot as usual, and some of them were decidedly backward, the thirty only realised 4756 gs., or an average of 150½ gs.

Two of the most interesting cricket-matches that have been played lately were those between Surrey and the two Universities, the county eleven, which is looking up again, proving victorious on each occasion. The first match was against Cambridge, and the University team suffered defeat by seven wickets, the Hon. Mr. B. Hawke (58) being the only one to make many runs. Mr. W. W. Read (22 and 47), who is in grand form this season, did best for Surrey. Oxford made a far better fight, but had to succumb by 16 runs. The scoring was low on both sides, and the great feature of the match was the fine bowling of Barratt, who, altogether, took 13 wickets for 73 runs. In the first innings of Oxford Mr. Homer, who had never previously played for his county, was in rare form with the ball, his five wickets only costing 26 runs. It was thought that Lancashire would have a very easy victory over Kent; but, thanks to a grand display of batting by Mr. E. F. S. Tylecote (94), the "hop county" only lost by 26 runs, the last five men of the team only adding one run between them. Of course Yorkshire made short work of Sussex, winning by ten wickets. Bates (56) did best for the winners; and the Rev. F. F. J. Greenfield (55) batted exceedingly well, but received little support from the rest of the eleven. It was entirely owing to the slashing play of Barnes (not out, 66) and Mills (59) that Notts beat the M.C.C. and Ground by one wicket. Osocroft (57) also did well for the county; and Scotton (52 and 27) proved the highest scorer for the club, though it seemed rather hard to enlist his services against his own county. Suffolk has defeated Essex by 19 runs.

Things have been very dull in the aquatic world since the departure of Hanlan, but on Tuesday the new challenge cup, presented by the proprietors of the Sportsman, was competed for for the first time. There were only three entries, the Australian pair, E. C. Laycock and H. Pearce, being opposed by J. Largan. As Largan defeated Pearce decisively in a match that took place over the championship course last Friday week, the latter was not fancied in the smallest degree; and when it was reported that Largan was seriously ill, the trophy seemed to be quite at the mercy of Laycock. Fortunately, the rumour about Largan appeared to be quite unfounded, and, after a grand struggle to Hammersmith Bridge, the English representative came away and won cleverly from Pearce, Laycock, who was quite exhausted, stopping just opposite Thorneycroft's.

The Vienna Chess Tournament was not ended at ten p.m. on Wednesday, but a despatch to the Daily Telegraph gives the leading scores as follows:—Winawer, 23½, with a game to play out against Weiss; Steinitz, 23, with an unfinished game against Bird; Mason, 22, left playing with Meitner, the latter having K, R, and B, against K and R, no Pawns on either side; Zukertort, 22½, left playing with Weiss. Mackenzie is certain of the fifth prize, his score being 22½; and Blackburne secures the sixth with a score of 21½.

STABLE AT RYDON-CRESCENT, CLERKENWELL, WHERE THE SEIZURE OF ARMS TOOK PLACE.

body he was for some time a Vice-President. He for a short time occupied the post of Secretary of the Society of Arts, which he resigned to become joint Secretary of the Great Exhibition of 1851; and, under the direction of the late Prince Consort, took a leading part in organising it. Mr. Scott Russell was for many years known as a ship-builder on the Thames. The most important vessel he constructed was the Great Eastern steam-ship, for a company of which the late Mr. Brunel was the engineer. The paddle engines and boilers of this vessel were made and designed by Mr. Scott Russell. He was one of the earliest and most active advocates of iron-clad men-of-war, and joint designer of our first sea-going armoured frigate, the Warrior. His last work in naval construction was the steamer on the Lake of Constance, which carries trains between the German and Swiss railways on the opposite shores of the lake. Mr. Scott Russell was one of the founders of the Institution of Naval Architects, and one of its Vice-Presidents to the day of his death. Though perhaps best known as a naval architect, Mr. Scott Russell was an active worker in other fields of engineering science. His greatest engineering work was the vast dome of the Vienna Exhibition of 1873. The last work Mr. Scott Russell designed was a high-level bridge to cross the Thames below London Bridge. It was intended to cross the river with a span of 1000 ft., and to allow of a passage beneath it for the largest ships. Mr. Scott Russell contributed largely to the literature of his profession.

DISCOVERY OF FENIAN ARMS IN LONDON.

The Metropolitan Police, at the end of last week, discovered a large store of fire-arms and ammunition, belonging to Irish Fenian conspirators, concealed in a stable in Rydon-crescent, St. John-street-road, Clerkenwell. The house to which the stable belongs is shown in our illustration; the stable had been let, in February last, to a man who gave the name of Sudgrove, and who said he came from Birmingham. He wanted the stable as a depot for "hard goods," which he told the landlord would be of crockery and glass, and said that in some instances there might be a few guns, as he was an agent for a foreign Government, and dealt in Government old stores. After some discussion, the man paid a deposit and hired the premises. In the early part of last week crates, such as are used by Staffordshire merchants for the removal of crockery and glass, were seen to be moved into the place. Late on the Wednesday night and early on Thursday morning carts arrived with boxes and cases, which had the appearance of containing heavy goods, being bound with heavy iron clasps and clouts; and, though they were marked in large black letters "Fragile," to lead to the supposition that they were only glass or some other brittle substance, suspicions were aroused.

On the Friday evening, the police having received information, Chief-Inspector Peel, of the Detective Department G Division, and Inspector Maffey, with other officers, broke is the equestrian Marcus Aurelius; and two recumbent groups of antique statuary repose below the double flight of steps in front of the Municipal Palace. These features of the place will be observed in the illustration, furnished by our Special Artist, of the scene on Sunday, the 11th, when the Garibaldi procession arrived at the Capitol. Orations were delivered and hymns were sung, expressing sentiments of devoted patriotism and love of liberty, and of enthusiastic admiration for the hero of the national cause. It is proposed to have another demonstration of this kind for the reception of his body, if it is to be removed from the temporary place of internment at Caprera, for a second funeral with national honours at Rome; but this has not yet been decided by the Italian Parliament.

A THREE-TONNER YACHT-RACE.

A match was sailed, on Tuesday, the 13th inst., at Gravesend, under the direction of the Corinthian Yacht Club, for prizes offered by a few gentlemen of the Stock Exchange and members of the Club, for yachts not exceeding three tons' burthen. The first prize was a silver cup worth £50, and the second a cup worth £10, with prizes to the crew in each instance. The course was from Rosherville Pier to the East Blythe Buoy, and thence back to opposite the New Yacht Club-House. The cutters, which started at a quarter-past twelve at noon, were seven—namely, the Naida (three tons), owner Mr. C. W. Courtney; the Mascotte, belonging to Mr. E. F. Quilter and Mr. T. Wynne-Eyton; the Snarley-yow, owners the Marquis of Ailsa and Mr. W. Baden-Powell; the Marama, owner Mr. Telford Field; the Venilia, Mr. Augustus Manning and Mr. H. Bartlett; the Muriel, Mr. Hubert Fox; and the Minnehaha (two tons), Mr. S. Waldegrave. The lead was first taken by the Marama, closely followed by the Muriel, and by the others, with double-reefed mainsails, except the Mascotte, which had a trysail set. The Muriel and Marama also set their topsails on the run down, and the Muriel got the first place, while there was a struggle between the Marama and Snarley-yow for the second. Then, over a dead beat in the shallows of the East Blythe Sand, with a strong ebb tide, the Mascotte crept up to the third place; but, with her deep draught, touched the spit near the Middle Blythe Buoy, and could not be got off by all the efforts of the Commodore's launch. From here a tacking race began, for the second place, between the Marama and the Naida, but the latter prevailed. The Snarley-yow now worked her way up fast, passing both the last-mentioned, and came up to the Muriel in Gravesend Reach. There was some clever steering on the part of the Muriel, and the yachts finally passed the flag-bout in the following order: Snarley-yow, 6h. 23 min. 5 sec.; Muriel, 6h. 23 min. 6 sec.; Naida, 6h. 26 min. 25 sec.; Marama 6h. 37 min. 49 sec.;

PROVINCIAL MAYORS IN THE CITY.

The Lord Mayor entertained a large number of Mayors and Provosts of the United Kingdom at the Mansion House last Saturday, the Prince of Wales being present. The Lord Provost of Edinburgh, the Lord Mayor of Dublin, and the Mayor of Liverpool responded to the toast of the Municipalities. The Speaker of the House of Commons acknowledged the toast of his health, and the Postmaster-General proposed the health of the Rowland Hill committee. The Lord Mayor, having made allusion to the proposed Royal College of Music, the Prince of Wales, in proposing his Lordship's health, expressed a hope that in twelve months' time they would be in possession of nearly sufficient funds to open a national institution that would prove of great advantage to the country.

On Sunday the Mayors and Provosts attended in state at the afternoon service at St. Paul's Cathedral. The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, accompanied by the Mayors and Mayoresses of Liverpool and Manchester, who are staying with them at the Mansion House, drove thence to the Cathedral, and were met on their arrival there by the Sheriffs and Under-Sheriffs, the Recorder, the Common Serjeant, the Aldermen, and a large number of the members of the Court of Common Council. Meanwhile the Mayors and Provosts, clad in their scarlet gowns, and wearing their massive gold chains, had assembled at the western entrance. A procession was formed, and the municipal dignitaries of London and the provinces were escorted to stalls within the choir. The Mayoresses were also conducted to seats. There was a very large congregation. The Dean of St. Paul's and Canon Gregory occupied their official seats. The sermon was preached by the Ven. Archdeacon Hessey, from the 37th chapter of Ezekiel, recording the vision of the valley of dry bones.

On Monday night the Guildhall presented a gay and more animated spectacle than the festivities annually held there can pretend to offer. In place of long rows of tables and the dull solemnities of a banquet, the great hall was throughout the evening filled with a whirling throng of dancers. The occasion was a ball to the Mayors, Provosts, and other representatives of the municipalities of the United Kingdom who were the guests of the Lord Mayor on Saturday night. At an early hour in the evening the Lord Mayor (Sir J. Ellis) and the Lady Mayoress, accompanied by the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, entered the Library, and there, attended by the City Esquires, the Swordbearer, the Macebearer, the City Marshal, and the Civic Master of the Ceremonies, received the guests.

DAILY SERVICE

ANTWERP.

Via

HARWICH.

DAILY SERVICE

ANTWERP.

Via

HARWICH.

DAILY SERVICE

ANTWERP.

Via

HARWICH.

DAILY SERVICE

ANTWERP.

Via

HARWICH.

DAILY SERVICE

ANTWERP.

Via

HARWICH.

DAILY SERVICE

ANTWERP.

Via

HARWICH.

COMMENCING ON JULY 1, the GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY'S STEAMERS will leave Harwich at 9.10 p.m. for ANTWERP DAILY, SUNDAYS EXCEPTED, instead of on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays only, as at present. The sailings from Antwerp will also be daily (Sundays excepted).

The CONTINENTAL EXPRESS leaves LIVERPOOL-STREET STATION EVERY WEEKDAY at 7.10 p.m. and Passengers are due at ANTWERP at 9.0 a.m., and at ROTTERDAM 8.10 a.m. the day following.

CHEAP CIRCULAR TOURS to HOLLAND (the Dead Cities of the Zuyder Zee), THE RHINE, THE TYROL, BELGIUM (the battle-fields of Waterloo and the Ardennes), SWITZERLAND, ITALY, &c.

Read the GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY ILLUSTRATED TOURIST GUIDE to the CONTINENT; 200 pages, profusely illustrated, price 6d., post-free 8d. "A TRIP TO THE ARDENNES," price 1d., post-free 1d. To be had at all Bookstalls.

TICKETS, TIME-TABLES, GUIDES, and any further information, can be obtained any time during the day on application to WEST-END OFFICE, 44, REGENT-STREET: City Offices, 48, Lime-street; and Blossom's Inn, Lawrence-lane, Cheapside; the Continental Booking Office, Liverpool-street Station, or by letter to the Continental Traffic Manager, Liverpool-street Station, London, E.C.

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.—Seaside. TWO MONTHS, FORTNIGHTLY, and FRIDAY or SATURDAY to MONDAY (First, Second, and Third Class) TICKETS are ISSUED by all Trains at REDUCED RATES to YARMOUTH, LOWESTOFT, WALTON-ON-THE-NAZE, WEELEY (for CLACTON-ON-SEA), HARWICH, DOVER, COURT ALDEBURGH, FELIXSTOWE, SOUTHWOLD, HUNSTANTON, and CROMER. For full Particulars see Handbills and Time Tables. London, April, 1882. WILLIAM BIRT, General Manager.

VITREMANIE, superseding Diaphanie. An easy and inexpensive method of decorating windows in churches, public buildings, and private houses, by which may be produced the rich colouring and beautiful designs equal in appearance to real stained glass. Handbooks of Designs and full instructions, 1s. 1d. Boxes, comprising designs, &c., at 2s. 6d. Particulars post-free. Sole inventors J. BARNARD and SON, 233 (late 339), Oxford-street, London, W.

CHROMOPHOTOGRAPHY. (KRAUS' PROCESS.) The New Art (enabling any person without previous knowledge of either Painting or Drawing) to Colour Photographs on convex glasses, in imitation of China and Enamel Painting. Boxes containing every requisite, 2s. and 2s. 6d. Particulars post-free. Specimens shown on application at the Sole Agents J. BARNARD and SON, 233, Oxford-street, London, W.

FOR ARMS and CREST send Name and County to T. MORING, Inns of Court Heraldic Office, 82, High Holborn, W.C. Fine Sketches, &c., Coloured, 7s. 6d. Seals, Dies, and Diplomas. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

On the 28th inst., price One Shilling.
THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE
For JULY 1882.
CONTENTS.
Garibaldi. By H. R. Fox Bourne.
The Laws of War. By J. A. Farrer.
The Problems of Distribution. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.
Illustrated.
The War of the Warburg. By Louis Barbé.
The Biscuits. By James Mew.
In the Deep Forest. By Rev. M. G. Watkins, M.A.
The System of Mezzadria. By Clapham.
Science Notes. By W. Matthew Williams.
Table Talk. By Sylvanus Urban.

On the 28th inst., price One Shilling, Illustrated.
BELGRAVIA for JULY.
CONTENTS.
All Sorts and Conditions of Men: an Impossible Story. By Walter Besant and James Rice. Illustrated by Fred. Barnard.
More News of Chaucer. By Mrs. H. B. Hawley. Illustrated.
How Père Perrault Spent His Legacy. By Alice Corkran.
A Tourist's Notes. By Katharine S. Macquoid. With Five Illustrations by Thomas R. Macquoid.
The Admiral's Ward. By Mrs. Alexander.
A New Novel by Wilkie Collins, entitled "Heart and Science: A Story of the Present Day," will be begun in the August Number.

On June 29 (One Shilling), No. 271.
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for JULY. With Illustrations by George Du Maurier and W. Small.
CONTENTS.
Dante's. By the Author of "For Percival." (With an Illustration.) Chap. X.—Mr. Lauriston on Consolation. XI.—After Four Years.
From Fish to Regilla.
The Merry Men. Chap. IV.—The Gale. V.—A Man out of the Sea.
French Prisons and Convict Establishments.
A Deserted Garden.
Whitehall, Past and Future.
No New Thing. (With an Illustration.) Chap. VIII.—Comrade Vela. IX.—Miss Brune's Partner.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

LIFE.
THIS WELL-KNOWN WEEKLY JOURNAL CONTAINS THIS WEEK, THURSDAY, JUNE 22, CHAPTER III. OF A NEW NOVEL

BY CHARLES READE,
AUTHOR OF
"Never Too Late to Mend," "Hard Cash," "The Cloister and the Hearth," &c., &c.
ENTITLED
SINGLEHEART AND DOUBLEFACE.

The Proprietor of LIFE has great pleasure in announcing that he has made arrangements with Mr. Reade to publish a Series of Stories of deep and varied interest from his pen, to be continued in the columns of LIFE, from week to week, for the space of a year or more.

Back Numbers, containing Chapters of THE KNIGHTS-BRIDGE MYSTERY, to be had.

With LIFE of May 4 was issued a Phototypic Portrait of Mrs. CORNWALLIS WEST.

With LIFE of MAY 18, a most successful Phototypic Portrait of Lady BRASSEY.

Phototypic Picture this week, A READING GIRL.

LIFE, every Thursday, price Sixpence.
Offices, 136, Strand, W.C.

MYRA'S JOURNAL.
Price 6d.; by post, 8d.
NOVELTIES for JULY NUMBER.

CUT-OUT PAPER PATTERN of the Morison Corset. DIAGRAM SHEET, containing patterns of (1) The Biarritz Bathing Costume; (2) The Dorricourt Matinee; (3) The Albany Mantle; (4) Bouillon sleeves for Summer Toilette.

A COLOURED FASHION-PLATE.
DRESS AND FASHION SPINNINGS IN TOWN, in Paris.
SEASIDE AND GARDEN COUNTRY HOUSE-KEEPING. Starching and Ironing.
NEW PARIS MODELS, New Bonnets, Costumes, Mantles.
BATHING-DRESSES, Modes for Ladies, Costumes for Children.
MYRA'S ANSWERS.
NEEDLEWORK: Designs for a Hearthrug in Berlin Wool-work; Applique Convivette, Embroidered Foot-stool, Tablecloth in Russian Embroidery, Border in Lace Braid, Crochet Tobacco Pouch, &c.
GOSWOLD and SON, 39 and 40, Bedford-street, Covent-garden.

THE SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.
LE MONITEUR DE LA MODE.
A HIGH-CLASS FASHION JOURNAL, APPEARING MONTHLY.
Price ONE SHILLING; postage, 2d.
The JULY NUMBER contains

FOUR BEAUTIFULLY-COLOURED FASHION PLATES,

Expressly Designed for this Journal.
TWENTY-EIGHT PAGES of LETTERPRESS, magnificently illustrated with OVER ONE HUNDRED ENGRAVINGS of the Latest Fashions from Paris, and the Realistic Novel entitled "Uncle Alec's Money."

A REVIEW OF THE FASHIONS;
FASHIONABLE FINE-ART NEEDLEWORK;
CHILDREN'S DRESS IN LONDON AND PARIS;
NEW STYLES AND COMING FASHIONS;
SOCIETY AND AMUSEMENTS IN PARIS;
NOTES OF THE MONTH;
MINOR DETAILS OF THE TOILETTE;
THE NEW PLAY;
ECHOES FROM EVERYWHERE;
&c.

GOSWOLD and SON, 39 and 40, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, London, W.C.

A LARGE COLOURED PLATE OF SUMMER FASHIONS IS GIVEN AWAY WITH JULY NUMBER OF WELDON'S LADIES' JOURNAL.

Price Threepence.
This Magazine has been permanently enlarged, and is now equal in size and contents to any Journal published at double the price.

Price 3d. Monthly. Yearly Subscription, 4s., post-free.

PRIZES! PRIZES! SEE JULY NUMBER.
WELDON'S PENNY DRESSMAKER.
July Number contains an Extra Gratis Eight-page Supplement of Summer Fashions, 24 pieces of Letterpress, 50 Illustrations, How to Cut Out Underlinen, Practical Dress Instructor, Second Distribution of Prizes, &c.

Price 1d. Monthly. Yearly Subscription, 1s. 6d., post-free.

A FASHION BOOK AND PAPER PATTERN for 1d. MONTHLY.

WELDON'S PENNY BAZAAR.
A Magazine of Children's Fashions. July Number contains a Gratis Paper Pattern of a Child's Shoulder Cape, 24 Pieces of Letterpress, 40 Illustrations, Distribution of Prizes.
Price 1d. Monthly. Yearly Subscription, 1s. 6d., post-free.
The Three Magazines sent post-free, 7d.

WELDON and CO., 7, Southampton-street, Strand.

KNITTING MANUAL. By Miss E. RYDER. "How to Knit Span Silk Socks and Stockings." Four cards in a case. Post-free, 1s. 1d. Published by H. Housman, Richmond, W.C. May be obtained at all Book-sellers and Berlin Wool Repositories.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

MR. TROLLOPE'S NEW NOVEL.
Now ready, at all Libraries.
M A R I O N F A Y.
By ANTHONY TROLLOPE.
3 vols., crown 8vo.
CHAPMAN and HALL (Limited), 11, Henrietta-street, W.C.

LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO.'S
Is. Handbooks, post-free 1s. 1d.
POTTERY PAINTING. By John C. Sparkes.
PAINTING ON CHINA, &c. By Edouard Delamardella.
FAN PAINTING. By Edouard Delamardella.
LIMOGES ENAMELS. By L. Dalrymple.
MODELLING IN CLAY, &c. By Morton Edwards.
GOLDEN RULES FOR SKETCHING FROM NATURE.
London: 60, Regent-street, W.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.
WHOLESOME COOKERY. By MARIE DE JONCOURT.
London: KNOX PAUL, TAYLOR, and Co., 1, Paternoster-square.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.
WHOLESOME HOUSES. A Handbook of Domestic Sanitation and Ventilation. By E. GREGSON BANNER, C.E., Member Soc. Arts, &c. New and Revised Edition. With a Chapter on Ventilation of Rooms and Hallways, and numerous Illustrations.
London: EDWARD STANFORD, 55, Charing-cross.

Just published, post-free, 2 stamps.
DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A small pamphlet on these distressing complaints and their complete cures. Published by the Author, RICHARD KIRK, Esq., Staff Surgeon R.N., 25, Warwick-st., Rugby.

THE TREATMENT OF CANCER, TUMOURS, AND ULCERS. A Pamphlet addressed to sufferers. By ALEX. MARSDEN, M.D., Senior Surgeon to the Cancer Hospital. London: WYMAN and BROS., Great Queen-street, W.C. Post-free, 1s. stamps.

DEAFNESS.—Sufferers will do well to send for Rev. E. J. SILVERTON'S Book on EARS, EYES, and HEALTH, price 1s.; but to the readers of this paper two penny stamps.—Not sent by post. E. J. SILVERTON, 17, St. Bride-street, Ludgate-circus, London.

NERVOUS DISEASES, and How to Cure Them.
CURATIVE ELECTRICITY. Free by post, 1s. stamps.
HYPOGASTRIA IN THE MALE. Free by post, 3s. stamps.
PARALYSIS, NEURALGIA, &c. Free by post, 6s. stamps.
By HARRY LOBB, M.R.C.S. Eng., L.S.A., &c., Surgeon to the Home Hospital, Dean-street, Soho.—Private Address, 63, Russell-square, London, W.C.

HAY FEVER or SUMMER CATARRH.
The most effective Remedy for this distressing affection is EPPS' ANTHOXANTHUM, which acted as a spray. The relief to the excruciating it is almost instantaneous. In Bottles, 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. (by post 3s. or 5s. stamps), labelled 48, Threacreech-street; and 170, Piccadilly.

HAY FEVER CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.

ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.
ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.
ALKARAM. HAY FEVER.

If inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 6d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
For CONSTIPATION, BILE, HEADACHE.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE, UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON.
2s. 6d. per Box, stamp included.
Wholesale—E. GRILLON, 65, Queen-street, London, E.C.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD'S
PHOTOGRAPH and a letter to Dr. Hoffman from General Garfield, commencing the Ho man paid to all sufferers from Liver and stomach disorders, will be sent free to any address on receipt of stamp. General Garfield believed the HOLMAN PAD to be the best Liver, Stomach, spleen, and Fever Doctor in the world. Hundreds of thousands bear similar testimony. References in every town in England. Address: THE HOLMAN PAD CO., Great Russell-street-buildings, London, W.C.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS,
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.
Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 3d. per Box.

"KEATING'S POWDER" kills BUGS,
Moths, Fleas, Beetles, and all insects (perfectly unharmed). Harmless to everything but insects.
Tins, 6d. and 1s.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.—An external Cure for Skin Diseases. There is scarcely an eruption but will yield to SULPHOLINE and fade away in a few days. Ordinary pimples, redness, blotches, scurf, roughness, vanish as if by magic, while all skin disorders, that have plagued sufferers for years, however deeply rooted, Sulpholine will successfully attack them. It destroys the animalcules which cause these unsightly, irritable affections, and always produces a clear skin. Sulpholine Lotion is sold by Chemists. Bottles, 2s. 6d.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific: after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unequalled as a dressing: it causes growth, arrests falling, and its use delays death. The most harmless and effective restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free.—Agents, R. HOVEDEN and SONS, London.

ROBARE'S AUREOLINE, or GOLDEN
HAIR WASH.—For producing the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 3s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.—Agents, R. HOVEDEN and SONS, London.

PRATT'S LADIES' BELTS
AND ABDOMINAL SUPPORTS
ARE CONSIDERABLY RECOMMENDED AS THE MOST COMFORTABLE AND EFFICIENT EVER MADE.
Apply to the Ladies' Attendant,
J. F. PRATT,
43 (late 120), OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

LOUIS VELVETEEN.
F. CATER and CO.,
133 to 135, Finsbury-pavement,
CELEBRATED VELVETEEN,
in Black and all Spring Colours.
Patterns post-free.
The wear of every yard guaranteed.

MADAME ELLIOT makes up DRESSES
stylishly and elegantly. Stylish Costumes ready for wear, from 3 to 12 guineas.
8, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street.

MADAME ELLIOT'S CORSETS.
Splendid Shape. French and English make, 5s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 15s. 6d., 21s. 6d., &c. To avoid delay, send size of waist and Post-office order for the amount. Corsets exchanged if not approved. Corsets made to order; also, Corsets made for every figure (embonpoint, deformities, curvature, spinal complaints, &c.). Also specialties in Ladies' Tournures, Tournure-Joupes, &c.—8, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street.

SPENCE and CO.'S, 76 to 79, St Paul's-churchyard.

INDIANA. The LATEST NOVELTY For LADIES' DRESSES,
As Supplied to
H.R.H. the Princess of WALES.
INDIANA. Fifty beautiful New Colours.
Black for Mourning,
25s. per Dress of eight yards,
44 inches wide.
Pattern post-free.

INDIANA. The "QUEEN" says:—
"The 'INDIANA' enables where light weight, graceful soft drapery, and good colourings are required."

INDIANA. "LE FOLLET" says:—
"The 'INDIANA' will make essentially light, graceful, and elegant, as well as serviceable dresses."

INDIANA. "MYRA'S JOURNAL" says:—
"The 'INDIANA' is altogether a charming and useful material for making Costumes, and in the lighter shades for evening wear."

INDIANA. "SYLVIA'S JOURNAL" says:—
"The purity of the wool makes the tints of colour very soft and beautiful."

INDIANA. "MADAME SCHILD'S JOURNAL" says:—
"The 'INDIANA' for all dress purposes is without a rival, almost as soft to handle as down, and yet is strong, and will wear to the last thread."

INDIANA. 25s. per Dress of eight yards,
44 inches wide. Patterns post-free from the Inventors and Sole Proprietors.

JAMES SPENCE and CO.,
76 to 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, E.C.

JAY'S.—MOURNING.

MESSRS. JAY'S experienced Assistants travel to any part of the Kingdom, free of expense to purchasers. They take with them Dress-makers and Milliners, besides patterns of Materials, all marked in plain figures, and at the same price as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street. Funerals, as stated charges, conducted in London or Country.

PLAIN BLACK SILKS.

MESSRS. JAY have purchased a large quantity of the very best Grosgrain Point de Side, Satin, Tulle, and other Dress-making Materials, and at the same price as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street. Funerals, as stated charges, conducted in London or Country.

COSTUMES trimmed with Jet, Lace, Crape, and every other Fashionable Ornamentation, and in all the latest Modes de Paris, are made up from these Silks at 24s. 2s. 2d. 2s. 2d. and 2s. 2d. REGENT-STREET, W.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA.
Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoa Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c.

The faculty pronounced it the most nutritious, perfectly digestible Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast Cup costing less than a halfpenny. Samples gratis. In Air-tight Tins, at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 19, Abchurch-lane, London, W.C.

CHOCOLAT MENIER
Awarded the
DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in 1/2 lb. and 1/4 lb. PACKETS.
For BREAKFAST and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-eight PRIZE MEDALS.
Consumption annually exceeds 22,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.
Paris, London, New York.

Sold Everywhere.

FRY'S
FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.
"A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

COCOA. FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT.
"Strictly pure."—W. W. STODART, F.I.C., City Analyst, Bristol.
FIFTEEN PRIZE MEDALS.

HORNIMAN'S TEA for Forty Years has commanded a large sale, because it can always be relied on for strength, flavour, and cheapness. It is the best tea imported. Sold only in Packets.

TO MAKE A JELLY or BLANC-MANGE,
Buy a Sixpenny Packet of CANNON'S GELATINE POWDER. This preparation is simple in its use, and perfectly pure. Directions included in each packet. Sold by all Grocers and Chemists.—B. CANNON and Co., Manufacturers, Lincoln, England.

GENUINE DUBLIN WHISKY.
THE MOST WHOLESOME OF ALL SPIRITS.
DUBLIN WHISKY, Distilled by Messrs. JOHN JAMESON and SON, WILLIAM JAMESON and CO., GEORGE ROSE and CO., and JOHN POWER and SON, can be obtained in Wood by wholesale merchants and dealers, direct from their respective distilleries.

INGHAM'S MARSALA WINES maintain their unequalled and world-famed reputation for extreme purity and delicacy, and are recommended by the Faculty. Ask for "Ingham's Marsala." Of all Wine Merchants.

L. TAMPPIER and CO.
World-famous Claret, BURGUNDY.
London: 97, Jermyn-street; Colliars, 173, Piccadilly.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.
This delicious Liqueur and the only known remedy for dyspepsia, hiccoughs, and all ailments of the stomach, can now be had of all Wine and Spirit Merchants.

Consignees for the United Kingdom and the Colonies, W. DOYLE, 2, New London-street, E.C.

CHAS. CODD'S ORANGE CHAMPAGNE is made simply from oranges. It is a light and wholesome tonic, and, being free from chemicals as well as spirit, is the purest and best of the non-alcoholic drinks. Price, in London, in large champagne bottles, 7s. per dozen; in small, 4s. Bottles charged 1s., and same allowed when returned.—C. Codd and Co., 79, Copenhagen-street, London. Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, and Wine Merchants.

SOYER'S SODA WATER, Lemonade,
Nectar, &c., are now sold at lower rates than any other similar first-class goods. Made only by C. SOYER and CO., Copenhagen-street, London, successors of the late M. Alex. Soyer, formerly chef cordon at the Reform Club. Sold by Grocers, Chemists, and Wine Merchants.

FOR SALE in SAN SEBASTIAN (finest sea-side place of Spain), large corner house, built eight years ago, central position in the new part of the town, covering 48 square metres. Cellar well lighted, thirteen doors on the ground floor leading into the two streets. Three stories, each with thirteen iron balconies, and a beautiful "mirador" in the centre. Garrets. The fronts of the house are in "chocolate" Ad doors and fittings made of oak. For Particulars address J. M. L., Calle de San Sebastian, 25, 25, 11ao 30, San Sebastian.

Digitized by Google

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW DANCE

MUSIC.

Gee Up! Polka .. D'Albert.
 Waldeck Waltz .. D'Albert.
 Nearest and Dearest Waltz .. D'Albert.
 Patience Lancers and Quadrille .. D'Albert.
 Patience Lancers and Polka .. D'Albert.
 Olivette Lancers and Polka .. D'Albert.
 Drink, Pippin, Drink, Polka .. D'Albert.
 Visions d'Amour Valse .. D'Albert.
 Loyauté Waltz .. D'Albert.
 (Dedicated by permission to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.)
 Played at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
 Grenade Waltz .. Mrs. Smith Bridges.
 Venetia Waltz .. Caroline Lowthian.
 Je T'Aime Valse .. Waldteufel.
 Played at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace.
 Mother Hubbard Polka .. Caroline Lowthian.
 Price 2s. each net.
 CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW SONGS.

An Old-Fashioned Garden .. Lady Benedict.
 Thine Alone .. A. H. Behrend.
 'Tis for the Best .. Madame Sainton-Dolby.
 Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd.
 ARI (Evermore) .. A. H. Behrend.
 Sung by Mr. F. King.
 In the twilight of our love .. A. Sullivan.
 (Drawing-room version of "Silverd is the raven hair," from "Patience.")
 Price 2s. each net.
 CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW PIANOFORTE

PIECES.

Viscount Dupplin .. Three Album Leaves.
 Jauchia .. Valise Brillante.
 Jauchia .. Gavotte.
 Viscount Dupplin .. Gavotte, Solo or Duet.
 Jules de Sival .. Handelian Dance.
 G. J. Rubini .. Gavotte.
 G. F. Kendall .. Margery, Old English Dance.
 G. F. Kendall .. Phyllis, Old English Dance.
 Price 2s. each net.
 CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

PATIENCE. An Aesthetic Opera. By

W. G. GILBERT and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed at the Savoy Theatre with enormous success.

LIBRETTO. .. 1s.
Vocal Score. .. 1s.
Pianoforte Solo. .. 1s.
 All the following sent post-free for half price.

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.

Boyton Smith's Fantasia .. 4 0
 Ditto, Duet .. 6 0
 Kube's Fantasia .. 6 0
 Smallwood's Easy Fantasia, 1, 2, 3 .. 3 0
 Fred. Godfrey's Grand Selection. (As played by all the leading Bands) .. 4 0
 Ditto, as a Duet .. 6 0
 CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

MRS. L. MONCRIEFF'S NEW SONGS.

'Twas Only a Year Ago, Love.
 A CREOLE LOVE SONG.
 THOUGHTS AT SUNRISE.
 Price 1s. each net.
 CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street, W.; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS'

SYSTEM OF HIRE OF PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the instrument becomes the property of the Hired at the end of the third year, provided each quarter a hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2s. Harmoniums, from 1s. 6s.; and American Organs, from 1s. 6s. a Quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from

20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S YACHT PIANINOS,

with folding keyboards, from 30 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IRON-FRAMED

COTTAGE PIANOFORTES for Ocean Steamers and Extreme Climates, from 35 to 65 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S Early English

PIANOFORTES, artistically designed Ebony Cases, from 45 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S Iron Double

Overstrung PIANOFORTES, Check Actions, &c., from 50 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from

120 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE

HARMONIUM, for Church, Schools, or Drawing-Rooms, from 6 to 12 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from 12s. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED

AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. A large variety on view, from 15 to 250 guineas. Price-Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PET ORGAN,

Seven Stops, including Sub-bass and Octave Coupler. Elegant Carved Walnut Case. 18 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite

ORGAN. Five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two knee swell, elegant carved Cast-iron case, price 25 guineas. With thirteen stops, octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 30 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S NEW STYLE

VICTORIA CASE. Twelve stops, five sets of reeds, sub-bass and Octave Coupler. 37 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S CENTENNIAL

GRAND ORGAN, 15 Stops, 9 Sets of Reeds, and Combination Tubes, 45 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PIPE and REED

ORGAN, Style 113. Organ Pipe Front, handsomely diapered, seventeen stops, thirteen sets of reeds. 135 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S GRAND

ORGAN MODEL. Two claviers, two and a half octave of pedals, twenty-three stops, seventeen sets of reeds, elegant diapered pipes, solid walnut case. 225 guineas. The most perfect American organ manufactured. Illustrated List free.

INSTRUMENTS by ALL MAKERS may be

HIRE or PURCHASE on the Three-Years' System. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS

FOR CASH. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS HALF PRICE.

In consequence of a change of partnership the whole of this splendid stock (perfected with all the improvements of the day—viz. steel frame, overstrung, trichord throughout, check action, &c., by this long-standing firm of 100 years' reputation) is now offered at half price; and in order to effect a speedy sale the easiest terms arranged, with ten years' warranty.

Trichord Cottages from hire, &c., £10 to £12.
 Class 0, £14 | Class 2, £20 | Class 4, £26 | Class 6, £32
 Class 1, £17 | Class 3, £23 | Class 5, £29 | Class 7, £35
 American Organs, best class, from £5.
 Carriage free, and all risk taken, to any station in England.
 THOS. D'ALMAINE and CO., 91, Finsbury-pavement, Moorgate, E.C.

PLEYEL WOLFF and CO.'S PIANOS.

Every description of these celebrated Instruments for SALE or HIRE. Sole Agency, 170, New Bond-street, W.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'

SOSTENENTE PIANOS gained the Highest Distinctions, Legion of Honour, and Gold Medals at the principal Exhibitions. Illustrated Lists free.—18, 20, 22, Wigmore-st., W.; and the Brinsmead Pianoforte Works, Kentish Town, N.W.

NEW MUSIC.

BOCCACCIO.—The universally popular Opera by VON SUPPE. The only complete authentic edition, as performed at the Comedy Theatre. Vocal Score, with English Words, by Farnie and Boosey. Price 6s. net.

BOCCACCIO for Pianoforte. Complete, 2s.

BOCCACCIO and MASCOTTE ALBUM.

Containing "Boccaccio" Quadrille, Waltz, Galop, March, and Polka; and "Mascotte" Quadrille and Waltz. Complete (22 pages), price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
 Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW and POPULAR BALLADS for LADIES' VOICES. Sung everywhere.

THE LONG AVENUE. MOLLAY.
 THE MILLER and THE MAID. MARZIALS.
 IN ARCADE. HUDSON.
 IN A QUIET OLD VILLAGE. GATTY.
 GOOD NIGHT. CLENDON.
 SUNSHINE and RAIN. RUMENSTHAL.
 MY LOVE IS LIKE A SINGING BIRD. Mrs. L. MONCRIEFF.
 PEGGY and ROBIN. EVA HARRADEN.
 2s. each.—Boosey and Co., London.

OLD LACE. By MOLLOY. Sung by Miss Helen D'Alton, M'as Damian, and Madame Mudio-Bollingbroke. 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

WAITING FOR THE KING. New

Song. By FRANK L. MOIR. Sung by Miss Carlotta Elliot, Miss Clara Samuelli, Madame Adeline Paget, and other distinguished artists.

She had watch'd at the gates of the palace
 One day, for an hour or more,
 The little pinch'd fingers were purple,
 The little feet weary and sore;
 Last night in her dream in the cellar
 A beautiful angel came aigh,
 And bent o'er the sleeper to tell her—
 "To-morrow the King will pass by."
 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THINE ALONE. Waltz. By JOSEF

MEISSLER. Performed at her Majesty's State Ball, May 17. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE SCENT OF THE LIMES.

A New and Highly Successful Song.

By J. L. ROECKEL.
 In D. 2s. net.

Is now being sung by Mesdames Florence Clare, Mand Cameron, Fuselle, Beta Francis, Constance Herring, Jeanie Rose, Thorndike, Rose Trevor, and Lansell-Simms.

'Tis but the scent of blooming limes,
 Blown on some vagrant breeze;
 That takes me back to olden times,
 And to the old home scene;
 Strange that a perfume of a flower,
 I lov'd in early years,
 Should move me with resistless pow'r,
 And dim my eyes with tears!
 I hear down a shadowy track,
 Lit up by sunny gleams;
 And to my side comes smiling back
 The love of bygone dreams!

Again I saunter to and fro
 In the old familiar place,
 And watch the sunlight come and go,
 Upon a beloved face;
 I hear the bees hum round the flow'rs,
 And through the fragrant air,
 The golden dust floats down in show'rs
 Upon that golden hair;
 Oh murm'ring bees! Oh fragrant breeze,
 Oh waving, whispering limes!
 Oh, there to be again with thee,
 My love of olden times!

Post-free for 24 stamps.
 London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

B. WILLIAMS'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PRINCESS HELEN OF WALDECK

BYRON. Suite de Valse. Par GEORGES LAMOTHE. 2s. net.

AUF IMMER (For Ever). Waltzer. By

OSCAR SEYDEL. The favorite with which this waltz has been already received bids fair to outstrip the celebrated "Welt von Dir" in popularity. 2s. net.

THE OLD AND THE YOUNG MARIE.

By Weatherly and COWEN. Sung by Miss Clara Samuelli. 2s. net.

LOVE ABIDES. By Weatherly and

ROECKEL. 2s. net.

THRO' THE GOLDEN GATE. Words

by Frederick Wood; Music by GEORGE FOX. Sung by Miss Emilie Lloyd. 2s. net.

London: B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row.

SIGNOR TOSTI'S LATEST

COMPOSITIONS.—The celebrated Composer of the immensely popular songs, "For Ever" and "Good-bye," has just published:

CHANNON DE FORTUNO. Song, in three keys .. Net, 2s.

AVE MARIA. Piccola melodia, in three keys .. Net, 2s.

NONNA MORIEL. Canzonette, in three keys .. Net, 2s.

BENZA DI TE. Serenata, in three keys .. Net, 2s.

E MORTO PULCINELLA. Song, in three keys .. Net, 2s.

NAPOLI. Duet. Sung everywhere by the Cecil Bros. Net, 2s.

Record, 265, Regent-street, W.

SIGNOR COSTA'S Popular SONGS.

SONG OF MIGNON. In two keys .. Net, 1s. 6d.

SPRING (Primavera). In three keys .. Net, 2s. 6d.

Both sung everywhere by Miss Santley.

Record, 265, Regent-street, W.

Just published.

TOSTI'S New English Song, THAT DAY.

Words by F. E. Weatherly. In four keys. Net, 2s.

Record, 243, Regent-street, W.

Just published.

DENZA'S New English Song, I WILL

SUFFER SILENTLY. In four keys. Net, 2s.

Record, 265, Regent-street, W.

GRANDS and SEMI-GRANDS

by

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and CRAMER.

On Cramer's Three-Years' System (originated by them), from 25s. per quarter; the easiest and most satisfactory mode of acquiring a thoroughly reliable instrument of the highest quality as regards both tone and construction. Any instrument may be exchanged within three months without loss. The hiring may be discontinued, or an exchange made on special terms, at any time during the currency of the agreement. Pianofortes tuned by the year in town or country.

Regent-street, W.; Moorgate-street, E.C.

95, NEW BOND-STREET.

J. and J. HOPKINSON beg to announce that they have opened the above extensive premises with an entirely new stock of their celebrated Grand and Cottage

Pianofortes.

For Sale, Hire, or on the Three-Years' System.

Illustrated Lists, with original designs in the Chippendale, Queen Anne, Early English, and other styles on application to 95, New Bond-street, London, W.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE,

from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 25, Great Poultry-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactured by J. & A. Horneferry-road, Westminster.

ELECTRO-

MANUFACTURERS TO THE QUEEN.

MAPPIN and WEBB,

NORFOLK-STREET, SHEFFIELD.

TRADE PRICES.

and at

MANSHION HOUSE BUILDINGS, CITY, LONDON.

Write for their "Electro" Catalogue

NEW MUSIC.

POPULAR SONGS.

I THINK OF ALL THOU ART TO ME.

In D and F. COWEN. Net, 2s. Sung by Mrs. Osgood, Miss de Fonblanque, Clara Myers, Carlotta Elliott, Estelle Emrick.

NOT ALWAYS YOUNG. Song. In E

and F. PALADILHE. Net, 2s. Sung by Madame Trebelli and all principal vocalists.

A WAYSIDE POSY. In D, E, and F.

MICHAEL WATSON. Net, 2s. Sung by Agnes Larkcom, Lucy Franklin, Annie Giles, Emmeline Dixon, Miss Woodhatch, Madame Worrell, and Annie Marriott.

A DAY-DREAM. In D and F.

BLUMENTHAL. Net, 2s. Sung by Annie Marriott, Sedge Glover, Emmeline Dixon, Miss Woodhatch, Madame Worrell, and Madame Bernani.

TOLD IN THE TWILIGHT. In D, F,

and G. Weatherly and MOLLOY. Net, 2s. Sung by Annie Giles, Emmeline Dixon, Miss McClean, and Madame Worrell.

LOVE WILL SHINE ALL THROUGH.

(Contralto). PINSUTI. Net, 2s. Sung by Miss Clara Myers, &c.

THE CHILD'S LETTER TO HEAVEN. In

D and F. LEVEY. Net, 2s. A most effective drawing-room song.

"Words of exquisite tenderness, and blended with music of a most charming character."—Vide Press.

COWEN'S latest SONGS (in keys to suit all voices). Each, net, 2s.

If thou wilt remember. Good-night.
 Rondel (Kiss me Sweetheart). The Night has a Thousand Eyes.

ALL SONGS (including the above)

published by me may be sung at any concert free of charge, the sole exceptions being "She wore a wreath of roses" and "Sweet and low" (Waltz), over which I have no control.

Signed, JOSEPH WILLIAMS.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW VIOLIN

MUSIC. 1s. 6d. each, net.

1. Largo. Handel. 2. Gavotte. Rameau.

3. Schumann. 4. Minuet. Schumann.

5. Andantino. Schubert. 6. Minuet. Beethoven.

7. Cavatina. Raff. 8. Andante. Handel.

SALLY BROWN. GEORGE FOX.

Comic Cantata, suitable either for drawing-room or concert. Four Voices and Chorus. Net, 2s. 6d.

HAROLD THOMAS. OPERATIC, &c.,

FANTASIES. Net, 2s. each.

LES HUGUENOTS. FAUST (Gounod).

LUCIA. MOSE IN EGITTO.

DON GIOVANNI. DER FREYSCHUTZ.

TRAVIATA. MARTHA.

MASANILO. TANNHAUSER.

LOHENGRIN. ST. PAUL.

HYMN OF PRAISE.

BILLEE TAYLOR. Vocal Score, 6s.

QUADRILLES, Cote, 2s. net. VALSE, Godfrey, 2s. net.

LANCERS, 2s. net. POLKA, 2s. net.

FANTASIA for PIANO, by Tourville, 1s. 6d. net.

CLAUDE DUVAL. Vocal Score, 6s.

QUADRILLES, Cote, 2s. net.

London:

J. WILLIAMS, Berners-street; and

121, Cheapside.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS,

ARMES, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES

Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs.

NOTE-PAPER and ENVELOPES, brilliantly illuminated by hand in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours.

BEST BELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100.

All the New and Fashionable Note-Papers.

BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS OF FARE, GUEST CARDS.

WEDDING CARDS, and INVITATIONS in every variety.

ARMES and CRESTS FOUND, Painted, and Engraved on Steel, Silver, Gold, and Ivory.

H. RODRIGUES, HERALDIC ENGRAVER, 42, PICCADILLY.

VISITING CARDS at H. RODRIGUES'

A VISITING-CARD PLATE elegantly engraved, and 100 SUPERFINE CARDS Printed, for 1s. 6d.

HENRY RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly, London.

ARMES and CRESTS FOUND, by Mr.

HODGSON, late from HERALD'S COLLEGE. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; Coloured, 7s. Monograms, seals, Dies, Book Plates, Pedigrees, illuminated Addresses, Engraving, Visiting Cards, Stationery, &c.—MATTHEWS and HODGSON, 135, Oxford-street, W. Estd. 1810. Prize Medals, 1851, 1852, 1876.

THE LADY OF THE WOODS and THE

LORD OF THE GLEN. These two remarkable Engravings, together with the Original Drawings by J. MacWhirter, are now being EXHIBITED by Messrs. GLADWELL BROTHERS, at the City of London Fine Art Gallery, 20 and 21, Gracechurch-street. Admission by private card.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

1878. PARIS. GOLD MEDAL.

IN MEMORIAM.—Most lovely Memorial

Wreaths of choicest flowers, from 10s. 6d. each, for London or country

The Prince and Princess of Wales have this week visited Bradford, staying from Thursday to Saturday at Milner Field, Saltaire, as the guests of Mr. Titus Salt. On Friday the new Technical School at Bradford was opened by his Royal Highness. We give some illustrations of the town and neighbourhood.

It has been observed by a Yorkshire writer that Bradford, like many of its respected citizens, is entirely self-made. Its connection with those events which make up the history of the nation is of the slightest character; it is, in fact, essentially a town of the present. From being a place comparatively unimportant at the commencement of this century, it has attained a prominent position as one of the chief industrial centres of the kingdom. It is not certainly known by whom the name "Bradford" was first applied, but it is generally held to have been derived from the Anglian words "brad," or broad, and "ford," there being three streams which unite in the centre of the town, and across which a passage or "ford" no doubt existed. This united stream, it may be remarked, has in no small degree contributed to the prosperity of Bradford; for it has supplied an endless number of factories with the water necessary for the due carrying on of all manner of manufacturing processes. The town may be roughly described as "lying at the bottom of an irregular basin of hills, every outlet of the town, except the narrow valley which follows the course of the stream, or 'beck,' as it is called, being more or less of an ascent." It will be understood how well this "beck," which is now covered up, has lent itself to the development of industrial pursuits. Its advantages have been supplemented by the great mineral wealth of the district, coal, iron, and excellent stone being most plentiful. The buildings of Bradford are, almost without exception, of stone; and this circumstance, with the fact that the streets, being hilly, afford commanding sites, has given an imposing appearance to the principal edifices of the town.

One Ilbert De Lacy, at the Norman Conquest, obtained the manor of Bradford, along with an immense tract of country extending from Pontefract to Clitheroe, as a reward for his prowess at the battle of Hastings. The manor remained in the hands of the De Lacy family about 230 years; after which it passed into those of the Earl of Lancaster, from whose heirs it reverted to King Henry IV. It remained the property of the Crown down to the reign of Charles I., who sold it to the Corporation of London. After this, the manorial property was sold to different persons, and the manor has passed, in one way or another, to Miss Elizabeth Rawson, of Nidd Hall, the present lady of the manor.

THE MAYOR OF BRADFORD (MR. JOHN HILL).

MANNINGHAM HALL AND PARK, BRADFORD.

We find in the report of the Inquisition of Edward I., in 1277, that "Henry de Lascy" had many "liberties in the town of Bradford." Amongst these, "a market and a free court from ancient times." The "free court" above mentioned was what was afterwards known as the Manor Court, which was swept away in 1867 by the "County Courts Act." This court was in the seventeenth century held in a building which still exists in Westgate, and which bears date 1678. A sketch of the ancient building will be found among our Engravings. Over the doorway are the letters "H. M. I. M.," which are initials of the Marsdens, who then owned the manor. The market had been fixed for Thursday, but was usually held on a Sunday, in the churchyard, for the convenience of residents in distant parts of the parish, who could, by this arrangement, both attend Mass and transact their business on the same day. There was a Norman church existing on the site of the present parish church in the time of the De Lacs. In 1311, the value of the De Lacy estates is said to have been £600 a year of our present money, and the population has been estimated at 650. At that time there existed in the town a "Fulking Mill," which shows that cloth was manufactured at Bradford even at so early a date. In the time of Edward III. Bradford seems, in consequence of conscriptions and the incursions of the Scots, to have suffered most severely; but the land, which had been laid waste, was again put into cultivation, and a number of Flemish cloth-weavers settled in the town, and gave a great impetus to its trade.

It is worthy of mention that in John of Gaunt's time a ravenous boar, as tradition asserts, haunted Cliffe Wood, and became such a terror to the neighbourhood that the King offered a reward to anyone who should slay the animal. One day, when the boar was drinking at a well (still in existence, and known as the Boar's Well), a youth stole forth from the wood and shot the boar dead, after which he cut out its tongue, and hastened to the King to claim the reward. After he had gone another person found the carcass, and, having cut off the head, also set off to claim the reward. The impostor arrived at court first, and the reward was just about to be conferred upon him when the rightful claimant appeared bearing the boar's tongue; and the head being found to be wanting that organ, the cheat received well-merited punishment, and the real hero was handsomely recompensed. This legend forms the subject of the Bradford coat of arms.

Little is known of the share taken by Bradford in the Wars of the Roses, except that Robert Bolling, of Bolling Hall, a sketch of which we give, fought for the Lancastrians at Towton, and for this was attainted and lost his estates, which were, however, subsequently restored to him. Bolling Hall is a very ancient structure to the south of Bradford. The date of its erection is not clearly ascertainable, but it is estimated that the oldest portion of it (the western tower) has overlooked Bradford during at least 500 years. A host of historic memories are conjured up by an inspection of it, and it still contains several very antique paintings and a beautifully carved ceiling. As a matter of course, there are a host of legends attached to the place, and we refer to one of these in another portion of this article. The Bolling family, who were the ancient owners of the manor of Bolling, are mentioned so far back as the reign of Henry III. They held the manor till the reign of Henry VII., when it passed, by marriage, into the hands of the Tempestes, one of whom, shortly before the accession of Charles II., staked the hall and estates at a game of "put," and lost all.

Coming to the time of Henry VIII., we find Bradford described by Leland as a "pratty quicke market toun," and, he adds, "it standith much by clothing." This refers no doubt to the woollen trade, which had made some progress; but the worsted trade, for which Bradford was to become more celebrated, was as yet confined to Norwich. Shoemaking seems to have been one of the most prominent handicrafts in the town at that period.

In the time of the Stuarts, Bradford unfortunately became embroiled in the civil war. A number of the King's troops, who were quartered in Bradford, committed many cruelties, and after they were withdrawn, the men of Bradford began in a rude way to fortify their town. The Royalists heard of this, and 600 or 700 of them marched towards Bradford. They were defeated and driven back towards Leeds by about 300 Bradfordsians. Sir William Savile then marched upon the town with a large force. The chief scene of action was in the neighbourhood of the Parish Church, around the steeple of which, to protect it from the shot of the Royalists, the townsmen hung sheets of wool. They also armed themselves with clubs, scythes, spits, and other rude weapons, and, eventually, after a fight lasting eight hours, again drove the Royalists back. Shortly after this, Sir Thomas Fairfax, who had a force of about 800 foot and sixty horse under him, was completely defeated at Bradford by the Royalist troops (under the command of the Earl of Newcastle), who took Lady Fairfax prisoner, but shortly afterwards restored her to her husband. The Earl of Newcastle, now having the town at his mercy, is said to have ordered his men to "kill all man, woman, or child, in the town;" but this is probably incorrect, as no such threat was ever carried out. There is a tradition that a supernatural vision appeared to the Earl, as he lay asleep at Bolling Hall, and importuned him with these words:—"Pity poor Bradford! Pity poor Bradford!" until the Earl revoked his former order. The Parish Church, which is so prominently connected with these events, is the same as that now existing, and of which we give a sketch. It was finished in 1458, and stands, as we have said, on the site of an old Norman church. It is a very fine example of the ecclesiastical architecture of the period. The interior has been much improved during late years, and contains many interesting monuments, among which is a beautiful piece of sculpture by Flaxman.

Around the church are a number of ancient buildings, some of which our Artist has delineated. These sketches have an additional value attaching to them from the fact that some of the buildings have been removed to make way for Corporation improvements, since the drawings were executed. Among these is the Old Church Steps Inn, an ancient structure which possessed a very quaint, old bar-parlour. A striking contrast is afforded by the juxtaposition of some of these ancient buildings with the palatial modern warehouses which tower above them. The Paper Hall is a curious old building, which stands at a short distance above the parish church. We have not been able to discover by whom it was built, or how its name was derived, but it is worthy of mention as being the building where, in 1794, the first spinning-machines used in Bradford were set up. It was, no doubt, a family mansion originally. Over the front entrance the date 1648 appears. The worsted trade began to drift from Norwich to Bradford towards the end of the seventeenth century, but it was not till the middle of the eighteenth that it grew to any dimensions. At the latter period, however, the calimanco and camlet trades were thoroughly established, and thenceforward Bradford took the lead in this branch of manufacture.

The most interesting portion of the commercial history of Bradford had now begun; and the rise of the town was extremely rapid. At first "stuff-makers" used to sell their pieces in the room of an inn; but in 1773 a "Piece Hall" was erected, and this, with an addition which was afterwards made to it, afforded room for 258 stands. At this time the Bradfordsians were a very simple, thrifty, and energetic race, who worked quietly and steadily, and with but little regard for anything save the peace and well-being of their little town. In 1776 the Leeds and Liverpool Canal was constructed, and greatly enhanced the prosperity of the town, and, not long afterwards, the Bowling and Low Moor Iron Companies, which afterwards became celebrated throughout the whole country, and which have materially contributed to the success of the town, were established. In 1793 Mr. Buckley, a local manufacturer, proposed to introduce steam-power into a Bradford worsted factory, but the opposition he met with was so determined that he removed elsewhere. It may be noted that there were already at Addingham, Ilkley, and other places, several worsted mills, but Bradford, which was to benefit so largely by the use of steam-power, resisted its introduction most strenuously, and some of the men who were at first the bitterest opponents of the new power afterwards made large fortunes by its use. After Mr. Buckley's venture, Mr. James Garnett, the founder of the present firm of Garnett and Co., in 1794 set up a couple of spinning-machines in the Paper Hall, as previously mentioned, and a gentleman named Ramsbottom introduced the first combing-machine into the town; but this was unsuccessful at the time. After some opposition, Messrs. Ramsbottom, Swaine, and Murgatroyd erected a mill, which was completed in the year 1800, and supplied it with an engine of 15-horse power. After this a number of mills were erected by different persons, but the spinning-machines only were worked by them, for power-looms were not introduced into the worsted trade till nearly a quarter of a century afterwards. At the beginning of this century, the population of Bradford was 14,000 or 15,000; at the last Census it was stated at 194,491; but several townships have recently been added to the borough, which will give a large increase. In 1800 the average number of pieces exposed for sale in the Piece Hall was 3000, and in a few years this number was more than trebled. The population began to increase amazingly, and mills rose in all directions. In 1822 a Mr. James Warbrick had a power-loom put together secretly in a mill near Bradford. This was discovered and destroyed by a mob. Messrs. Horsfall shortly afterwards set up several power-looms in their mill in North Wing, and the result was a riot, in which two of the mob were shot dead and many were wounded. From this time the manufacturers were unmolested, and during the next few years the trade of the town increased in a manner which is simply marvellous. Machinery was introduced in large quantities, the demand for stuff goods seemed to increase with the power of supply, and the energy of the Bradford manufacturers appeared to carry all before it. In 1827 Platt and Collier's combing-machines were set up in the town, but they were very imperfect, and it was reserved for Heilmann, Lister, and Donisthorpe, in after years, to bring this part of the business to perfection. About this time merinos and other fine stuff goods came to be largely manufactured in Bradford, spinners began to export large quantities of yarn, and Australian wools first came into use in connection with the worsted trade.

The general improvement of the town was as remarkable as its commercial progress. Many banking establishments soon sprung into existence; the town was lighted with gas, instead of oil, as heretofore; an Exchange, now used as the Post Office, was opened; and places of worship were multiplied. In 1832, by the "Reform Bill," Bradford became entitled to the privilege of returning two members to Parliament. The Jacquard engine came into use, and the "screw-gill" began to be applied to the worsted-spinning machinery of the district about 1834. Then Mr. (afterwards Sir) Titus Salt, of whom more hereafter, made his wonderful discovery with regard to alpaca; mohair came into vogue, and the use of cotton warps gave a great impetus to the worsted manufacture. Not long afterwards the combing-machines of Messrs. Heilmann, Lister, Donisthorpe, and Noble gave the deathblow to hand-combing; and Bradford became established as the capital of the worsted trade, and its industrial progress was wonderful from the year 1830 to the present day.

It was not till the year 1846 that Bradford derived the advantages of the railway system; but the town now has two stations, and railway facilities commensurate with its importance and activity. Bradford was incorporated in 1847.

Some of the public buildings which have been erected during the last few years must be particularly noticed. St. George's Hall, the subject of one of our illustrations, was built in 1853, and is chiefly used for public meetings, concerts, &c. It is capable of holding 3328 persons, and is a very handsome and substantial structure. The Town-hall, which appears in the background of the sketch of Market-street, cost upwards of £100,000, and was opened in 1873. The Exchange, the tower of which is seen to the right of the same sketch, was opened in 1867. The Church Literary Institute, the Covered Market, and the Free Library are all new and imposing structures; and many other magnificent public buildings, churches, warehouses, mills, schools, hospitals, banks, hotels, and theatres have been erected during recent years. Numerous social and political clubs, and a goodly number of charitable institutions exist in the town. One of the latest marks of progress is the laying down of tramways. The town is adorned with four statues—those of Sir Robert Peel, Sir Titus Salt, Mr. Richard Oastler, and Mr. S. C. Lister.

In 1871, a new Mechanics' Institute, built at a cost of £32,500, was opened, in place of one which had existed since 1839. It is in connection with this admirable institution that the new Technical School, which was opened yesterday by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, has been founded. In 1877 the council of the Mechanics' Institute considered the advisability of establishing a school for the purpose of giving technical instruction to those engaged in the various branches of the textile industry, of which Bradford is the centre. By the co-operation of the Bradford Chamber of Commerce this scheme was carried into effect; gifts of machinery were not wanting, and in March, 1878, the Technical School was formally opened by the president, Mr. Henry Mitchell, a local gentleman, whose efforts on behalf of the school cannot be too highly spoken of. The school became such a success that the accommodation afforded by the Mechanics' Institute was soon found to be insufficient, and the building of the magnificent establishment, which is shortly to be opened, was then discussed. Generous offers of aid poured in, and the result is a splendid erection, which has cost upwards of £30,000, and which will provide technical education in every branch connected with the trade of Bradford.

A staff of duly qualified masters will be constantly engaged in teaching day and evening classes. Amongst other advantages, exhibitions from the Board and other elementary schools will be provided. The sum for the carrying out of this splendid project has been provided by donations from the merchants and manufacturers of the district, and by a grant from the Clothworkers' Company. After the building has been opened, there will be held in it a grand fine-art and industrial exhibition, which, from the very extensive list of exhibitors and the magnitude of the preparations, is expected to be one of the most important shows of the kind ever seen in the provinces. To afford a greater amount of room for the visitors at the opening ceremony, and for the better convenience of exhibitors, two local gentlemen—Messrs. Henry Mitchell and George Hodgson—have, at their own expense, caused an annexe, which will cost about £1500, to be erected. It would require a separate article to do anything like justice to the Technical School building alone. It has a frontage of 160 feet to Great Horton-road, and a depth of 240 feet along Carlton-place. It contains a beautifully proportioned Public Hall (adaptable to dramatic purposes, and capable of seating 800 persons), a museum, chemical and dyeing laboratories, a science lecture-hall, a council-chamber, a library and reading-room, a mechanics' workshop; weaving, spinning, and drawing sheds; and, amongst others, art, painting, students' instructors', secretary's, chemical, "balance," dyeing, cloak, ante, curator's, and class rooms. Everything is on the most lavish and complete scale, and there is no modern improvement which has not been introduced.

Bradford possesses no less than four public parks, but the most fashionable of these is Lister or Manningham Park. It was purchased from Mr. S. C. Lister for a merely nominal sum, and a statue erected in honour of Mr. Lister now stands near the principal gate. The Hall was, until it became Corporation property, the seat of the Listers, who are an ancient Yorkshire family. Mr. S. C. Lister, instead of leading a life of luxurious idleness, as he might have done, embarked in business pursuits at an early age, and has devoted most of his life to the invention of machinery. To him the credit of having invented the combing-machine is, in a great measure, due; and, after the perfecting of that machine, he turned his attention to the utilisation of "silk waste," which had previously been regarded as rubbish. With this object in view, Mr. Lister spent many years of his life and over £300,000 in money before he received a single penny in return. He triumphed in the end, and at his gigantic factory, the chimney of which can be seen in the Manningham Hall sketch, vast quantities of silk, plush, and velvet are manufactured. The chimney is eighty-three yards in height, and absorbed 7000 tons of material in construction. It is considered to be the sturdiest and handsomest in England, and it is a prominent feature for miles round.

Saltair is a perfectly model town, situated on the banks of the Aire, about four miles from Bradford. It was founded by Sir Titus Salt, who discovered the use of the Alpaca wool, and erected one of the most celebrated factories in the world at Saltair, which derives its name from its founder and the river upon which it is built. Sir Titus Salt built a handsome Congregational Chapel, dwellings for about 4000 work-people, a noble Club and Institute, schools, infirmary, almshouses, &c., entirely at his own expense. Mr. Titus Salt, one of the sons of the founder of Saltair, has, during the present week, been entertaining the Royal party at Milner Field, a modern mansion, very beautifully situated, and overlooking the valley of the Aire. Shipley Old Hall is at Shipley, a thriving place between Bradford and Saltair. There is no history worth repeating in connection with this building, but it is very quaint, and bears date 1593. Shipley Glen is a romantic and picturesque spot near Saltair, and is annually visited by thousands of people from the towns adjacent. The trade of Bradford, in consequence of the operation of foreign protective tariffs and other causes, has for some time been much depressed; but we hope to see a revival of its former prosperity.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPT.

There has been no renewal of the ferocious riots and attacks upon Europeans in the city of Alexandria. The Egyptian troops now collected in great force there have been ordered by Arabi Pasha, who is again formally appointed Minister of War, to prevent any further outbreak. Dervish Pasha, the Turkish Special Commissioner, seems to be acting with the military dictator; and the Khedive, sojourning at his marine palace of Ras-et-tin, on the seashore of Alexandria, exerts no real governing authority in Egypt. He has been compelled to accept a new Ministry, of which Ragheb Pasha and Ahmed Rashid are the chiefs, known to be hostile to the Anglo-French Control, but supposed to be regarded with favour by Germany and Austria. It is not now expected that Turkish troops will immediately be sent to put down the revolt and to restore the authority of the Khedive. The Sultan, through his Ministry at Constantinople, and by the voice of Said Pasha, has declined to take part in the proposed Conference of the European Powers. This will be held, notwithstanding, in the course of two or three days; the invitation of England and France having been accepted by Germany, Austria, Russia, and Italy, whose representatives meet at Constantinople. Their deliberations will be strictly confined to the Egyptian Government question; to the "maintenance of all established rights in Egypt, with due regard to the reasonable development of the institutions of that country." The neutralisation of the Suez Canal, it was stated in our Parliament on Monday, will not come within the limits of the business to be settled by this Conference of the European Powers.

In the meantime, the state of Egypt is most deplorable, and disastrous to all European interests there. Many thousands of the foreign residents have left the country, sacrificing their property and occupations, and the extensive works carried on with English capital for the material improvement of Egypt. The poorer classes in Alexandria, who were mainly dependent on its commerce and the custom of foreigners, have begun to suffer extreme distress, and it is feared that this may now excite fresh disturbances of the peace in that large city. We present some Views of Alexandria, from the sea and from Rameh, the Grand Square, the Rosetta Gate, the Old Port, the banks of the Mahmoudieh Canal, the suburb of Karmous, and the windmills at Meks; with Sketches, by our Special Artist, of some ordinary figures in the city streets, the Arab shoe-black, the night watchman, the porter, the water-carrier, the coffee-seller, the vender of sweetmeats, and others. The following description of Alexandria is extracted from a recently published volume on "Egypt," by Mr. Stanley Lane Poole, one of Messrs. Sampson Low and Co.'s instructive series, "Foreign Countries and English Colonies:—"

"Alexandria is built partly on the middle of the strip of land which separates Lake Marcotis from the sea, and partly on the mole (the Heptastadion) which connects the mainland with the island of Pharos, whereon once stood the beacon which was reckoned among the wonders of the world. There is now a good twenty-second revolving light, 180 ft. above the sea-level. The island and mole divide the bay into two portions, and provide Alexandria with two harbours. The western and smaller, called Eunostos by the ancient Greeks, is one of the finest ports in the Mediterranean, both naturally and by reason of the engineering works carried out in recent years. But the so-called New Harbour, to the east of the Pharos, is shallow and choked by the accumulation of sand, which the eastward current, that washes the length of the North Coast of Africa, piles up in shoals along the Egyptian shore. The Old Port of Alexandria, situated westward of all the deposit of the Nile, and protected from any reflux by the great mole and island of Pharos, and by a breakwater from the wash of the coast current, forms a splendid harbour for vessels of all draught. It has but one drawback, in the complicated reef at its entrance, which is so intricate of passage that ships are sometimes compelled to wait outside in rough weather. The natural advantages of the port, with the artificial protection by Alexander's mole, have been considerably improved by the recent works. The principal addition is a magnificent breakwater running for nearly two miles from near the west point of the island of Pharos, with a bend towards the mainland, and a lighthouse at the southern end. It was built by English engineers in 1871-3, and is constructed of more than 26,000 masses of concrete, each weighing twenty tons, faced on the outside with natural slabs from the neighbouring quarries of Meks, and forming a broad barrier 19 ft. wide, standing 10 ft. above the sea-level at low tide. The well-protected haven, of a depth of 20 ft. to 60 ft., with an area of 1800 acres, thus formed, is supplemented by an inner and even more secure port of 475 acres, with a depth of 27 ft., separated from the outer harbour, and from whatever sea penetrates to it, by a mole nearly 1000 yards long and 10 ft. wide, which juts out from the mainland and forms the Horticultural Gardens, South Kensington. Princess Mary of Cambridge, Duchess of Teck, presided at the principal stall, and among other stall-holders were the Dowager Marchioness of Waterford, the Marchioness of Tweeddale, Marchioness of Ormonde, Countess Fitzwilliam, Countess Cowper, Countess of Mayo, Countess of Kenmare, Countess of Bective, Lady Colin Campbell, Viscountess Downe, Lady Inchiquin, Viscountess Castlereagh, Lady Harlech, Lady Fitzhardinge, and Lady Bateson. The attendance was very large. In the afternoon the Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by Princess Christian and the Duke of Teck, visited the bazaar and made numerous purchases. The bazaar on the 16th may be regarded as one of the most successful fancy fairs ever held in the metropolis. On the first day the sum realised at the various stalls is said to have amounted to £2000. The committee reckoned upon being able to hand over a sum of something like £3500 to the distressed ladies. The weather being as bright on the second as on the opening day, the attendance was equally numerous, and the business done brisk and extraordinarily profitable. Again the Princess Mary, Duchess of Teck, presided at the principal stall, and was busy from the opening to the close in disposing of her multifarious wares, at fabulous prices.

The Duke of Cambridge presided yesterday week, at Willis's Rooms, at the dinner in aid of the funds of the National Hospital for Diseases of the Heart and Paralysis, the claims of which upon public support were well advanced by his Royal Highness in proposing the toast of the evening. The collection amounted to about £500.

Under the presidency of Lord Shaftesbury, the forty-seventh annual meeting of the Indigent Blind Visiting Society was held yesterday week at 37, Grosvenor-square. Mr. W. C. Lester, secretary, read the report, which stated that the number of blind being visited is 781. Mrs. T. R. Armitage had given a donation of £1200 towards providing pensions. Dr. Armitage had also given £1000 to provide that those placed by him on the society should not cease to receive relief after his death. The endowment of the Samaritan Fund had been augmented by a further donation of about £2000 from Dr. Armitage, and had now been established on a secure basis. The number of blind persons receiving education at the society's day classes is 261, those attending at the Sunday Bible-classes 150. The relief given during the year, including £892 from the Samaritan Fund, amounted to £2270. Lord Shaftesbury described the origin of the society, and expressed his heartfelt pleasure at seeing it working so prosperously in the forty-seventh year of its existence.

Sir Thomas Brassey, M.P., presided last Saturday at the twentieth annual meeting of the members and friends of the Working Men's Club Union in the College Hall, Westminster Abbey. The annual report showed that the total number of clubs on the register of the union is 839, with a membership of about 126,000 persons. During the year the receipts amounted to £799 and the disbursements to £748.

Lord Enfield presided at the festival dinner in aid of the funds of the West London Hospital last Saturday evening at Willis's Rooms. Donations were announced to the amount of between £900 and £1000.

The Lady Mayoress opened a bazaar at the Athenæum, Camden-road, on Monday afternoon, on behalf of the North-west London Hospital, Kentish Town-road, an institution which has done good work in that neighbourhood. The bazaar remained open on Tuesday and Wednesday, and there were various attractions each day.

The annual Royal Caledonian Fancy-Dress Ball, for the benefit of the Royal Caledonian Asylum and the Royal Scottish Hospital, under the immediate patronage of her Majesty, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and other members of the Royal family, took place at Willis's Rooms on Monday night, and was a great success.

A fancy bazaar and sale of needlework (contributed from all parts of the world) was held on Wednesday and Thursday at the Duke of Wellington's Riding School, in aid of the funds of the Princess Louise Home. The bazaar was opened by the Lady Mayoress. The band of the Royal Artillery played at short intervals throughout the two days.

A sale of embroideries from the Royal School of Art Needlework took place at Grosvenor House on Tuesday and Wednesday, under the immediate patronage of Princess Christian, the president of the school.

A performance in aid of the funds of the Railway Benevolent Institution will be given by the Connaught Dramatic Club, under distinguished patronage, this (Saturday) evening, at St. George's Hall, Langham-place.

The Printers' Festival of 1882 is to be held at the Alexandra Palace, in aid of the Building Fund of the London Society of Compositors, to-day (Saturday), under the patronage of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, and the principal members of the trade.

A Loan Exhibition of unusual interest is promised for next Tuesday and following days, at Crescent House, Fulham-road; on behalf of the Working Ladies' Guild. The old-fashioned house, which has been decorated throughout by Mr. Morris, will contain art treasures and historic relics (many never before exhibited) from the collections of the Earls of Warwick, Denbigh, and Waldegrave, the Countess of Caledon, Lady Eastlake, Mr. Gambier Parry, Mr. Legh, of Lyme, and others. A sale of art needlework by members of the Guild and by distressed Irish gentlewomen will also take place.

The anniversary festival of the Licensed Victuallers' School is appointed to be held at the Crystal Palace next Tuesday, under the presidency of Mr. Thomas W. Boord, M.P. The school merits a liberal measure of support, as it wholly maintains, clothes, and educates upwards of 200 poor children, at an annual cost of £7000.

The Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex will support Prince Leopold (Duke of Albany) at the opening of the new hospital in Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, next Thursday, St. Peter's Day. The Bishop of St. Albans will officiate at the service.

A dramatic matinee will take place at Willis's Rooms, on Tuesday, July 4, in aid of the Royal Hospital for Children and Women, Waterloo-bridge-road, under the patronage of the Duchess of Connaught, the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, and a list of distinguished ladies patronesses. Mr. Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. J. L. Toole, Mr. G. A. Sala and others have promised their assistance.

The managers of the East London Mission, 263, Cable-street, St. George's, propose to take 600 poorest children from Ratcliffe and Limbhouse Fields for a day's country trip. Funds may be sent to Mr. G. Hopkins, Hon. Superintendent, Mission Hall, 263, Cable-street, St. George's.

Upwards of 6000 Jewish emigrants have been already assisted by the Mansion House committee of the fund for aiding persecuted Jews.

A lawn-tennis tournament has been held this week at the Agricultural Hall, for the benefit of the London Fever Hospital and the Scarlet Fever Convalescent Home.

PLAN OF ALEXANDRIA.

string of the bow marked out by the Heptastadion and island of Pharos, while along the curve extend the new quays, arsenals, and stores, and, on the island, the palace of Ras-et-tin.

"The founder of the dynasty now ruling Egypt, the famous Mohammed Ali, was the rejuvenator of Alexandria. It was he who erected the massive fortifications which protect the coast, improved the harbours, and restored the city to something of its old commercial importance, by putting it once more into communication with the Nile, through the Mahmoudieh Canal, which he caused to be dug, in 1819, by the forced labour of 250,000 peasants, of whom 20,000 died from heat and fever and starvation. The ex-Khedive, Ismael Pasha, energetically, if extravagantly, carried out some of the unfinished projects of his grandfather; and the prosperous port of Alexandria, with its 200,000 inhabitants, a quarter of whom are Europeans, owes as much to his reckless taste for improvements as Cairo and the upper country have lost. Most of the Nile produce for export finds its way through the Mahmoudieh Canal; and the stimulus to the Egyptian cotton trade, imparted by the American Civil War, was felt in all its advantage at Alexandria.

"With the exception of the fine column of red granite erected by the Prefect Pompeius to the Emperor Diocletian (which is commonly known as 'Pompey's Pillar,' and attributed to Caesar's great rival), of which the shaft is a monolith 67 ft. high, brought from the Cataracts, probably an obelisk rounded, the remains of the ancient city are of slight consequence. The famous Serapeum, Museum, and Library, have long since disappeared; and even the two obelisks, which Cleopatra stole from the Temple of the Sun at Heliopolis, have been taken away. The one, after lying prone for centuries on the spot where it fell, has been brought to London, and now forms an incongruous and insignificant appendage to the Victoria Embankment; the other relieves the monotony of an avenue at New York. The modern buildings are of the ordinary mercantile character, except the English church, which shows original design in its architecture. There are a Coptic convent, Greek and Latin churches, a well-managed Hospital of German Deaconesses, another nursed by Sisters of the Order of St. Vincent de Paul, besides a Government Hospital and a Greek Hospital. At the Theatre, Italian operas take turn with French plays. The whole city wears the aspect of an Oriental port where most of the business is done by Europeans; everywhere a mixture of Eastern gaud and squalor with European wealth and fashions."

We shall give further Views and Sketches of Alexandria next week. It is distant from Cairo five hours' journey by railway. In our Artist's Sketch of the view of Alexandria from Ramleh, on the seashore east of the city, there is the tomb of a famous Sheikh in the foreground, with an Arab sitting to muse beside it.

AGRICULTURAL ITEMS.

At the half-yearly rent audit on the Longton and Newbold estates of Earl Manvers, last week, a return of 20 per cent was made to the tenants. The Marquis of Ailesbury has allowed his farm tenants 20 per cent reduction in their rentals.

The Royal Cornwall Agricultural Show opened on the 14th inst. at Launceston, and was an excellent show, attended by about 4000 people. Lord Falmouth and Sir William Williams were the principal winners in Devon cattle, and Messrs. Hosken, of Hayle, in shorthorns. The Mayor of Launceston, Mr. Pethybridge, entertained the president, Mr. Robins Bolitho, and the council of the association at luncheon. Mr. Brydges Williams, M.P., attended.

A special meeting of the Council of the Royal Counties

Agricultural Society was held at the Townhall, Basingstoke, on the 14th inst. The subject of pleuro-pneumonia at Brighton was fully discussed, and it was the unanimous opinion of the meeting that, in consequence of the prompt action taken by the local authorities, no risk would be incurred, and it was resolved that the show should be held on the 22nd inst. and three following days, as already arranged.

The Mound Show at Peterborough, held in connection with that of the Agricultural Society, was opened on the 15th inst., seventeen packs being represented. It was under the patronage of the Prince of Wales and the presidency of Earl Spencer, K.G. In class 1, for unentered dog-hounds pupped since Dec. 1, 1880, there were eighteen entries, the first prize for the best couple going to the Fitzwilliam selections, and second honours to the Oakley pack. In succeeding competitions, with the exception of the newly-introduced fox-terrier classes, the Fitzwilliam and Oakley representatives carried all before them.

BENEVOLENCE AND SELF-HELP.

Numerous anniversary meetings and bazaars for charitable purposes continue to be held.

The Prince of Wales presided on the 14th inst. at the dinner of the London Fever Hospital, which was held at Willis's Rooms, the company numbering about 170. His Royal Highness bore a high testimony to the efficient condition and great usefulness of the hospital, upon the evidence of Sir William Gull, who had recently paid it a visit. The result of the appeal was a contribution of £4278 to the funds of the institution, including a hundred guineas from the Prince of Wales and £50 from the Queen.

On the same day the Duchess of Teck presented the prizes and certificates to the successful candidates in the third competitive examination, instituted by the Ladies' Sanitary Association, on Domestic Sanitation. Lord Aberdare presided. The first three prizes were awarded respectively to Miss Lucy Taylor, Miss Mary Jane Russell, and Mrs. Edward Ridge.

Earl Cairns was among the party of visitors who inspected the Waspit training-ship on the 14th inst., and he urged the lads to maintain the great traditions of the Marine Society, which had sent 60,000 boys to sea in the Royal Navy and merchant service. The Countess of Romney presented the prizes gained by the lads in their competitions.

The annual festival of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association was held in the evening at the Star and Garter Hotel, Richmond—Mr. F. T. Bircham in the chair; and subscriptions amounting to £900 were announced.

At the meeting of the Bristol Town Council on the 15th inst., a communication was received from Sir Greville Smythe offering to the citizens a pleasure park of twenty-two acres, on the borders of the crowded parish of Bedminster, and adjoining his residential estate of Ashton Court.

A meeting on behalf of the guarantee fund of the Royal Victoria Music-Hall was held on the 15th at Earl Brownlow's residence, at which his Lordship presided. It was stated that the music-hall was being carried on at a considerable loss, and on the motion of the Duke of Westminster a resolution was carried pledging the meeting to continue to support the committee in their undertaking.—On Monday last a meeting was held at the Mansion House for the like purpose. The Lord Mayor and Cardinal Manning presided successively; and the meeting was addressed by them and by Lord Mount-Temple, the Rev. J. W. Horsley, Canon Wilberforce, Mr. Mocatta, Mr. S. Morley, M.P., and Canon Barker.

A bazaar in aid of the funds being raised for the relief of distressed Irish ladies was opened on the 15th at the

OBITUARY.

SIR WILLIAM BROWN, BART.

Sir William Brown, ninth Baronet, of Colstoun, county Haddington, died on the 10th inst., at Irving St. Dumfries, in his seventy-eight year. He was born in July, 1804, the third son of Sir James Brown, seventh Baronet, by Marion, his wife, eldest daughter of Mr. Robert Henderson, of Clough-head, and was descended from a very ancient Scottish family. He succeeded to the baronetcy at his eldest brother's death in December, 1858. Sir William received his education at Edinburgh University, and was Dean of Faculty, Dumfriesshire. He married, July 18, 1843, Elizabeth, second daughter of Mr. John Smith, of Drongan, county Ayr, and had four sons and six daughters. He is succeeded by the eldest surviving son, now Sir William Brown, tenth Baronet, born 1843. His eldest daughter, Eleanor Gale, wife of Mr. George Augustus Ibbetson, died last month.

ADMIRAL HALL, C.B.

Vice-Admiral Robert Hall, C.B., late Naval Secretary to the Admiralty, died suddenly on the 11th inst., at his residence, 28, Craven-hill-gardens, aged sixty-four. He was born in 1817, the son of Commodore Sir Robert Hall, C.B., and, entering the Royal Navy in 1833, became successively Commander in 1852, Captain in 1855, retired Rear-Admiral in 1873, and Vice-Admiral in 1878. During the Russian War, 1854, he served in the Baltic and the Black Sea, and had received the Baltic, Crimean, and Turkish medals. Subsequently he was successively private secretary to the Duke of Somerset (First Lord of the Admiralty) 1863 to 1866, Superintendent of Pembroke Dockyard 1866 to 1871, A.D.C. to the Queen from 1869 to 1872, third Lord of the Admiralty and Controller of the Navy 1871 to 1872, and from the last-named year till lately Naval Secretary to the Admiralty. The decoration of C.B. was conferred on him in 1869. The Admiral married, in 1844, Teresa, daughter of Mr. Thomas Tunstall, of Preston-le-Skerne, Durham.

We have also to record the deaths of—

The Rev. Nicholas William Gibson, Senior Canon residentiary of Manchester, on the 18th inst.

Dr. John Gordon, late her Majesty's Inspector of Schools, in Edinburgh on the 17th inst., at the age of eighty-five.

The Rev. Hugh George Robinson, M.A., Prebendary of York, and one of her Majesty's Charity Commissioners, on the 16th inst., at Brighton, in the sixty-third year of his age.

Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Herbert, late of the Kerry Militia, on the 5th inst., at the Muckross Hotel, Killarney, aged sixty-two. He was third son of the Rev. Arthur Herbert, Rector of Castle Island, in the county of Kerry, and brother of Mr. Henry Herbert, of Cahirmane, in that county.

Mr. R. Waller, well known in Yorkshire as a portrait painter. He was one of the originators of the Leeds Society of Artists, and was its president from the foundation of the society. He was also a prominent member of the Yorkshire Fine Art Society.

Mr. John Robert Daniel-Tyssen, D.L., F.S.A., on the 11th inst., at Lower Rock Gardens, Brighton, in his seventy-seventh year. He was third son of Mr. William George Daniel-Tyssen, of Foley House, Kent; Hackney, Middlesex, &c.; and was uncle of Mr. Tyssen-Amherst, M.P., of Diddington Hall, Norfolk, and next brother of Captain Daniel-Tyssen, whose death we also record in this column.

Lady Charles Bertie-Percy, on the 9th inst., at Guy's Cliffe, near Warwick, aged seventy-seven. Her Ladyship was Anne Caroline, granddaughter and heir of Bertie Bertie-Greathed, of Guy's Cliffe, and was married, March 20, 1822, to Lord Charles Percy, youngest brother of George, fifth Duke of Northumberland, father of the present Duke. Lord Charles Percy assumed the prefix surname of Bertie in 1826, and died Oct. 11, 1870, leaving an only daughter.

Captain Charles Amherst Daniel-Tyssen, formerly King's Dragoon Guards, on the 10th inst., at Northwold, in Norfolk, in his seventy-ninth year. He was second son of Mr. William George Daniel, of Foley House, Kent (who assumed the additional name of Tyssen), by Amelia, his wife, daughter of Mr. John Amherst, and was uncle of Mr. Tyssen-Amherst, M.P., of Diddington Hall, Norfolk.

The Government have given the National Gallery of Ireland an extra grant of £1000 to enable the director to make purchases at the sale of the Hamilton pictures.

Mr. William O'Brien, Q.C., has been appointed a Justice of the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Justice (Ireland), in the room of Mr. Justice Lawson, removed to the Queen's Bench to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Lord Fitzgerald.

In Hyde Park on Saturday last the Coaching Club had its second meet this season. Twenty-six teams came out, amid the manifest interest of a numerous and brilliant gathering. The members of the Four-in-Hand Club met on the Parade in St. James's Park on Thursday evening.

A company has been founded at Sheffield, with a capital of £20,000, to establish zoological and pleasure gardens at Totley, in Derbyshire, five miles from Sheffield. The company has acquired eleven acres of ground. The promoters state that the Midland Company contemplate constructing at an early date a line of railway from Sheffield to Hassop.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

Twelve months (including Christmas Number), £1 9s. 3d.
Six months, 14s. Christmas Half-Year, 15s. 3d.
Three months, 7s. Christmas Quarter, 8s. 3d.

Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6d. for each Number, paid in advance.

ABROAD.

The yearly subscription abroad is 36s. 4d. (on thin paper, 32s.), with the following exceptions:—

To Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Mozambique, Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, 41s. (thin paper, 34s.)
To Madagascar (except St. Mary), 46s. (on thin paper, 36s. 4d.)

Subscribers are specially advised to order the thick paper edition, the appearance of the engravings in the thin paper copies being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publishing Office, 198, Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London; or by Post-Office Order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, to George C. Leighton, of 198, Strand, London.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

B R (Weymouth).—A move is not completed until the player's hand has left the piece moved. In the case you describe, therefore, the player can move the piece to any square to which it can legally move. The announcement of "check" does not oblige a player to check.

H E W (Oxford).—The K and Q win against K, B, and Kt, easily; but, with the Pawns supporting and supported by the minor pieces, as in your position, we think the game should be drawn.

F O N H (Liverpool).—Your analysis of No. 1987 is, of course, correct. As the author is a townsman of yours, we shall send your diagram to him.

J D (Dublin).—We regret exceedingly your retirement from our list of solvers, and shall hope to hear from you when the pressure upon your time has abated.

J M S (Liverpool).—It is not easy to define precisely in what consists a problem-composer's "reward." Probably, the gratification of an instinct for taking trouble. We do not examine problems unless they are accompanied by the author's solutions.

M H (Liverpool).—Black's reply to 1. P to Q 4th is 1. P takes P en passant (ch).

H E B (Vienna).—Thanks to the courtesy of the committee of the Congress and of our friends at Vienna, we are well supplied with games. Yours appear below.

PROBLEMS received, with thanks, from G M S (Cambridge), S I (Stepney), L M S (Aldgate), J S M K (Ilkley), and T R D (Chertsey).

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1986 received from Senex Solitarius and W W Hill (Riga).

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1987 received from W W Hill (Riga), P S Shenale, Indagator, and John Perkins.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1988 received from W W Hill (Riga), B H G (Salisbury), Indagator, Tiral, W W Nicholson, Black Knight, P S Shenale, F F (Brussels), D Rowland (Barris), Donald Mackay, Senex Solitarius, and John Perkins.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1989 received from H B, Alpha, Shadforth, Aaron Harper, A M Porter, H Springthorpe, Ben Nevis, A Wigmore, B R Wood, F Ferris, W Hillier, J G Antee, S Lowndes, E Casella (Paris), D W Kell, F G Parloe, H Blacklock, A W Scrutton, Otto Fulder (Ghent), M O'Halloran, L Sharswood, Ernest Sharswood, C W Milson, S Bullen, Jupiter Junior, L L Greenaway, T H Hoidron, G W Law, H Reeve, N H Mullen, H Lucas, R Tweddell, R J Vines, G Seymour, E Elsbury, Bosworth, James Dobson, E London, Shrapnel, F Johnston, A R Street, Jumbo, P S Shenale, F J Wallis, Cant, E J Winter Wood, Pievha, Sudbury (Suffolk), C W Croxley, Norman Rumbelow, Dr F St, Donald Mackay, Hereward, Antonio F Mosley, R H Brooks, Harry Bristow, D Mayhew, W Dewse, W S Hilary, L F Beresford, N Meynell, and W Hallett.

SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEMS.

No. 1986.		No. 1997.
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q 8th	* Kt takes R	1. Kt to K 8th	K to Q 4th
2. R to R 4th (ch)	P takes R	2. P to B 4th (ch)	K moves
3. Kt to B 4th. Mate.		3. Kt or Q mates.

* The variations are obvious.

* White can also mate by 1. Q takes Kt, &c.

PROBLEM No. 2001.

By C. CALLANDER.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

THE VIENNA TOURNAMENT.

TWENTY-SIXTH ROUND.				TWENTY-NINTH ROUND.
Bird	0	Winawer	1	Bird	0	Schwarz	1
Englisch	0	Mackenzie	1	Englisch	1	Noa	0
Mason	1	Noa	0	Fleissig	0	Ware	1
Paulsen	1	Hrudy	0	Hrudy	1	Meitner	0
Schwarz	0	Weiss	0	Paulsen	1	Weiss	0
Steinitz	1	Meitner	0	Steinitz	0	Winawer	0
Tschigorin	0	Blackburne	1	Tschigorin	0	Mackenzie	1
Ware	0	Wittek	0	Mason	0	Blackburne	0
Zukertort	1	Fleissig	0	Zukertort	1	Wittek	0

TWENTY-SEVENTH ROUND.				THIRTIETH ROUND.
Fleissig	0	Noa	0	Bird	0	Wittek	1
Hrudy	0	Englisch	0	Noa	0	Mackenzie	1
Paulsen	0	Blackburne	0	Paulsen	1	Meitner	0
Ware	0	Bird	1	Schwarz	0	Winawer	1
Wittek	0	Meitner	0	Steinitz	0	Englisch	0
Weiss	0	Mackenzie	1	Tschigorin	1	Hrudy	0
Steinitz	0	Tschigorin	1	Mason	0	Fleissig	0
Winawer	0	Mason	1	Weiss	0	Blackburne	1
Zukertort	1	Schwarz	0	Zukertort	0	Mason	0

TWENTY-EIGHTH ROUND.				THIRTY-FIRST ROUND.
Hrudy	0	Mason	1	Englisch	0	Blackburne	0
Meitner	1	Fleissig	0	Hrudy	1	Fleissig	0
Paulsen	1	Bird	0	Meitner	0	Mackenzie	1
Schwarz	0	Mackenzie	1	Paulsen	1	Tschigorin	0
Steinitz	0	Weiss	0	Schwarz	0	Steinitz	1
Ware	0	Tschigorin	0	Ware	0	Winawer	1
Winawer	1	Noa	0	Weiss	1	Noa	0
Wittek	1	Englisch	0	Wittek	1	Bird	0
Zukertort	0	Blackburne	0	Zukertort	1	Bird	0

Played in the twenty-fifth round of the Vienna tournament between Messrs. BIRD and BLACKBURNE.

(Irregular Opening.)

WHITE (Mr. Bird). BLACK (Mr. Blackburne).

1. P to K 4th. The advance of this Pawn seems to us to be premature; moreover, it directly invites the attack which follows.

14. P to K Kt 4th. P takes B P

15. P takes B P. B takes P

16. P takes P. R to K 4th

17. R to K Kt sq. K to K sq

18. Kt to Kt 4th. White manoeuvres his Knights in a masterly manner. He now threatens to win the Queen by 19. Kt to B 6th (ch); and 20. Kt to B 7th (ch), &c.

19. Kt to K 3rd. Then follows 19. P to B 6th, &c.

20. Kt to K 5th. P takes Kt

21. Kt to K 3rd. Kt to K 3rd

22. Kt takes B. Kt takes B P

23. Q to K 3rd. and Black resigned.

The tournament is now rapidly drawing to a conclusion, and before these lines have been submitted to the reader the event will have named the winner. Our last report, after the twenty-fifth round had been played, showed that Herr Steinitz had taken the lead, closely followed, however, by Messrs. Mason and Winawer, with Mackenzie, Blackburne, Zukertort, and Englisch not far in the rear; but the result of the play and the scoring against absentees during the week ended the 17th inst. is that the Austrian player has been overtaken by Mackenzie and Zukertort and passed by Mason and Winawer. The following was the score of each competitor at the end of the thirty-first round, including the games to be recorded against Messrs. Fleissig and Noa, who have retired:—

Winawer, 22½; Mason, 22; Mackenzie, Steinitz, and Zukertort, 21½; Blackburne, 19½; Wittek, 18; Englisch and Paulsen, 17½; Hrudy, 16½; Weiss, 14; Schwarz, 13½; Bird and Tschigorin, 12; Meitner, 11½; Ware, 11.

We go to press with this part of the paper too early in the week for a later report; but should the contest be brought to an end in time, the final result will be found in another column.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated March 11, 1874) of Mr. James Morris, of the firm of Messrs. Morris, Prevost, and Co., formerly one of the directors of the Bank of England, and of which he was governor in 1847 and 1848, late of No. 17, Cadogan-place, and of Encombe, Sandgate, Kent, who died on the 9th ult., was proved on the 10th inst. by Augustus Prevost and Henry Vernet, the surviving executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £162,000. The testator bequeaths £10,000 each to his cousins, Frank Marcet, Sophia Romilly, Madalena Saunders, and Adelaide Rucker, and a sum of £20,000, which is to remain in the hands of his firm for a period, is also eventually to be divided between them; £10,000 to his brother-in-law, James Campbell; £15,000 to his sister-in-law, Rose Montgomery; and considerable legacies to other relatives, partners, executors, clerks, and servants. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be divided between his said four cousins.

The will (dated April 14, 1880), with a codicil (dated March 20, 1882), of Mr. Osgood Hanbury, of the firm of Messrs. Barnett, Hoares, Hanbury, and Lloyd, bankers, Lombard-street, late of Holfield Grange, Coggeshall, Essex, and of No. 5, Upper Belgrave-street, who died on the 3rd ult., was proved on the 3rd inst. by Sampson Hanbury, the brother, George Hanbury, and Edmund Smith Hanbury, the executors, the value of the personal estate being upwards of £111,000. The testator makes up the portions of each of his three daughters by his first marriage, Adeline Helen, Constance, and Marion Edith, to £15,000, and an additional sum of £5000 is to be held, upon trust, for them while unmarried; and he bequeaths to each of his children by his second marriage (if any), other than his son, Osgood Beauchamp, £15,000; to his executors, £100 each; and legacies to servants and labourers. Holfield Grange and all his real estate are devised, upon trust, for his son, Osgood Beauchamp, and the residue of the personalty is also left to him.

The will (dated Dec. 31, 1878), with a codicil (dated April 6, 1882), of Mr. Richard Blizard, late of No. 5, St. Mary's-terrace, Maida-hill, who died on April 15 last, was proved on the 22nd ult. by Mrs. Mary Blizard, the widow and sole executrix, the value of the personal estate exceeding £65,000. The testator leaves to his wife £500, all his furniture, plate, pictures, wines, and effects, and an annuity of £1000; some copyhold property to his son Richard Henry; the residue of his real and personal estate between all his children equally.

The will (dated July 6, 1880), with two codicils (dated Dec. 31, 1880, and July 4, 1881), of Mr. George Cheesman, formerly of Neckinger-road, Bermondsey, tanner and fancy leather manufacturer, but late of Holden House, Dorking, who died on the 3rd ult., was proved on the 2nd inst. by Ernest Richard Cheesman, the son, James Searle and George Slater, the acting executors, the value of the personal estate being over £51,000. The testator gives to his son Ernest Richard, £10,000; to his sons Walter Nightingale and Alfred Harold, complimentary legacies of £100 each, having given them large sums in his lifetime; upon trust for his daughter Mrs. Head, for life, £6000; upon trust for his granddaughter, Amy Edith Mary Head, on the death of her mother, £3000; upon trust for his daughter Mrs. Searle, £8000; to his grandson, Edgar Athelstan Cheesman, £3000; and numerous legacies to relatives and others. He also bequeaths £50 each to the London Orphan Asylum, Clapton; the Royal Sea Bathing Infirmary, Margate; the National Life-Boat Institution, the Boys' Home, Regent's Park-road; and the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, Queen-square, Bloomsbury. As to the residue of his property, he leaves one half upon trust for his daughter Mrs. Searle, and the other half to his son Ernest Richard.

The will (dated Aug. 22, 1878), with a codicil (dated April 13, 1882), of the Rev. Hugh Pearson, Vicar of Sonning, Berks, Canon of Windsor, and Deputy Clerk of the Closet to the Queen, who died on April 13 last, was proved on the 25th ult. by the Rev. William Henley Jervis and Edward Stanhope Pearson, the brothers, and Lord Francis Hervey, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to more than £38,000. The testator bequeaths £500 for the benefit of the parish of Sonning, to be disposed of as the Rev. Henry Golding Palmer shall in his absolute discretion think fit; and numerous legacies, many of large amount, to relatives, friends, servants, and others, including the organist, organ-blower, choir men, choir boys, church cleaner, schoolmaster, and schoolmistress at Sonning. The residue of his property he gives to his two brothers, William Henley and Edward Stanhope.

The will (dated July 16, 1880) of Miss Agnes Burton, late of Ebor House, Stamford-hill, who died on March 31 last, was proved on the 19th ult. by John Richard Tindale and Thomas Burton, the brother, the executors, the personal estate amounting to over £33,000. The testatrix, after making considerable gifts to relatives, gives the residue of her property to her brother, Thomas Burton, and her sister, Mrs. Charlotte Fisher.

The will (dated June 3, 1880) of Admiral Russell Elliott, late of Appleby Castle, Westmoreland, who died on Dec. 25 last, was proved on the 18th ult. by Rowland Nevitt Bennett and George Nevitt Bennett, the executors, the personal estate exceeding in value £24,000. The only legatees under the will are testator's son and two daughters.

The will (dated Jan. 23, 1882) of the Hon. Henry Richard Graves, third son of the second Baron Graves, and uncle of the present peer, late of No. 14, Grosvenor-street, who died on April 29 last at Cannes, France, was proved on the 24th ult. by the Hon. Mrs. Henrietta Graves, the widow, and Henry Cyril Percy Graves and William Spencer Paget Graves, the sons, the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £20,000. The testator bequeaths to his wife £500 and his furniture, plate, pictures, and household effects. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held upon trust for his wife for life; at her death he gives £3000 each to his children, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Marchi, Miss Mabel Blanche Somerset Graves, and Claude Thomas Graves; and the ultimate residue between his six younger sons.

The will (dated Jan. 31, 1882) of Mr. Peter Burrows Sharkey, late of Palace Chambers, 9, Bridge-street, Westminster, and of No. 23, Hanover-square, Parliamentary agent, who died on Feb. 1 last, was proved on the 23rd ult. by Mr. Charles Russell, Q.C., M.P., and Richard Ouseley Blake Lane, the executors, the personal estate amounting to over £12,000. After giving a few legacies, the testator leaves all the residue of his property to his two sisters, Mrs. Charlotte Spiel and Mrs. Annie Gaynor.

The late Mr. Asa Lees, of the Soho Ironworks, Oldham, has left bequests to public institutions amounting to over £40,000, including £10,000 each to Owens College, Manchester, to the Royal Albert Asylum, to the Lancashire Independent College, and to the Oldham Infirmary. Mr. Lees was founder of the great machine establishment of Asa Lees and Co., employing about 2000 hands.

VIEWS IN BRADFORD.

Stanford University Libraries

3 6105 010 104 052

072
I29
v. 8
188

STANFORD UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES STANFORD AUXILIARY LIBRARY STANFORD, CALIFORNIA 94305-6004 (415) 723-9201 All books may be recalled after 7 days
DATE DUE
DEC 17 1996

